New Play Set For March 1-7; Dowling Stars

Assignment in Judea has been chosen by the University Theatre for a premiere performance at Florida State University in the third spot on this year's playbill.

Written by Patrick Welch, the dramatic account of events surrounding the crucifixion will have six performances here instead of the usual four. Performation dates are March 1-4 and 6-7.

Tryouts for student roles will be held at 7 p.m. Thursday and Friday in Conrads Theatre. Scripts may be seen in 115 History Bldg.

PROFESSIONAL ACTORS

The author of the play is a Florida resident who formerly taught at Harvard. He is considered an authority on the subject matter of the play, based on his experience as a soldier, lawyer and novelist.

The presentation of a play which has never before been performed continues a custom begun last year with the premiere performance by the University Theatre of The Morgan Rock, by Philip Pruneau.

The Assignment in Judea cast will four Central Florida between March 8 and 22, presenting the play in various theatres.

Faculty Members Exhibit Paintings

An exhibit of paintings, prints and drawings by three Art Dept. faculty members will have its formal opening from 7 to 9:30 tonight with a reception in the University Gallery.

The public is invited to the reception honoring the artists.

The works of Gail Johnson, Edward Hill and Jack Breckenridge, who teach basic art courses, will be displayed Jan. 10-18 and Feb. 1-15.

The artists will participate in a question and answer period for students at 7:30 p.m. tomorrow in the gallery.

Exhibits of members of the art faculty are shown each year to acquaint students and visitors to the campus with the creative efforts of the Art Dept.

ALL YOUNG ARTISTS

Since all three artists are under 35 years old, the work of each is said to reflect his search for artistic maturity.

Miss Johnson, in her first year at FSU, teaches drawing and design. From Louisiana, she did undergraduate study at Carleton College in Minnesota and received her MA from Columbia University.

Hill, originally from New England, studied at the Rhode Island School of Design and was awarded an MA from Yale University. He is in his second year here, teaching basic drawing and figure drawing.

Breckenridge, from the Middle West, received his BS from the ...

A&M Refuses FSU Student

Jefferson Pyland, a Florida State University student on probation, because of participation in the sit-in demonstration at Woolworths last spring, was recently refused admission to Florida A&M University.

The application to take one course, "Social Institutions of the American Negro," was refused by the Board of Control on the basis of Pyland's probationary standing at FSU.

The reason he applied, said Pyland, is that "living in an era of rapid change in Southern relations, I need to learn about the problems of Southern Negroes."

Dr. Phillips Gives Address To Graduates

Dr Howard Phillips, president of Alabama College, will address January graduates in commencement exercises at 3 p.m. Jan 28 in Westcott Auditorium.

A biologist, Phillips was for 20 years a member of the Emory University faculty, serving for several years as dean of the Graduate School.

He is a native of North Carolina and received degrees from Wake Forest College and the University of Virginia.

More than 400 degrees will be conferred by FSU President Gordon Blackwell, participating in his first commencement here.

Admission of guests to graduation is by ticket only. Students may pick up guest tickets and their own seating assignment numbers at Westcott Ticket Office Jan. 13-20.

Graduating seniors, their families and friends are being invited to a reception at the home of President and Mrs. Gordon Blackwell from 11 a.m. to noon Jan. 28.

Rehearsal for the graduation exercises will be held the same morning at 9:30 a.m.

Committee Reports

A student-faculty committee appointed last summer to study the honor system and recommend changes has prepared its report which shall be presented to the student and faculty senates at their next meetings.

By 35 To 3 Vote

Senate Overrides Butler Veto Of Hall Of Fame

Senate over-rode 35 to 3, Student Body President Carl Butler's veto of the bill to raise the grade requirement for the Hall of Fame, passing the bill for the third time Wednesday.

The bill which began its course through Senate to early November is the result of one of the most lengthy debates and controversial in Senate this year.

The bill has been approved by Senate twice in its present form at a 2.5 over-all minimum grade requirement for the Hall of Fame.

The bill also stipulates that the candidate must attain a 2.5 overall by the end of his junior year, and specifies that the selection committee may not make any exception to the provisions of the bill.

OMITTED REQUIREMENT

The bill as originally passed eliminated the minimum grade requirement and allowed to revert to a 2.0 from a 2.3 over-all. It was referred to Senate by Dean of Students R. R. Oglesby for reconsideration.

On the second trip through Senate the bill was passed in its final form 28 to 10. However, just prior to Christmas vacation Butler noticed Student Body Vice President Bobby Byrd that he had vetoed the measure.

In a letter to the presiding officer of Senate, Butler stated that he was vetoing because he considered it "somewhat incomplete and faulty" and wished that Senate would reconsider the bill.

VETO REASONS

Butler listed his reasons for the veto:

1. "The scholastic average to be used is that existing at the end of the junior year, which conflicts with the concept of having a grade average listed to insure the scholastic value of the group selected. By establishing a system of using first semester grades of the senior year, you can be more nearly assured of your intent."

2 "The bill is to become effective upon passage, which is a break with the precedent used in raising the Who's Who grade average. The method used in this case is to make it effective with the incoming Freshman Class. I believe this is fairer to all concerned, and removes from all of us the criticism of having selfish motives."

MINIMUM STANDARD

3 "I have serious doubts concerning the use of a 2.5 average for a minimum standard. A 2.75 or a 3.0 would be a better ideal. I know the argument that will be raised is that anything higher than a 2.5 will eliminate too many people. However, as so many of you have told me, we cannot tolerate a lowering of our emphasis upon scholarship simply because someone then will not be eligible."

4 "This is an award for three activities: scholarship, leadership, and service. We have only adequately defined scholarship and established a minimum for that quality alone."

Book Of Talks By Strozier Now On Sale

The University of the future will become "an immensely more vital and integral part of society," said FSU President Strozier in one of his many addresses.

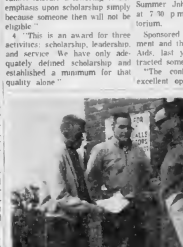
A book, Selected Speeches of Robert M. Strozier, containing 19 of the late Florida State University President's speeches, has just been released for sale.

The 122-page, brown and beige hardback book, published as No. 33 in the Florida State University Studies, is on sale at the University Bookstore for $4.50.

Three of the speeches are in the original Frenze's which he used in his addresses at the University of Paris.

Edited by James A. Prey and Albert L. Leduc, Selected Speeches is dedicated in memory of the late president.

Job Symposium Is Held Thursday Night



Students may gain insight into ideas commented Dr. James opportunities in summer work on Carr, head of the Office of Financial Aids.

Specialists in various fields will be presented to discuss applications, salaries, prospects for being hired, and other pertinent factors. Following a short general meeting, the group will divide into different interest areas, with students being allowed to attend two such meetings.

Speakers include Dr. Ashby Stell, representing restaurant management and Dr. Mary Alexander from the Women's Physical Education Dept. There will also be speakers discussing summer opportunities in business and industry.

Working in conjunction with camp directors throughout the Southeast, Dr. Alexander has helped many students in summer camps in past years. A visiting group of camp directors will be at FSU the latter part of the week to interview any students interested in jobs in summer camps.

Student chairman of the job roundup is Frank Rese.

THE QUESTIONNAIRE . . . being handed this student is being sponsored by the student government committee on the infirmary. The committee is seeking to find out what improvements can be made in the service at the infirmary. (Photos by Harvey Smith)

Infirmary Questionnaires Studied By Joint Committee

The next 700 students to enter the University Hospital will receive a special questionnaire upon presentation of their ID cards to the receptionists.

The questionnaire is the work of a joint Student Senate-Secretary of Student Welfare committee to study the value of the complaints annually lodged against the infirmary, its hours, and its services.

According to Secretary of Student Welfare, Duncan Moore, the questionnaire will give students an opportunity to have their say and to provide evidence to back up the usual round of complaints. Thus reaching some sort of conclusion to the annual rumors of inefficient service.

"Any student who wishes to voice a complaint or opinion, should stop by the infirmary and pick up a questionnaire," Moore said. The questionnaires should be folded and dropped into the campus mail and returned as soon as possible in order for the committee to tabulate and analyze the results, he added.

The two questions asked are

1. Do you feel that you would be more satisfied if the infirmary were run partially on an appointment basis?

2. Did you receive sufficient consideration and and attention in relation to the seriousness of your illness?

Following the questions will be a space for additional comments —favorable or otherwise.

Halls Get PBX's

Promised improvements are being put into effect as far as the campus telephone system is concerned.

Florida and Reynolds Halls are sporting brand-new PBX boards that handle six and five incoming calls respectively.

All women's dorms are getting new phones on each floor which permit residents to make outgoing calls without having to go through the dormitory switchboards. Previously, they would have to wait several seconds for a dialtone or until an outside line was available.

NEW OUTSIDE PHONES

The new phones currently connected to outside lines are to be used for outgoing calls, and the other lines which go through the PBX should be left free for incoming calls, suggested Housing Director Miss Edith McCollum.

Cawthon Hall will be getting a new switchboard soon to replace the two-line telephone they are now using for 265 residents. The little room in which the receptionist sits will be enlarged to house the apparatus.

The men's halls will also have added direct lines on every other floor. Several different ways of handling the telephone congestion are being tried out to see which will prove most satisfactory, said Miss McCollum.

FSU Library Given Gifts

A large collection of the John Hook Papers, a collection of old letters, business records and other manuscripts, has been given to Florida State University.

The papers, once the property of a Tory landowner who sued the government for cattle stolen during the Revolutionary war and included the slang term beef, meaning complaint, to the dictionary, were presented by Dean of Students R. R. Oglesby at a meeting of the Friends of the University Library.

Dr Oglesby said the papers came from an old suitcase in his father's house at New London, Va. They are valuable mainly because Hook speculated extensively in western lands.

Duke University and the University of Virginia have an equal number of other Hook papers.

Other gifts announced at the meeting included $500 cash from Miss Helen Beach of Arlington, Va. in memory of her sister, Ruth, an alumna of 1919, and a facsimile copy of the Gutenberg Bible from an anonymous donor.

Activity Books

Activity Books for the Spring semester may be obtained at the Westcott Ticket Office today through Jan. 27, 9 a.m. through 4 p.m. daily.

The new ID card must be presented.

State AAUP Group Formed

A state council of chapters of the American Association of University Professors is being formed to advance higher educational institutions in Florida, and to bring their critical problems to the attention of the public.

The state-wide organization was planned by a delegation of AAUP members from the University of Florida and Florida State University.

"We want to build a state university system comparable to that found in any of the states of the nation," said President Vyron Hines of the Gainesville chapter, and George Yost of the FSU group, in a joint statement.

"We feel sure the people of Florida want the best in higher education for their sons and daughters. People desire to support fully the universities just as they have the public schools, which provide the basic education," President Hines said.

STUDIES SHOW

At the University of Florida, professors receive $8,725, on the average, whereas the Board of Control studies show that teachers in this rank earn $10,640 on 70 other institutions of comparable status.

Other surveys back this up. In short, Florida is almost $2,000 behind other states in this professional level.

Both FSU and the U of F, according to a nation-wide survey of the AAUP, rate "D" in their salary scales.

The Result

The result is that other states, the Federal government and industry are attracting teachers from our universities. President Hines said that "if the state of Florida fails to support its institutions of higher learning more liberally, it cannot hope to have a state university system."

"Can the state afford to support higher education more liberally? Certainly it can. Our income has been rising rapidly and for 1960 will pass the $1000 mark. No southern state ranked so high.

TAX SHARE, LACKING

"Unfortunately, higher education's share of the tax dollar has not moved up proportionately. In 1958, for example, Florida's capita expenses for higher education was $8.64 in contrast, Minnesota, with 1,000 000 less population and about the same income, spent $17.3.

"Look at other southern states while Florida spent 6.5 percent on its higher institutions of learning, Alabama spent 7.2 percent; Texas 8.8, and Virginia 10.3 per cent," Hines said.

Sen- ...ator introduced the resolu- ...which honors Collins for up- ...ding the highest standards for ...ida education and working for ...provement of Florida's educa- ...al facilities.

...Other Senate action a re- ...shipment bill affecting main- ...ce Foundation Housing Organ- ...ion was passed by a 20-6 vote. ...dents of these houses had ...erly voted as day students ...were represented by the day ...n senators.

ONE SENATOR

The new bill introduced by the ...ial and rules committee ...vides for one senator to rep- ...resent the 130 FHO students.

The day students are still represented by four senators.

The resulting bill will be, a living area of at least 130 students shall be entitled to one senator, a housing unit with more than 360 residents shall be entitled to two senators.

A report prepared by Mygnon Champion, chairman of the judicial and rules committee explained the rationale behind reapportionment policies.

Fraternity and sorority precincts are made up on the bases of geographical proximity of houses to each precinct, reasonable equality of numbers of houses in each precinct, and separation of fraternity and sorority houses.

FIVE REASONS

The committee report listed five reasons for their recommendation that the FHO houses be separated from the day student precincts.

Since the FHO houses are located adjacent to the campus and most of the day students are scattered throughout the area the committee felt that the problems of day students in general were not sufficiently similar to those of the FHO students. "In realization of the fact that our system of precinct representation is promulgated upon the belief that an area and its unique problems can best be represented by a person from that area who shares these problems, the committee concluded that only by separating these two distinct groups could this principle be served," the report said.

The second reason given by the committee was that since FHO students were required to abide by the university regulations that are imposed on other campus residents, and day students are exempt from many of these same regulations, the interests of the two groups are different.

REPRESENTATION

The committee also said that under the present arrangement it was possible that all four senators would be elected from one group, leaving the other without adequate representation.

The committee also argued that since in recent years at least two of the Senators had come from the FHO houses representation of the 3,965 undergraduate day students and many graduate students who live off campus had been in fact reduced to two.

In addition the committee said, that there was a possibility that the FHO candidates had an advantage over regular day students because they were required by FHO students to vote for candidates who lived in their house. This results in a "tendency on the part of FHO students to vote in a bloc even if it is an informal and unorganized bloc," the report said. The committee said that changes have been made that the FHO houses are able to control the day student senators' elections but the committee refused to pass judgment upon those changes.

Other recommendations of the committee included placing the Alumni Village in the precinct with the University Trailer Court and Dale Mabry Heights, bringing the total residents of that precinct to 1,036.

NSA Representative Speaks On Travels

By PATTY PACHLER
Flambeau Staff Writer

A representative of Educational Travels, Inc., sponsored by the National Student Asso., visited Florida State University last week to explain travel programs and tours.

Cynthia Powell, a 1960 graduate of the University of Texas in Austin, has a first-hand knowledge of the tours she talks about.

Miss Powell took a tour of Europe last summer and afterwards took her present position with the travel service.

In speaking about the tours, Miss Powell likes to point out several features. First, she said the tours are low cost because arrangements in foreign countries are made through student's unions in the countries. Also, she added, graduate students in the countries act as guides.

STUDENT INTEREST IN MIND

"Tours are planned with the student and his interest in mind," she continued. For instance, she said, in each country parties are planned with the students of that country.

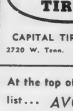
Orientation programs given by an outstanding professor are planned in each country so that students will have a better idea about the history, art, literature, present role in the world and everything that makes up the country, said Miss Powell.

Knowledge of a foreign language is not compulsory for the tours, she said, but it does help. The service tries to send the tours over on student ships which have orientation classes and language lessons.

INTERESTING PEOPLE

All sorts of interesting people are met in the ships, she commented, and quite often there are interesting discussions. On the ship last summer, there was a panel discussion on 'What Europeans Don't Like About American Tourists?'

Several types of tours are sponsored by the travel service. There are study tours for which students may receive credit. This summer there will be a politics and economics tour of most of the major Western countries, Italian, French and Austrian language tours, African, South American and Japanese study tours, and a contemporary Catholicism tour.



OTHER TOURS

Other tours include a round-the-world tour, work camps where students will work from three to four weeks on an English farm touring before and after working, a "hobo" tour for 70 days where the accommodations will be lower priced but still not student hostels, and a tour to Russia and Western Europe.

For the most part, the tours are general travel tours planned with the student and his interest in mind, said Miss Powell. Many extras such as tickets to musicals, operas, the Folies-Bergeres in Paris, etc., are included in the tour price.

Further information on any of the tours may be obtained by writing Miss Powell, in care of Educational Travels, Inc., 20 West 38th St., New York 18.

New Play Set For March 1-7; Dowling Stars

Assignment in Judea has been chosen by the University Theatre for a premiere performance at Florida State University in the third spot on this year's playbill.

Written by Patrick Welch, the dramatic account of events surrounding the crucifixion will have six performances here instead of the usual four. Production dates are March 1-4 and 6-7.

Tryouts for student roles will be held at 7 p.m. Thursday and Friday in Conrads Theatre. Scripts may be seen in 115 Hasbrs Bldg.

PROFESSIONAL ACTORS

Leading roles will be played by professional actors, in contrast to the usual student-performed university productions. Eddie Dowling, New York producer, director and actor, is starred.

The author of the play is a Florida resident who formerly taught at Harvard. He is considered an authority on the subject matter of the play, based on his experience as a soldier, scholar and novelist.

The presentation of a play which has never before been performed continues a custom begun last year with the premiere performance by the University Theatre of The Morgan Rock, by Philip Pruneau.

The Assignment in Judea cast will tour Central Florida between March 8 and 22, presenting the play in various theaters.

Campus Sing Meeting Set

A meeting concerning Campus Sing, sponsored by Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia Fraternity, will be held 5 p.m. tomorrow in room 206 Music Building.

Organizations interested in participating in the song fest should send a delegate. Members of the Campus Sing committee will answer all pertinent questions at this time.

Faculty Members Exhibit Paintings

An exhibit of paintings, prints and drawings by three Art Dept. faculty members will have its formal opening from 7 to 9:30 tonight with a reception in the University Gallery.

The public is invited to the reception honoring the artists.

The works of Gail Johnson, Edward Hill and Jack Breckenridge, who teach at the same art center, will be displayed Jan. 10-18 and Feb 1-13.

The artists will participate in a question and answer period for students at 7:30 p.m. tomorrow in the gallery.

Exhibits of members of the art faculty are shown each year to acquaint students and visitors to the campus with the creative efforts of the Art Dept.

ALL YOUNG ARTISTS

Since all three artists are under 35 years old, the work of each is said to reflect his search for artistic maturity.

Miss Johnson, in her first year at FSU, teaches drawing and design. From Louisiana, she did undergraduate study at Carleton College in Minnesota and received her MA from Columbia University.

Hill, originally from New England, studied at the Rhode Island School of Design and was awarded an MA from Yale University. He is in his second year here teaching basic drawing and figure drawing.

Breckenridge, from the Middle West, received his BS from the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee and the MFA degree from the State University of Iowa, and studied with Hans Hofmann in New York City. He teaches printmaking and art history and is curator of the gallery.

The art gallery is open weekdays from 9:30 a.m to 4:30 p.m. Saturdays from 8 a.m. to noon and Sundays from 1 to 4 p.m.

Dr. Phillips Gives Address To Graduates

Dr. Howard Phillips, president of Alabama College, will address January graduates in commencement exercises at 3 p.m. Jan 28 in Westcott Auditorium.

A biologist, Phillips was for 20 years a member of the Emory University faculty, serving for several years as dean of the graduate School.

He is a native of North Carolina and received degrees from Wake Forest College and the University of Virginia.

More than 400 degrees will be conferred by FSU President Gordon Blackwell, participating in his first commencement here.

Admission of guests to graduation is by ticket only. Students may pick up guest tickets and send seating assignment numbers at Westcott Ticket Office Jan 13-20.

Graduating seniors, their families and friends are being invited to a reception at the home of President and Mrs. Gordon Blackwell from 11 a.m. to noon Jan 28.

Rehearsal for the graduation exercises will be held the same morning at 9:30 a.m.

A&M Refuses FSU Student

Jefferson Poland, a Florida State University student on probation because of participation in the sit-in demonstration at Woolworth's last spring, was recently refused admission to Florida A&M University.

The application to take one course, "Social adjustment of the American Negro," was refused by the Board of Control on the basis of Poland's probationary standing at FSU.

The reason he applied, said Poland, is that "living in an era of rapid change in Southern relations, I need to learn about the problems of Southern Negroes."

Committee Reports

A student-faculty committee appointed last summer to study the honor system and recommend changes has prepared 8½ report which shall be presented to the student and faculty senates at their next meetings.

Senate Overrides Butler Veto Of Hall Of Fame Bill

Senate over-rode, 35 to 3, Student Body President Carl Butler's veto of the bill to raise the grade requirement for the Hall of Fame, passing the bill for the third time Wednesday.

The bill which began its course through Senate in early November is the result of one of the most lengthy debates and controversial in Senate this year.

The bill has been approved by Senate twice in its present form as a 2.5 over-all minimum grade requirement for the Hall of Fame.

The bill also stipulates that the candidate must attain a 2.5 overall by the end of his junior year and specifies that the selection committee may not make any exception to the previsions of the bill.

OMITTED REQUIREMENT

The bill as originally passed eliminated the minimum grade requirement and allowed to revert to a 2.0 from a 2.5 over-all. It was returned to Senate by Dean of Students R. R. Oglesby for reconsideration

On the second trip through Senate the bill was passed in its final form 28 to 10. However, just prior to Christmas vacation Butler notified Student Body Vice President Bobby Byrd that he had vetoed the measure.

In a letter to the presiding officer of Senate, Butler stated that he was vetoing because he considered it "somewhat incomplete and faulty" and wished that Senate would reconsider the bill.

VETO REASONS

Butler listed his reasons for the veto

1. "The scholastic average to be used is that existing at the end of the junior year, which conflicts with the concept of having a grade average listed to insure the scholastic value of the group selected. By establishing a system of using first semester grades of the senior year, you can be more nearly assured of your intent."

2. "The bill is to become effective upon passage, which is a break with the precedent used in establishing the Who's Who grade average. The method used in that action is to make it effective with the incoming Freshman Class. I believe this is fairer to all concerned, and removes from all of us the criticism of having selfish motives."

MINIMUM STANDARD

3. "I have serious doubts concerning the use of a 2.5 average for a minimum standard . A 2.75 or a 3.0 would be a better ideal. I know the argument that will be raised is that anything higher than a 2.5 will eliminate too many people. However, as so many of you have told me, we cannot tolerate a lowering of our emphasis upon scholarship simply because someone then will not be eligible."

4. "This is an award for three activities: scholarship, leadership, and service. We have only adequately defined scholarship and established a minimum for that quality alone."

Book Of Talks By Strozier Now On Sale

The University of the future will become "an immensely more vital and integral part of society," said Robert Manning Strozier in one of his talks.

A book, Selected Speeches of Robert M. Strozier, containing 19 of the late Florida State University President's speeches, has just been released for sale.

The 222-page, brown and beige hardback book, published as No. 35 in the Florida State University Studies, is on sale at the University Bookstore for $4.50.

Three of the speeches are in the original French, which he used in his addresses at the University of Paris.

Edited by James A. Prevo and Jack Lawrence, Selected Speeches is dedicated in memory of the late president

Job Symposium Is Held Thursday Night

Students may gain insight into opportunities in summer work in business, industry, camps, hotels and resorts at the second annual Summer Job Roundup Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in Westcott Auditorium.

Sponsored by Student Government and the Office of Financial Aids, last year's conference attracted some 600 students

"The conference provides an excellent opportunity to get job ideas," commented Dr. James Carr, head of the Office of Financial Aids.

Specialists in various fields will be presented to discuss applications, salaries, prospects for being hired, and other pertinent factors. Following a short general meeting, the group will divide into different interest areas, with students being allowed to attend two such meetings.

Speakers include Dr. Ashby Stiff, representing restaurant management and Dr. Mary Alexander from the Women's Physical Education Dept. There will also be speakers discussing summer opportunities in business and industry.

Working in conjunction with camp directors throughout the Southeast, Dr. Alexander has helped many students in summer camps in past years. A visiting group of camp directors will be at FSU the latter part of the week to interview any students interested in jobs in summer camps.

Newest chairman of the job roundup is Frank Rose

THE QUESTIONNAIRE . . . being handed this student is being sponsored by the student government committee on infirmary. The committee is seeking to find out what improvements can be made in the service at the infirmary. (Photo by Harvey Smith)

Infirmary Questionnaires Studied By Joint Committee

The next 700 students to enter the University Hospital will receive a special questionnaire upon presentation of their ID cards to the receptionists.

The questionnaire is the work of a joint Student Senate-Secretary of Student Welfare committees to study the value of complaints continually lodged against the infirmary, its hours, and its services.

According to Secretary of Student Welfare, Duncan Moore, the questionnaire will give students an opportunity to have their say and to provide evidence to back up the usual round of complaints. Moore said the sort of conclusion to the annual rumors of inefficient service.

"Any student who wishes to voice a complaint or opinion, should stop by the infirmary and pick up a questionnaire," Moore said. The questionnaires should be folded and dropped into the campus mail and returned as soon as possible in order for the committee to tabulate and analyze the results, he added.

The two questions asked are:

1. Do you feel that you would be more satisfied if the infirmary were run partially on an appointment basis?

2. Did you receive sufficient consideration and and attention in relation to the seriousness of your illness?

Following the questions will be a space for additional comments —favorable or otherwise.

Halls Get PBX's

Promised improvements are being put into effect as far as the campus telephone system is concerned.

Florida and Reynolds Halls are reporting brand-new PBX boards that handle six and five incoming calls, respectively.

All women's dorms are getting new phones on each floor which permit residents to make outgoing calls without going through the dormitory switchboards. Previously, they would have to wait several seconds for a dialtone or until an outside line was available.

NEW OUTSIDE PHONES

The new phones directly connected to outside calls are to be used for outgoing calls, and the other lines which go through the PBX should be left free for incoming calls, suggested Housing Director Miss Edith McCollum.

Cawthon Hall will be getting a new switchboard soon to replace the two-line telephone they are now using for 265 residents. The little room in which the receptionist sits will be enlarged to house the apparatus.

The men's halls will also have added direct lines on every other floor. Several different ways of handling the telephone congestion are being tried out to see which will prove most satisfactory, said Miss McCollum.

FSU Library Given Gifts

A large collection of the John Hook Papers, a collection of old letters, business records and other manuscripts has been given to Florida State University.

The papers, once the property of a Tory landowner who sued the government for cattle stolen during the Revolutionary war and thus added the slang term beef, meaning complaint, to the dictionary, were presented by Dean of Students R. R. Oglesby at a meeting of the Friends of the University Library.

Dr. Oglesby said the papers came from an old suitcase in his father's house at New London, Va. They are valuable mainly because Hook speculated extensively in western lands.

Duke University and the University of Virginia have an equal number of other Hook papers.

Other gifts announced at the meeting included $500 cash from Miss Helen Beach of Arlington, Va., in memory of her sister, Ruth, an alumna of 1919, and a facsimile copy of the Gutenberg Bible from an anonymous donor.

Activity Books

Activity Books for the Spring semester may be obtained at the Westcott Ticket Office today through Jan. 27, 9 a.m. through 4 p.m. daily.

The new ID card must be presented.

State AAUP Group Formed

A state council of chapters of the American Association of University Professors is being formed to advance higher education in institutions in Florida, and to bring their critical problems to the attention of the public.

The state-wide organization was planned by a delegation of AAUP members from the University of Florida and Florida State University.

"We want to build a state university system comparable to that found in any of the states of the nation," said Acting President Vyron Hines of the Tallahassee chapter, and George Yost of the FSU group, in a joint statement.

"We feel sure the people of Florida will be best in higher education for their sons and daughters. People desire to support fully the universities just as they have the public schools, which provide the basic education," President Hines said.

STUDIES SHOW

At the University of Florida, professors receive $8,725, on the average, whereas the Board of Control studies show that teachers in this rank earn $10,040 in 20 other institutions of comparable status.

Other surveys back this up. In short, Florida is ranked $2 000 behind other states in this professional level.

Both FSU and the U of F, according to a nation-wide survey of the AAUP, rate "D" in their salary scales.

The Result

The result is that other states, the Federal government and industry are attracting teachers from our universities. President Hines said that "if the state of Florida fails to support its universities at higher learning more liberally, it cannot hope to have a first-rate university system.

"We are grateful to support higher education more liberally? Florida's per capital income last year, the latest available, for 1960 will pass the $1900 mark. No southern state ranked so high.

TAX SHARE LACKING

"Unfortunately higher education's share of the tax dollar has not moved up proportionately. In 1958, for example, Florida's capita expenses for higher education was $8.64 in contrast. Minnesota with 1,000 000 less population and about the same income, spent $17.2.

"Look at other southern states while Florida spent 6.5 percent on its higher institutions of learning, Alabama spent 7.2 percent, Texas 8.8 and Virginia 10.3 per cent," Hines said.

Students Commend Collins

Student Senate has commended Gov. LeRoy Collins for his ... relationship he has enjoyed with the educators of Florida." ... before Christmas. Sen. ... Butler introduced the resolution which honors Collins for upholding the highest standards for higher education and working for expansion of Florida's educational facilities.

Other Senate action a re-... amendment bill affecting maintenance of the Foundation Housing Organization passed by a 20-6 vote. Residents of these houses had formerly voted as day students but were represented by the day student senators.

ONE SENATOR

The new bill introduced by the ... and rules committee now provides for one senator to represent the 130 FHO students.

The day students will still represented by four senators.

According to the new bill, 6 living area at least 130 students shall be entitled to one senator. A housing unit with more than 260 residents shall be entitled to two senators.

A report prepared by Mygnon Champion, chairman of the judicial and rules committee explained the rationale behind reapportionment policies.

Fraternity and sorority precincts are made up on the basis of geographical proximity of houses in each precinct, reasonable equality of numbers of houses in each precinct, and separation of fraternity and sorority houses.

FIVE REASONS

The committee report listed five reasons for their recommendation that the FHO houses be separated from the day student precinct.

Since the FHO houses are located adjacent to the campus and most of the day students are scattered throughout the area the committee felt that the problems of day students in general were not sufficiently similar to those of the FHO students. "In realization of the fact that our system of precinct representation is promulgated upon the belief that an area and its unique problems can best be represented by a person from that area who shares these problems, the committee concluded that only by separating these two distinct groups could this principle be served," the report said.

The second reason given by the committee was that since FHO students were required to abide by the university regulations that are imposed on other campus residents and day students are exempt from many of these same regulations, the interests of the two groups are different.

REPRESENTATION

The committee also said that under the present arrangement it was possible that all four senators would be elected from one group giving the latter without adequate representation.

The committee also argued that since in recent years at least two of the Senators had come from the FHO houses representation of the 3,965 undergraduate day students and many graduate students who live off campus had been in fact reduced to two.

In addition the committee said that there was a possibility that the FHO candidates had an advantage over regular day students because of the tendency for FHO students to vote for candidates who lived in their house. This results in a "tendency on the part of FHO students to vote in a bloc even if it is an informal and unorganized bloc," the report said. The committee said that changes have been made that the FHO houses are able to control the day student senators' elections but the committee refused to pass judgment upon those changes.

Other recommendations of the committee included placing the Alumni Village In the precinct with the University Trailer Court and Dale Mabry Heights, bringing the total residents of that precinct to 1,036.

Flambeau Editorials

The Florida Flambeau editorials represent only the views of student members of the staff. Signed columns on this page represent only the opinions of their authors. Any student may submit either editorials or columns for consideration.

It's A Common Affliction

Appoint a committee to study the question and report at the next monthly meeting. This seems to be the only way any organization, and some branches of student government are handled.

If the group is particularly industrious, it will produce a questionnaire with several vague and insignificant questions which odd and assorted students will fill out and return as soon as possible.

BUT THE LUCKY group is the one which looks forward to the report, accepts it, and then submits it to study for the next monthly meeting. In this manner we get things accomplished fast at FSU.

There are some committees that were appointed last year to make policy decisions. One faculty-student committee is attempting to decide what our honor code is to be. As yet, nothing definite has been learned. It is known that the committee has met and discussed and is still apparently in the process of studying.

Studying is fine. It's just that in our bumbling way, we can study just about everything right out of mind and existence.

IF THE VARIOUS budgets that are being studied and considered for revision remain in study much longer, there will be no need for the revision, because there will be no organizations. If the Greek organizations study their proposed actions much more, and don't act, there won't be any Greeks left around to care.

A survey of student opinion is a handy thing to have around, and coupled with good sound facts, it can be a powerful instrument in bringing some of the annual controversies, studies and investigations to a welcome end. But as long as we just gather the opinions, rant and rave about it like a bunch of juvenile idiots, and proceed to do the same all over again next year, we aren't impressing anybody, or anything, by our lack of action.

You might say that FSU has a slight touch of committee-itus: or maybe the technical term should be title-itus.

Outlook For '61 Is Ominous

1961 has arrived with the usual quota of hangovers and traffic deaths. Malcolm Johnson of the Tallahassee Democrat wrote with a certain amount of optimism for the coming year; he called 1960, the late unlamented, a rowdy year.

Rowdy it was. But no more so than most of the years of the last decade. 1961 promises to be the equal of, or perhaps more rowdy than 1960.

About the only surprises left in the integration picture would be the meek capitulation of Georgia to integrationist forces or the bald-face announcement by foes of the south that discrimination is as bad in the north and, worse for the latter day Harriet Stowe's, it is whitewashed with a hypocrisy and cynicism the south can seldom match.

AT MIAMI'S DOOBSTEP the Caribbean goat still bleats war and adds entangling alliances with Communist nations to Cuba's burdens. It is impossible to know what Castro might do to bring his marathon fancies to tragic life. 1961 could be the year Havana lost its head.

In the Far East the chummy Chinese, having throttled helpless Tibet, have turned their attention, via Red Viet Nam, to the "liberation" of Laos. China lit a long fuse in this corner of the world years ago. 1961 might be the year the fuse burns home in Laos, or India and the charge goes off in Mao's face.

ISRAEL, STILL THE defiant, loner, enters the new year with a fresh arousal of Arab anger lighting the shores of the Red Sea. Israeli atomic ambitions have fanned Arab envy and fear and insured that Near Eastern animosities will loom as large this year as last.

In Washington, a new president of the United States will take office. He enjoys a reputed ability to bear grudges and to avenge himself on those who have crossed him in his years in the United States Senate. His administration may be new and virile or it may be nothing more than an anemic shadow of the Roosevelt era.

IN FLORIDA, A NEW governor and a bustling legislature are plotting to enliven Tallahassee to some extent. Governor Bryant is reported to be a smiling, affable man after office hours. Perhaps 1961 will have him shedding a bit of charm in public. He might even be goaded into the shadow of a smile. He has four years to smile, and to erase the faint air of hostility that appears to emanate from the campus at hand.

AND ON CAMPUS there will be the usual number of controversies of no lasting import. It is possible that one or two issues will crop up and hang on throughout the year. The arrival of the lawmakers will bring a flurry of panic, especially funds panic. To a student body more accustomed to reading of funds allotted to FSU from federal and other sources, 1961 will be a banner year if the legislature does something generous, like arranging to pay the salaries that will attract the caliber of professors that this university must have, and soon, or it will remain nothing more than a pleasantly vapid landmark to passersby on highway 90.

"Daughter And I Are All Set For The Honeymoon"

Our Schools Need Saving?

By GERRY DOBSON

An interesting article appeared in a recent issue of the St. Petersburg Times. A "save our schools" committee has been set up in Charlotte County. Why do the schools have to be saved? In November, the electorate of Charlotte County selected W. S. Hancock as county superintendent of schools.

Mr. Hancock, it seems, does not hold a "master's degree in school administration and supervision" as is required of such officials by the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools (SACS), and as a result, the schools of Charlotte County will soon be denied accreditation by the SACS. The "save our schools" movement is aimed, therefore, at having county school superintendents appointed rather than elected. Such a scheme has already been put into effect in Sarasota County.

"SAVE OUR SCHOOLS" people feel that in this manner, Florida counties will be assured superintendents with the minimum educational requirements demanded by the SACS, and perhaps this is a reasonable enough desire. One would think that the SACS and similar educational organizations would be in a better position to know the type training required of school superintendents than are the voters.

These last arguments might be acceptable if the education organizations of this country had a record of serving the public interest first, their private interests second. To this observer at least, this has not been the case. I am not familiar with the aims and objectives of the SACSS, but they are suspect, I feel, if the organization is regarded as similar to other such education groups.

IN GENERAL, such groups, whether intentionally or not, seem intent upon perpetuating the mediocrity of our nation's schools. To illustrate, one might examine a specific problem, and the means being advocated by most education associations to solve it.

These solutions appear to be quite acceptable until one considers the facts behind their implementation. By raising the qualification standards, the educationists mean increasing the number of education courses a person must take before he can become certified to teach. The only uses many such courses serve are to supply a steady flow of students in the teachers of such courses, and to prevent many college graduates who might like to teach in our secondary schools from doing so.

IT SEEMS absurd that the majority of professors at FSU are regarded as "unqualified" to teach in public schools, or even in the junior colleges. But there is a reason that such persons are prevented from entering the teaching field. It enables the educationists to cry "teacher shortage" and demand higher salaries. And while such higher salaries undoubtedly cause some excellent persons to enter teaching, the fact that these higher salaries are given to all teachers, regardless of merit, encourages many poor teachers to remain in the profession, and destroys the morale of our most capable teachers who get no greater reward for their work than do the laziest and most incompetent.

The educationists have always backed tenure laws that prevent the removal of a substandard, but certified teacher by anything short of a dynamite blast, and have also consistently fought the idea of merit raises.

THE REQUIREMENT of a bunch of generally worthless education courses in itself would not be bad, were it not that these courses crowd out "subject matter" courses, and thus reduce a teacher's competence in his field.

So if this is a sample of the way our education people meet the problems they are faced with, maybe we had better trust in the ability of the people of Charlotte County to select a good school superintendent. Because, after all, the people have always seemed to do pretty well in the past.

Coma Has 'Guilt Pangs'

Reflections

By LESLIE POWELL

Coma ingenuously into the Soda Shop. She looked as if she might have enjoyed her holidays and was having guilt pangs.

"Whatcha do for Christmas, etcetera," I asked her.

"Everything and nothing," she replied. "I took in the governor's inauguration and watched the boys play Button, Button' with the State seal. Then I watched the parade. About all I got out of that was a crick in the neck, a headache and frozen feet. I shudder to think what must have resulted for the people who sat to watch.

FSU DID ITSELF proud. At least it had an attractive float, the Marching Chiefs and Kathy Magda. She's as pretty as her picture, and in this age of sly, enterprising photographers, that's a rare happenstance."

I noticed Coma was wearing a silk top hat with a sprig of sacred mistletoe still dangling from the top. I asked why.

"Well, I'll tell you," she said, hooking her thumbs against her upper plate and shoving it back in place. "I put it there on the first of December because I had to take every advantage of the season, only nobody took advantage of me until I hypnotized Beau Didley and after that . . . Coma broke off with a snicker.

So, did you know that Beau Diddley wrote me a poem for Christmas. Sweetest thing ever." Coma enthused, biting the filter off a cigarette. "Wanta read it?" And she handed me a crumpled slip of paper. The title was 'Love Oh Love Oh Precocious Love.'

"So beetnik don't you think," she giggled. "Go on, read it." I did. It went:

How warm your eyes.
How tender your voice was?
Your left hand gripped mine and all the while your right hand was picking your schnoz

"SIGH," BURBLED Coma. I've never learned that a sigh is a sound. She always spoke it. "Sigh," she said again for effect. And with that she hitched up her coveralls, clicked the heels of her cowboy boots and strolled like a true "femme fatale" for the door.

As she exited she turned and called: "You know, the first thing I reach for every morning is my pajamas."

And she was gone in a rush of elegant bifustication.

West Can Hang Together

By JIM MILLER

The facts of international life make the marriage of Europe and North America ever more necessary. This meaningful age should be along political and economic lines in parallel the NATO military alliance.

Adroit diplomatic moves will be needed in the future to deal with problems of the emerging nations. The West must have concerted action if it is effectively meet situations that arise.

The current problem in Laos points this up vividly. There, Great Britain has been urging activation of the International Control Commission of Poland, Canada, and India. The British would support a neutralist government for Laos which presently is disrupted by civil war. The French also spoke out for diplomatic moves to ease the situation between the Vietiane government and the Pathet Lao rebels.

THE UNITED STATES, true to form, originally was rushing headlong into an untenable position. We were virtually alone in acting the belligerent role. True the Communists understand force best, but for our own sake we have an obligation to avoid war if there is any alternative.

Laos is bordered on two sides by Communist states, North Vietnam and China. China would not willingly permit the establishment of a government in Laos that was avowedly pro-Western and hence anti-Communist. The Chinese would not openly reject a neutralized government however.

THAILAND to the South of Laos could not tolerate a pro-Communist government but could tolerate a neutralist government. This was essentially the argument Great Britain used in proposing activation of the Control Commission.

The United States has retreated from its original position and now supports diplomatic activity through the Control Commission. The lesson the United States should have learned from the Laotion situation is that we should listen to Great Britain and the rest of our European Allies before we pursue a policy that even they cannot support.

In face of Communist strength it is axiomatic that the West hang together, or else hang separately. The West can ill afford major diplomatic blunders.

The new Kennedy administration can spark efforts for greater Western unity. The horizon of the New Frontier is hopeful somewhere to the East.

Are Negroes 'Fit' For Integration?

By JEFFERSON POLAND

"Why don't you go over to Frenchtown and take a good long look at these Negroes you want coming in our schools and eating at our lunch counters? A few of them may be professors and doctors, but most Southern Negroes are uneducated, immoral and unsanitary.

"I realize they aren't inferior in native ability, but in the South today they are culturally inferior in many ways. Why don't they try to improve themselves? Most of them don't even bother to paint those shacks they live in. Let the Negro show a little ambition and get ready to live in white society before he asks for integration. He's not ready for it yet."

I'VE HEARD THIS argument from many people in the past few years; even from moderates who have no sympathy for Citizens' Council racists. Certainly one cannot deny that a majority of Southern Negroes are culturally inferior.

In South Carolina, in 1952-53, Negroes accounted for 86 percent of the reported cases of venereal diseases. About nine out of five Southern Negro births is illegitimate. Their educational level is saddening.

In short, they are much like other impoverished minorities. Most Negroes fit the following description written in the last century: "They are improvident, worrying little about the future . . . . drink too much and therefore are insecure in employment and poor, and given to having children with reckless regularity." The preceding quote refers to Irish immigrants, not Negroes.

YES, CULTURAL inferiority exists. Is it a good reason for segregation?

In the first place those who support racial segregation for this reason are not consistent. They do not make the same demand of a white man. No white man, however ignorant or immoral or unwashed, has to deserve his ride at the front of a bus or eat at Woolworth's. Furthermore, it makes no difference if an individual Negro has bettered himself and deserves these "privileges". He is judged as a member of his race and not as an individual. This hardly squares with the traditional American practice of judging a man on his own merits.

"Well," you may reply, "maybe segregation is inconsistent, but if the Negroes don't like it why don't they improve themselves as the Irish and other minorities have done?" Why don't they earn acceptance into white society?

FRANKLY, THERE is no simple answer. People and traditions change slowly. Changes in deep-rooted cultural habits are usually measured by generations rather than by years.

As the sociologist Gunnar Myrdal points out, segregation itself preserves the Negro's lack of education and ambition, which in turn keeps him poor. "Negroes earn less than half as much as whites, which means: It will have considerable traits, such as lack of ambition, which means he will stay poor; which means excellent traits, such as lack of education, etcetera, are given as reasons for keeping him segregated The vicious circle is complete.

SEGREGATION HELPS keep the Negro in his present unfortunate condition in several ways. It means that almost all of the facilities available to Negroes for self-improvement are inferior to those used by whites, in spite of efforts to provide "separate but equal" facilities.

Take schools, as the most important example. Although Southerners can point out exceptions, most Negro schools have less money to spend per student; the schools are smaller which means they would be less able to provide laboratories or a good library or other expensive equipment even if the appropriation per student were equal

POORLY EDUCATED Negro students go to inferior Negro teachers' colleges and become substandard school teachers or professors or educators, which means they would be unable to give adequate education to the students who will become the next generation of poorly educated Negro school teachers . . . of course there has been progress in Negro schools, but under the system it is necessarily very slow.

Every time our white society segregates the Negro, it says to him, "We consider you inferior because of your race, therefore we refuse to associate with you. What's more there's nothing you can do about it, because you are a Negro and you will die one."

HE BEGINS TO understand society's message when he is a small child. It is translated into unmistakable terms each time he ventures outside French Quarter and into a particular ghetto is named. Eventually he comes to believe, at least subconsciously, what society has taught him: that he is hopelessly inferior.

A Negro professor of mine once told me that although he has long since rejected the theory of born racial inferiority on an intellectual level he has never quite been able to eradicate the subconscious feelings of inferiority which he learned in childhood

DURING EFFECTS which summer Korean War. The army found that segregated Negro units in WW II and the earlier part of the Korean conflict did not perform as well as white units. Negro soldiers in Jim Crow outfits realized they were considered inferior and consequently had very little faith in themselves or their fellow soldiers. They often quit, and retreated under fire. After the army was desegregated the Negroes were made to feel equal and accepted, they displayed as much courage as the whites who fought beside them.

Back to our earlier question: Is continued segregation the answer to the problem of cultural inferiority? Myrdal writes that segregation "is only what I have termed "cultural inferiority" serve to perpetuate each other in a vicious circle." He says improvement in any one of these three areas would help slow but some improvement in the other two.

So perhaps our question would be "which tasks can be accomplished most easily and easily . . . to double the Negro's average income. to reform each of his undesirable social traits, which are caused and /or preserved by segregation? or to admit him into our schools and libraries where, with equal facilities and a measure of self-respect he could begin to work out his own salvation?"

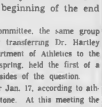
Gymnastic Rehearings Open, Next Set For Jan. 17

By BEN SHARP
Flambeau Sports Editor



The gymnastics controversy, worn to a state of near exhaustion by its frequent repetitions, was once again revisited at great lengths last Thursday afternoon. However this discussion marked the beginning of the end of that overworked argument.

Florida State University's athletic committee, the same group that pushed off the heated debate by transferring Dr. Hartley and gymnastic squad from the Department of Athletics to the Department of Physical Education last spring, held the first of a series of hearings designed to hear all sides of the question.

The next hearing is tentatively set for Jan. 17, according to athletic committee chairman, Dean Mode Stone. At this meeting the committee members will confer with Dr. Hartley Price, Dr. Kenneth Wells, head of the men's physical education department, and Dr. Albert Mancha, athletic director.

Sharp Shootin'

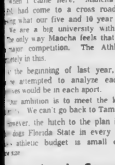
By Ben Sharp
Flambeau Sports Editor

At the initial meeting, Mancha presented his side of Florida State's bleak financial picture to a full committee and representatives from the student body who were invited to attend the meeting. The financial situation and lack of competition in gymnastics was the principle reasons for the shift, according to Mancha.

"When I came here," Mancha recalled, "I felt that athletics should have had come to a cross roads. Everyone was interested in seeing what our five and 10 year plan was going to be."

"We are a big university with a young athletic department". The only way Mancha feels that Florida State can go is towards major competition. The Athletic committee is behind him completely in this.

At the beginning of last year, the athletic director explained that he attempted to analyze each sport and decide what the goals would be in each sport.



"Our ambition is to meet the kind of competition equal to our size." We can't go back to Tampa

However, the hitch to the plan is the lack of money, a problem that dogs Florida State in every phase of university life. Florida State's athletic budget is small compared to other schools the same size.

Gymnastics Is Stumbling Block

In his analysis of each sport, Mancha said that he found one major block to his plan of up-grading each of FSU sports—gymnastics.

He found out there was no competition. SEC schools talked about sports."

Vaughn Mancha

Mancha read letters read from a majority of southern college athletic directors verifying that they either did not have the sport at all or supported it only as a part of the physical education department, as FSU does at present.

"We could have a strong gymnastics team within the physical education program," Mancha contends. "We need some extramural competition."

By extramural competition, Mancha means that FSU gymnasts should compete with other college gymnasts within the scope of the physical education department, since the schools who have gymnastics at all support it in this department.

Student Senator Nancy Sindon agreed.

"This seems to be just the beginning," she said. "We need to begin promoting it on this basis. This is the only answer."

Senator Wally Keene added to this: "We also need to set aside enough money to send someone to the NCAA meet if we have some qualified," the senior senator emphasized.

Butler Voices Student Resentment

Carl Butler, Student Body President and ex-officio member of the athletic committee, voiced student resentment to the athletic committee's sprong decission.

"Evidence resent cutting down squads who are winning to give to others. It's a misconception that we are cutting down to help the football team but this is the way that they feel."

"It's a misconception that money is being taken away from other sports and given to football. What we are trying to do is give each sport enough money to meet their competition. Coach Bowen's job is not any easier than Coach (Bum) Stultz's or Coach Bobby Long's. He does not get any more money proportionately than do any of our coaches."

"But the thing of it is," Mancha continued, "You can go out and get a baseball player, or a golfer for part of a scholarship, but when you have to have a full scholarship to get a football player because that is what other schools are giving."

And because of the difference in the competition for athletes, Florida State University is in a bind. They need money; the only way to get it is to make money. It's the same old story that's been heard at collega after college all over the country. Perhaps unfortunately, football is the sport that brings in this money, so they are the sport which bears the brunt of the blame.

But the truth of it is, the people are to blame. If they didn't like football, the sport would not have to be damned by people who like it as well.

So Dean Coyle Moore, dean of the school of Social Welfare has put it:

"Florida State has been on par academically with any school for a number of years. But the people of the state and the legislature did not start to consider us as equal until we scheduled Florida to play football. Then we started getting equal recognition for every phase of our University life."

This is not the fault of the athletic committee, the athletic department, or the athletic teams, but the fault of the tastes and priorities of the people of this state.

FSU Drops 3 Of 4 Games Over Holiday, Clemson Lone Victory

By MARK HILLIS
Flambeau Sports Writer

Florida State came out on the short end of their holiday basketball games, winning only one out of four.

The Seminoles' lone victory was over Clemson, by one point. South Carolina, Georgia and Tennessee proved to be too strong.

Although heavily favored over Georgia in the Gator Bowl Tournament, the Seminoles couldn't build up enough steam and were defeated 62-56. South Carolina beat FSU on their own court, 81-72. The Tallahassee five came from behind to edge Clemson 65-64 at Clemson, and in their last game of the holidays the Seminoles lost a heartbreaker to the Tennessee Volunteers, 70-68.

In the first game of the holidays, the fast breaking Gamecocks of South Carolina turned back the Seminoles 81-72 in Columbia. The Gamecocks were 12 points ahead at the half, 40-28, and kept their lead throughout the second half. Applying a full-court press in the waning minutes of the game. FSU whittled the lead down but this attempt was in vain. Ray Swain and Dave Fedor played some of their finest ball of the season scoring 25 and 22 points respectively. Swain and Fedor also grabbed in 17 rebounds apiece.

FSU's Seminoles made a fast and furious comback to beat the Clemson Tigers 65-64 after trailing by 10 points with 4:39 left in the game in Clemson, South Carolina. The 4,000 Clemson fans were amazed as the Seminoles outshot the Tigers 12-1 in the waning minutes. Just eight days before FSU had beaten the Tigers 74-57 on their homecourt.

Ray Swain, FSU's rapidly improving junior center came up with the winning basket with 25 seconds remaining. Swain also led his teammates in the individual scoring department with 21 points. Close behind was Dave Fedor and Dale Ricketts scoring 14 and 13 points respectively. FSU was only charged with 9 personal fouls, their lowest total in several seasons.

Two boys both named Johnson led Georgia to a first round victory over Florida State in the annual Gator Bowl Tournament 62-56 in Jacksonville.

Allan and John Johnson combined their shooting efforts to score 29 points, which made the difference in the closely fought game. With only 40 seconds remaining Dave Fedor pulled the Seminoles within 2 points 56-54, but his attempt was in vain. Georgia went on to score 4 more points and gain their second victory in six games.

Dick Fisher sank a crisp jump shot in the final seconds of an overtime game to give Tennessee a 70-68 victory over Florida State in Knoxville.

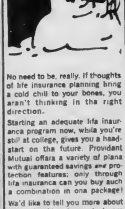
Dave Fedor was the man of the night as he meshed 29 points, his finest individual effort of the season. Fedor hit on 14 of 19 shots from the floor. Ray Swain chipped in with 19 points.

The score of the game was tied six times before Fedor hit on a two-pointer with a minute left in the game. Then the Volunteer's Bob Carter came up with the tying basket and put the game into overtime. Thus put FSU's record at 4-6 for the season.

Rule Violation May Kill BSU Mural Win

Intramural football games have resulted in three forfeitures and one actual game during the past ten days. The results of the lone game played between the BSU and CLO may yet to be certified due to a rules violation.

An ineligible player on the BSU squad may result in that team being forced to forfeit their 32-6 win to the CLO.



A check of players soon after the game showed that the BSU eleven had a member on their squad who had not registered to participate in intramural football activities. The player was Pete Sackman.

A meeting of the dorm independent today will decide the official outcome of the game.

Several more football games are scheduled as that sport draws to a close in the mural schedule of events.

At a meeting yesterday, mural officials set up the schedule for the next events, badminton and bowling. The schedule is not yet available.

FSU Meets Miami Saturday, Seminoles Sport 4-6 Slate

By BILL VERIGAN
Flambeau Sports Writer

Florida State's cagers, sporting a 4-6 record before last night's game with Loyola of Louisiana face the Miami Hurricanes on Saturday night.

The Hurricanes won 23 games out of 27 starts last year and earned an NCAA tourney bid. The Miamians averaged 80.9 points a game to be ranked second in the nation in that department.

I.D. CARDS, ACTIVITY BOOKS NEEDED

Students will need both their activity books and their student identification cards to get into the FSU-Miami game Saturday night.

Since there will be a large turnout, students should come early to insure themselves a seat.

All five first-stringers, including All-American guard, Dick Hickok are back this season. Hickok, a five-foot, six-inch sharpshooter has averaged 20.2 points a game in his two years of college basketball. This average was twenty-fifth in the country last season. In addition to Hickok, a seven foot, one inch gargantuan has been added to the 'Canes roster.

Last night the Seminoles played Loyola. The Shreveport team had a 4-7 record before the game. Three tough SEC teams, Mississippi, Mississippi State and Alabama are listed among their victims.

ABOUT MIAMI

The 'Canes have won the Florida Intercollegiate basketball title for the past three years, tied the year before against FSU who dropped out of the conference after the third year Miami draws upon the experience of six basketball coaches this season. The coaches are Art Webb, Tom McCann, W. H. Steere, Hart Morris, Dave Wike and Bruce hale. Together they have been with the Hurricanes for a combined total of 25 years.

ABOUT FLORIDA STATE

Florida State goes against Miami with a 4-6 average for the season. The tribe has victories over Tampa, Kentucky, and two wins over Clemson. They have been defeated by Vanderbilt, Auburn, Florida, South Carolina, Georgia and Tennessee.

Florida State is led by Dave Fedor in the total points and rebounds column. He has hit 80 times from the floor for a 40.7 per cent average. He has a total of 187 points. Fedor has brought the ball off the backboards 124 times.

Ray Swain leads in shooting accuracy. He has hit 53.5 percent of his total shots.

The hoopsters from Florida State have scored 665 points as compared to 675 for their opposition.

The FSU-Miami series currently stands at 13-4 in favor of the Hurricanes. Miami has scored 1733 points as compared to 1363 points made by FSU during the games played.

The Loyola-Florida State match last night renewed a colorful series between the two schools.

This will be the 19th time the two teams have met on the basketball floor and it will be the fourth time that FSU has played at home this season.

Last year Loyola and the Seminoles divided two games with Florida State taking the first decision 69-50 on their own home court. Loyola won the second of the two encounters, on their home floor.

In the 18 game series Loyola holds a whopping lead. They have clinched 12 victories against five losses.

Frosh Cagers Meet GC Sat.

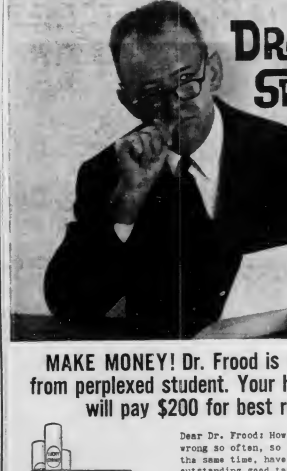
Florida State's frosh hoopsters meet the Gulf Coast Junior College Saturday at 3:30 in a preliminary to the FSU-Miami game.



The freshmen meet Gulfcoast with a 3-1 record for the season. Florida State holds an 86-59 win over Gulfcoast from the first of the season. Other wins for the Seminoles are over Manatee, 91-44 and Chipola, 67-42. The only loss this season has been to the University of Florida.

The squad from Panama City meets the Seminoles with the hope of reveaging their earlier loss to FSU.

Florida State will rely considerably on the performance of Bobby Lovell from Chattanooga, Tenn., during the game. Lovell is the only player for Gulfcoast whose scoring has run into two columns. He holds an average of 17.5 points per game. He has netted 55 percent of his floor shots.

"42 years with chalk on my sleeve"

The story of a man who was a national hero for 42 years and never knew it!

"I've been a schoolteacher for 42 years. Now they're trying to tell me that I'm a hero, too—me, a national hero, for teaching geometry!

"Lately, there's a lot of talk about education, being America's last defense. All of a sudden, we teachers are in the spotlight—heroes of America's future security! someone called us the other day. It really makes you stop and think.

"Frankly, I've never felt much like a hero. Certainly there were times when I didn't act like one—times when I almost quit teaching for a job with more money or position. But each time I started to dream about the extra things I'd be able to give my own children, I'd remember the other young folks in our town—the slow child who needed help after class . . . the quick one who needed encouragement. To compete for a scholarship . . . the typical student who had to be shown how exciting learning can be. I guess I knew all along I could never really leave them.

"That's why it's so hard to think about retiring, especially now, when America needs good schooling more than ever. Luckily, I know I'll still be able to play an important part in the fight for better education. You don't have to be a teacher or even a parent to work for revised curricula, higher standards of student achievement or improved status, prestige and training for teachers. People just like you and me are working toward these goals all over the country."

We must have first rate schools, not only to prepare our children for all branches of higher learning, formal and informal, but also to make them well-informed adult citizens. An educated America is a free America.

In Report From Dr. Hunt

Academic Honor System Asked Of Faculty, Student Senate

By GLENDA POWERS
Flambeau Staff Writer

A proposal for an academic honor system at Florida State University was presented to Student Senate yesterday in a report by Dr. Kellogg Hunt, chairman of the committee to study and recommend changes in the honor system.
The academic honor system, if adopted by Student and Faculty Senates and approved by the Student Body, would replace the present honor system which deals with "lying, cheating, and stealing."

Committee Rejects Nu Delta Appeal

The Faculty Fraternity Committee rejected the appeal of the men known as Iota Nu Delta members for recognition as a local fraternity, Dean of Men Donald Loucks revealed.
According to Hal Smith, IFC advisor, the group of students originally sought to colonize as a local chapter of Delta Upsilon, a national fraternity. The national group was not interested at the present.
In reaching its final decision, Loucks said, the committee reviewed the accomplishments and problems of present fraternities.
Part of the fine reputation now enjoyed by them is the result of interested and dedicated alumni who give their time to advising officers nf their respective fraternities, he remarked.

FINANCIAL SECURITY

Another reason, he added, is concerned with financial responsibility. The central offices of the national fraternities provide procedures and practices ready-made to assure successful operation in this area.
In times of adverse financial conditions, the national fraternity has a distinct advantage over a local one, he said.
Loucks pointed out that housing for fraternities at FSU in the years ahead promises to be a major problem and participation of national offices in this problem is almost mandatory.
This aspect of fraternity life poses a problem which could very quickly place a local fraternity under severe handicaps, he claimed.
The committee commended the five men who started Iota Nu Delta and Major Glen Smith, who was helping the group to organize, but said it felt "the only wise, fair, appropriate step at this time is to reject the appeal of the men known as Iota Nu Delta for recognition as a local fraternity."

Police Solve Xmas Robbery

An estimated $1,000 worth of property stolen from the Delta Delta Delta and Kappa Alpha Theta sorority houses during the Christmas holiday has been recovered by police.
The property was identified by Sgt. Earl Rayborn and Officer Yester Kelly. Most of the stolen items were found in the apartment of a 21-year-old Negro woman, who is being held for investigation of theft. Police indicate that other arrests may be made.
The articles recovered include a console model hi-fi set, a record player, 31 records, a portable typewriter, a radio, television set, three sweaters, and a car coat. Other clothing was later discovered in another Negro woman's apartment.
The police expressed surprise that anyone would risk stealing something as large as the hi-fi set which required at least two people to carry it.
The thefts were reported last Wednesday when students returned to school from the Christmas holidays.
The police recovered the stolen property by Saturday. They are still investigating how and when the houses were entered.
The sorority houses are left without occupants over the entire holidays and according to Sgt. Rayborn, "Some type of protection is needed, but the police force must take care of all of Tallahassee."

Choral Group Gives Concert

A concert of choral music from the Renaissance and Baroque periods will be presented by the choir of the Collegium Musicum tonight at 8:15 in Opperman Music Hall.
The Collegium Musicum was organized last summer by Dr. John F. Spratt of the Florida State University music faculty. Its purpose is the performance of unusual types of music from all eras.
The Collegium Choir, directed by Robert Wortman will sing Bach's motet "Jesu, meine Freude" for which soloists will be Patty Sue McCarty, Sallie McSwain, Miriam Williams, Leland Fox and Arthur Lawrence.
Other works on the program include selections by Vecchi, de Lassus, William Byrd and Josquin des Pres.
Wortman, a graduate assistant in history of music at FSU, is on leave of absence from the faculty of Baylor University, Texas.

Tally-Ho

Anyone who has reserved a copy of this year's TALLY-HO and who will not be back second semester must leave their name and address in the Student Activities Office, Room 20, Longmire before leaving.

Miss Tally-Ho: Cissy Mansour

A freshman pledge of Kappa Delta sorority has been chosen Miss Tally-Ho for 1961.
Photographs of Cissi Mansour will be featured in a special section of the 1961 yearbook.
The fashion merchandising major was sponsored by Broward Hall. She is interested in singing, dancing and modeling.
Members of the court are Gaye Boardman, Pinky Clough, Linda Gormley, Alta Hales and Linda Jackson.
More than 150 coeds entered the beauty competition. Preliminary judging was on the basis of face, figure, poise and grooming.
Final judging was on the basis of photographs of the finalists, with photogenic qualities being of major importance.
Contest judges were photographers and members of the administration.
Last year's Miss Tally-Ho was Liz Blume.

Draft Return Requested

Dr. William Randel, editor of Publications of the Faculty, requested that all carbon copies of typed drafts be returned to him at once since copy will go to the printer next week.
Dr. Randel said abstracts and reviews had to be omitted. Since a biennial listing may be made standard practice, publications now "in press" will be omitted from the present edition.
It may be possible for individual faculty authors to check the galleys when these are ready. Dr. Randel said. The date will be announced later.

Shelly Berman

The Cumberland 3

According to Hunt, his committee feels that the chief weakness of the present FSU honor system lies in the lack of understanding as to what offenses come under it. In an effort to eliminate this misunderstanding and create an effective system, the committee made its "somewhat radical" proposal, he said.
Concluding the reading and explaining of the report, Hunt turned to Senate, "It is your report to do as you like; the committee has done the best it knew how, and now we turn it over to you."

FACULTY ACTION

Specific parts of the proposed system refer to actions by the faculty and will be presented for Faculty Senate's approval at its Wednesday meeting.
These proposals make it the responsibility of faculty members to report instances of academic dishonesty to the student Honor Court and stipulate that instructors will not remain in classrooms for the purpose of proctoring examinations.
The latter stipulation excludes those given to entering freshmen before classes begin and exams prepared by agencies outside this university, if proctoring it is required by such agencies.
Whereas lying, cheating, and stealing are considered infractions of the present honor system, the proposed system shall apply to academic dishonesty alone.
This is not done, according to the committee, because other offenses are honorable or unimportant, but to reduce the area of misunderstanding and increase effectiveness.

DISHONESTY DEFINED

Academic dishonesty as defined in the proposal, will include referring to written information not specifically condoned by the instructor or receiving written or oral information from a fellow student.
It will also include plagiarism or stealing, buying, selling, or referring to a copy of any examination before it has been administered. Any student assisting in academic dishonesty or possessing strong evidence that an offense has been committed will be considered equally guilty.
Under the new system, every member of the student body, by his enrollment at this university, subscribes to the following: "I pledge myself to uphold the highest standards of academic honesty and to report to the Student Honor Court any infractions of academic honesty which come to my attention."
If the proposal passes Student and Faculty Senates, it will be submitted to the Student Body for a vote. According to a stipulation by the committee, unless 80 per cent of the voting students approve the change, the proposal will not be adopted. Without an overwhelming majority of students wanting the responsibility for an honor system, the committee felt it would lack effectiveness.

TRIAL PROCESS

Trial procedures are relatively unchanged by the committee, in that infractions of academic honesty shall be tried by the Honor Court which will meet to try each case within six school days after it has been reported.
The Honor Court will consider all pertinent information including the testimony of any witness and documentary evidence provided by papers and books in determining guilt or innocence.
The decision of the Court is to be reported by the Chief Justice to the instructor of the course in which dishonesty is alleged to have occurred and notice of con-

Cumberland Three, Berman Appear Here

By PATTY PACHLER
Flambeau Staff Writer

The Student Artist Series will present Shelley Berman and "The Cumberland Three" at 8:15 p.m. Feb. 15 in Westcott Auditorium.
Tickets for the performance will go on sale Feb. 6 at the Westcott Ticket Office. The tickets will be $2 and coupon No. 2 for students and $4 for others.
Students are asked to pick up their new activity books at the Ticket Office as soon as they have paid their fees so the lines will not be long and slow when tickets go on sale, said Mrs. Kay Vernon, director of special events.
Berman, a young monologist-humorist, enchants his audiences with pin-point satire of things encountered in the daily routine of life. Many of his one-sided stories have already become classics in American humor.

BERMAN'S VOICES

Perched on a stool using a make-believe telephone in many routines, Berman speaks with the voice of the party-goer floored by his morning after recollections, the frantic guy who can't get the small boy on the other end of the line to put his mother on, and the worried first-time plane passenger.
He is also the inhibited fumbling boy friend whose efforts at whispering sweet words of love fall flat, and the pathetic young swain trying to straighten out a difference with his sweetheart.
His first album, "Inside Shelley Berman" was the first spoken word album to become a national best-seller. Since then he has made two more albums, "Outside Shelley Berman" and "The Edge of Shelley Berman."

VARIED JOBS

Before attaining success in the show-business world, Berman worked at a variety of jobs. He was a dancing instructor, a cab driver, a resort events director, and the assistant to the assistant manager in a drug store.
Berman, however, wanted to be an actor and kept trying to break into the theater. He played roles in the movies, on television and in summer stock. He developed his solo routine while working with a group of youngsters who did improvisations in a cabaret in Chicago.
After a four-weeks performance at Mister Kelley's in Chicago, Berman appeared on the Jack Paar show. Since then he has appeared at the Blue Angel, the Waldorf-Astoria, on the Steve Allen Show, the Ed Sullivan show and has been touring the country.

A FUNNY VICTOR

About himself Berman says, "You must realize, I'm not a comic. I'm an actor who deals in funny material. Oh, I guess perhaps I sometimes act like a comedian but I tell you at the bottom I'm not a comedian."
A business associate described him this way: "The Shelley Berman you see on the stool, bring's witty and incisive as he is, represents approximately 10 per cent of the man. One day you will see the rest of him, the actor, the writer, the producer, the director."
Appearing with Berman is one of America's newest singing trios, "The Cumberland Three." This group of modern folk-song stylists, formed less than a year ago, has already scored hits with its record album, "Folk Scene, USA" and in various night clubs.
Known for their record, "The Battle of New Orleans," the Trio sang at the Southern Universities Student Government Assn. convention in Jackson, Miss., last year.

Months Of Work Are Futile?

Months of concentrated work have come to an abrupt halt as members of the student union planning committee have been confronted with a surprise element in the Federal Housing Administration loan which only permits a 75 per cent loan on student unions.

This means that Florida State University will have to guarantee a 25 per cent downpayment on the total $2.8 million proposed for construction of the urgently needed facility—a sum which it does not have at the present and can not pretend to supply for at least three or four more years.

THIS ALSO MEANS that those members of the administration, the faculty and the student body who have worked so hard toward reaching completion of their plans, are now faced with the stark reality that there is really little more they can do as far as building a union this year is concerned. The end they have worked so hard to achieve is literally being pushed just beyond their grasp.

The executive committee has met, however, and has decided to continue to work on the building until the last possible minute and attempt to find a means for financing the multi-million dollar project. If the loan is not taken for the student union, it can be taken for use on building more dormitories at its full 100 per cent value—unless the administrative requirement is changed again.

THE COMMITTEE would like to increase the allotment within the $3 million loan to give even more to the student union project so that the union will be able to build more profit making areas to help pay off the final loan. It will also attempt to get the federal agency to agree to reducing the 25 per cent downpayment requirement. It hopes to be able to postpone the loan long enough to work out all these details. At present, the loan should be applied for before the end of this fiscal year.

The committee can always train others to fill in the gaps as members eventually graduate, but there is always the danger that the same spirit and capable work will not come out of a group that has not worked so closely as the present one.

INCREASING CONSTRUCTION costs and different university needs will have to be faced when another committee is ready to again begin work on a student union for this campus. New means of financing will have to be sought and at a higher cost to the university. The reports and plans of this committee will make interesting reading three years from now, but they will by that time be somewhat outdated.

It is inevitable that the rate of growth and the increasing need for more facilities, such as student cafeterias, will make it necessary to build these soon, and it is foolish to build dining rooms other than in a student union which calls for them in its basic construction plan.

HOWEVER. ONE aspect of the overall student union plans will not be abandoned. Student government and the student union committee will continue to work out details of financing for the proposed swimming pool and build it as soon as possible, regardless of when actual construction starts on the student union.

We can hope that the progress that has been made has not been futile, for it will be extremely difficult to begin all over again, and would merely postpone needlessly the construction of a badly needed area on the FSU campus.

Nazis Feel 'At Home' In Va.

Arlington, Virginia. A fine old name on the map of America. A city rich in history in a state that can claim many famous, dedicated men among its native sons.

From Arlington comes the National Socialist bulletin, organ of the American Nazi movement. This National Socialism idea is the same one that brought Germany to the very depths of national degredation and made murder big business in Europe. And this publication came through the mail from Arlington. The thought of later day Nazi storm troops in the streets of that historic city, with their barbed-cross armbands and poisonous hate slogans is enough to make the most indifferent draft-dodger retch.

ONE LINCOLN ROCKWELL is "Commander" of these home-owned and operated Nazis. The national secretary is Roger Foss, a Marine Corps veteran—if the bulletin can be believed at all. It is no credit to the state of Florida that he supposedly fought here as a professional boxer at one time.

And these American Nazis have learned from Hitler. They have learned that violence is most useful to National Socialism. Violence intimidates, and paves the way to a program of hate, enslavement and terror. Ridicule is another Hitlerite weapon this Dracula party has adopted. Ridicule can drive members from opposing groups. Ridicule, if blatant enough and false enough but built around a tiny grain of truth, can be used to destroy enemies of the movement.

If these shoddy imitators have given the Hitler tactics the attention that you might expect them to have given, then they can be expected to stoop to the frame-up, extortion and blackmail of the lowest order to remove unfriendly persons from positions of power. The Nazis were good at filling a vacuum. With what, was not especially important. It was enough that the position in question be vulnerable to Party penetration at the opportune moment.

AND THE NAZIS are smart in their fanaticism. They are quick to seize on any opportunity to show themselves in opposition to persons and institutions that take an unpopular stand in the face of obvious opposition. The foolish are lured into closer contact with an organization that appears to give valiant support to the individual's own special interests.

The Negro, the Jew and the Communist Party are special targets of the Nazis, but such is the cynicism of the two political units that they are not adverse to coalitions which would weaken mutual enemies. Racial organizations are plums to these ideological wolves . . . who go on spouting racist propaganda while wooing the gullible.

Such as this is what may in time cause America to decide it can no longer afford the luxury of allowing such parties to exist under nominal restraints. And if such becomes the case, will America not lose morally? Yet, if such movements are allowed to grow from embryo force to the monster proportions of the 1935-1945 period, will they not pull this nation to destruction with them, as they must surely fail?

Book Review

New Books On The Market

This is meant to be a review of, or better perhaps, a calling of attention to a number of relatively good books currently available to readers.

There is, for the admirer of the Blad, Robert Graves' updated The Anger of Achilles, replete with some of the most sharply drawn illustrations since John Held, Jr., played shrike to the flappers of the twenties.

IF YOU PREFER your reading to be something less than soothing, yet not the adventures of another fictitious private eyeson, try Leslie Fiedler's No! In Thunder or the same author's Love and Death in the American Novel.

The late, great James Agee wrote with a steady passion whether reviewing films for various magazines, writing screen plays in Hollywood, or probing the plight of the southern sharecropper. For quality and sensitivity, Agee is a name that will have to be paid for in the future of American letters. If your interest in films goes deep enough that you can look at the motion picture art; care that it has responsibility and glints of something indescribably fine, try Agee's Agee on Film. And there remain his A Death in the Family and Let Us Now Praise Famous Men, the latter sure to be praised or damned by any south wherever persons of little judgment gather.

HENRY L. SCHRIB'S The Rise and Fall of the Third Reich is notable. It has the impersonal "leave-it-to-happen" air which history, when it is presented en masse, should have. Read this one and see what you think of the Nazi rallies in America today.

It's A Post Office?

By BONNIE PERRY

"Neither rain, nor snow, nor gloom of night shall stay these couriers from the completion of their route . . ."

The mail must go through! . . . Or so somebody said. The Florida State University Post Office, however, has added the word "eventually."

ACCORDING TO Post Office personnel, the mails are supposed to be in the mailboxes at Dr. Dodd's . . . 10 a.m., 2 and 4 p.m. Student experience as that seldom is the mail up at this time, but from one to two hours later.

This procrastination possibly can be forgiven, because "eventually" the mail does get into the boxes. But what can't be forgiven is the lack of courtesy on the part of Post Office employees in dealing with students.

BUYING A MONEY is a real ordeal in that students must wait until employees find the time from a gab session to sigh reluctantly and make a sale.

Congress repeatedly blasts the fact that the Post Office operates at a loss. Perhaps better salesmanship might make a difference. The best salesmen have a ready smile, not a grimmace.

Getting a parcel too large for the box away from the University Post Office is a tug of war. I sometimes think that a serve-yourself deal would be better for all concerned. Should a student be fortunate to trap someone in the cage into getting his parcel, the student should be prepared to duck when the parcel come flying through the air at him. Its rough on parcels, not to mention students.

NOW IN ALL my experiences at FSU, I have found that some of the trouble with University personnel is due to student nastiness. Perhaps here lies the trouble with the Post Office. The student should be reminded that one can catch more flies with sugar than vinegar. In other words, try being pleasant to folks and you might get further.

Nevertheless, this does not give the Post Office employees the right to be first - class grouches. Indeed, they aren't living up to the ideals of public servants.

The next time sugar is on sale, I'll make a present of five pounds to the University Post Office.

Mass May Ignore Reasoning

By AP ZIJLSTRA

Sometimes there seems to be a clash between liberal intellectuals and dogmatic politicians. The politician in such a case is very likely to use emotive words such as Communism—as in the case of the McCarthy terrorism. The politicians fear for the intellectual is probably based on the fear that the masses may forsake him if he gives in to reasonable judgment.

THE PRESIDENT-DESIGNATE of the Florida Senate, Randolph Hodges said he would sponsor, and expected to pass, a bill which would provide for the firing of any professor and expulsion of any student at state supported universities who advocate or participate in racial demonstrations, such an lunch counter sit-ins.

If the demonstrations were unlawful Hodges would not need this bill since the demonstrators would land in jail anyway. The question here is not whether: e.g. sit-ins are good or bad, but whether the policy of the school should be determined by the state.

We criticize Russian universities for not interfere mutrafied by the Red government; looking at McCarthyism and Hodgesism we don't seem to do much better. We criticize European countries for being too socialistic, but though virtually all universities in Europe are state subsidized, the government does not interfere mutrafied by the academic freedom.

THE MATTER at stake here is, of course, integration. Happily enough Hodges fights a losing battle against the Supreme Court. He said: "Lawyers I have talked to have advised me that any effort to subsidize private schools to preserve segregatuon would be thrown out by the U. S. Supreme Court," and one wonders about his insielligence if he had to ask his lawyer for the obvious. Hodges is an advocate of States Rights which seems currently to be interpreted as the right of the state to be unrighteous. In the American Constitution meant to be interpreted at random by the states? I thought about this when, on Christmas day, I was standing at the southernmost point of the Manhattan waterfront.

THE STATUE of Liberty stretched her hand toward the setting sun with the green garden path over the undulating water surface. The French must have had Jeanne d'Arc in mind when they gave us this symbol of freedom. They named one of their settlements after her home-town, New Orleans. Their descendr must have forgotten all about it, their hopes and philosophies. Funny that the ones who are mostly concerned in the matter—the pupils in the elementary schools—don't even know that a little bit more pigment seems to make all the difference; not to mention professors and students at the universities who are the last to protest against integration.

When are we going to show that America is not as decadent as some hysterical housewives, white sheeted clowns and fatuously insipid politicians want it to be.

I am glad those politicians will have to consult their lawyers to find out what these adjectives mean.

Physics Teachers Explain Homelands

By LESLIE POWELL

For the larger portion of three days last week, I spent every possible minute in the company of the eight visiting physics teachers from six nations who were in Tallahassee for a short stay prior to a 16 day tour of studying the teaching of science in Florida high schools.

And seldom have I had such a pleasant time or spent that time in the company of more friendly people. Mohammed R. Bayanati of Iran, Tin Pe from Burma, Antonio Alaro of Peru, Paola Sciara, from Italy, and Lodvig Halldorason from Iceland each furnish memorable moments of comment on a variety c. subjects. None of which bordered on physics as such . . . I know when I am out of my league.

THAT THERE sometimes seemed to be a tangle of accents which were responsible for a little confusion is, to my way of thinking, half the fun. When introduced to Antonio, who by way of greeting said "How do you do?" I thought . . . cond that that was his n . . The silly look on my face got silier when I realized the mistake.

Antonio and I talked of Latin American campus life and the riots that greeted Mr. Nixon in the Latin countries.

Over the years rumors have drifted back of the military friends that Iceland is peopled with beautiful girls. And from the name of the nation I concluded that the lovelies shared their North Atlantic island with icebergs and polar bears. Ludvig answered my question with "I think a major reason that Icelandic girls are regarded as beautiful is that most can afford to dress nicely and do." He corrected my bright remarks re the ice in Iceland. It exists, he says, largely in the name of the island. I forgot to ask about polar bears, and it is just as well.

PAOLA WAS the quietest and most shy. A small girl, Paola possessed a share of the incandescent beauty so often associated with European women. Watching her, it struck me that the difference between American girls and those with European backgrounds, is perhaps in the way that the European girl appears to move so gracefully. Is it an easy, graceful carriage that American girls have to cultivate? It was novel and a little restful that not nce did Paola sound across the table.

Tin Pe, the Burmese teacher, and I again talked of women. If you saw the film The Purple Plain, you surely will recall the beautiful Burmese actress, Wai Wai Than. I enthused at length, but Tin Pe brought me to earth again by commenting that she was not typical of Burmese women . . . or did he? Maybe they have other beliefs away at home?

I spent more time with Mohammad. His interest in everything was eager and avid. English was fine; I noted his interest that I understood . . . he was saying it with much poise ease than I understand. A fellow from Alabama. And am a born chattin' bloke from way back.

IN THREE DAYS of more or less steady conversation, I stopped to look up only a word. . . in trying to describe various and assorted local personalities, I relied heavily on the word, "peculiar" which Mohammad did not dig. He said he was fond of taking note of his fellow travelers and the words "See you later, alligator." I assume that is one of the things he learned in his three-month stay in Pittsburgh or some such place.

Having once asked a New East student what he thought of the ruler in his homeland and being rocked on my heels with a violent denunciation of that ruler, the American government and most of the governments and nations in the western camp, I more or less expected the worst when I asked Mohammad the same question. Happily enough, he expressed sympathy for the aims of the Shah of Iran. He was pleased that the Shah is progressive. He knows that progress can come to Iran only with time and effort, and with the ben' intentions. He expressed his own eagerness to study in one of the more advanced nations, preferably the U.S.A., but if that is not possible then in Russia.

WE SPOKE OF the rising storm of nationalism in the Arab area around his country, and how nationalism has points and bad points, especially in regard to emotionalism. And of Israel and its background and established history, and a great many things pertaining to Iran itself.

I asked about Iranian oil and punishment of criminals. In the past a thief suffered first one hand being cut off for a second offense the remaining hand was cut off, and for the third offense the offender lost his head. Some practices are not completely gone, but are greatly modified. And while the custom may have seemed cruel and primitive man, there appears also to be thought to be a cold, determined logic involved.

I wish Mohammad could stay here and study Physics for as long as he wishes. I wish I could maintain him and the sponsorship that could enable him to stay in America. If he goes back to Iran after this tour, he must, by law, stay for two years before he can apply to come again. And I wish the same for all the others, if they have a desire to acquire the "civilization" they have heard about, mostly through anti-American propaganda.

Sports Before Finals

Florida State sportsmen and sporting enthusiasts [illegible] one last fling this weekend before settling down [illegible] University's most unsporting institution, final [illegible]nations.

[illegible] semester the grueling, bitter duels with paper and pencil [illegible] be prefaced by alluring contests guaranteed to rob one of his [illegible]ose.

[illegible]orrow night, the University of Miami and its basketball [illegible] featuring a midget shooter and a giant rebounder will [illegible] a fully Gym.

[illegible] years tilt will probably be every bit as close as last year's [illegible] UM coach Bruce Hale has everyone back from his squad [illegible] and a 23-4 worksheet and received an invitation to the NCAA [illegible]ment. Coach Bud Kennedy has a returning team also. [illegible]rida State has one advantage that could mean the difference, [illegible] defending home territory. The home court advantage is [illegible]ed to be worth between 7-10 points. And only Florida has [illegible]e tribe at home this season.

[illegible] Seminoles have posted a 3-1 record at home defeating [illegible] Clemson and Loyola While on the road FSU has garnered [illegible]uccess against four defeats.

[illegible]rida, indicently, set the Hurricanes back to the tune of 81-73 [illegible]Wednesday night encounter. Miami defeated the Gators twice [illegible]ason.

Swimmers Win Again

[illegible]rida State's perennially powerful swimming team opened [illegible]ason and closed out the semester in the same evening [illegible]ming night.

[illegible]es, who has his name on six school records, broke his own [illegible]s the 200 yard individual medley by turning in a time of [illegible] his best his former record of 2:14.8 which he set last season. [illegible]n Pyrkko also set a meet and school record in the 200 [illegible]terfly with a time of 2:19.8. This shaved .1 of a second [illegible]Buck Hiles' record of 2:10.9 in that event. Hiles set the [illegible]ring his sophomore season in which he made the All-[illegible]ican team.

[illegible]e freshmen squad matched the varsity total in swamping [illegible]ulldogs frosh. This year's frosh squad is deeper and possibly [illegible]than any freshman team in the history of FSU.

[illegible]ach Bill Stultz's strong team does not hit the tanks again [illegible]ch 2 when they invade the Southwestern Conference to take [illegible]of the best of that conference.

[illegible]e Seminoles meet Southern Methodist University in their first [illegible]who shapes up as their toughest opponent of the year. [illegible]mished in the top ten of the nation's swimming squads and [illegible]minally the top team in that conference.

[illegible]e next night Florida State meets Texas A&M. at College [illegible]f Texas.

A. SN'S Meet Saturday

[illegible]da State fans will get one more chance to witness a grid-[illegible] before the spring Saturday. Sigma Nu meets Kappa [illegible]r their annual Charity Bowl clash at Campbell Stadium.

[illegible] fraternities claim a wide assortment of athletes, past and [illegible]on their roster and both claim to be training hard for the [illegible]. There will be parties afterward to give them a chance to [illegible]cramming quickly.

[illegible]Snakes of Sigma Nu elaim five athletes who played some [illegible]ter ball at Florida State.

[illegible]ey are: Walt McCrory, a 172-pound center from Ft. Lauder-[illegible]o made the Catholic All-State team in high school; Pete [illegible]n end from Hollywood; Fred Rowe, end from Tampa; [illegible], guard from Ft. Lauderdale; and Jim Richards, a quarter-[illegible]m Pensacola who played for the Cherry Point Marines for [illegible]easons.

[illegible]er outstanding Snake players include Tom Roback, a half-[illegible]e was All-City at Passaic, N. J.; Andy Thomas, a quarter-[illegible]om Miami and Richard Zipperer, a halfback from Port St. [illegible]e made All-Big Bend in high school.

[illegible]gma Nu coach Ben Thompson had an interesting playing [illegible]. He played under FSU coach Dick Flowers at Alabama [illegible]er under coach Vaughn Mancha at Livingston State Teachers [illegible].

[illegible] Kappa Alpha's also have an array of former frosh talent. [illegible]ong these are: Jim Kenree, a quarterback from Jackson-[illegible], Baker, a halfback, from Homestead who made the second [illegible] All-State team in high school; Ted Anderson, a halfback [illegible] Lauderdale who was All-State in high school and received [illegible]olarship from the University of Alabama before coming to [illegible]. Curtis Moseley, an All-City halfback in high school from [illegible]ville, and Mike Merley, a fullback from Tampa who played [illegible]ad at the first of the season.

[illegible]e outstanding players are Joe Antone, a 135 lbs. halfback [illegible]atholic All-State from Jacksonville; Gordon Johnson, a guard [illegible]om Beach who played at William and Mary for two seasons; [illegible] Miller, a quarterback from Starke; and Wink Meadows, a [illegible]ullback from Miami who made the All-City squad.

[illegible]da's coach is Bobby Renn. Renn is one of Florida State's [illegible]ng greats. He is now playing in Canada as a professional and [illegible]e Canadian League in touchdown passes caught and punting [illegible]ream.

Hurricanes Invade FSU Tomorrow, Seminoles Search For Sixth Victory

FSU Wins 66-28

Record Broken, FSUTopsGeorgia

By BILL GREENWOOD

Florida State University took its seventeenth consecutive dual swimming meet victory Wednesday night. The Seminoles outscored the Bulldogs of the University of Georgia 66-28.

In addition to the top score, Florida State swimmers broke three school and pool records during the contest. The team of Davis, Fisher, Combs and Butler set a new meet record in the 400 yard medley relay with a winning time of 4:08.1. A new meet, pool and school record in the 200 yard individual medley competition was set by Florida State's All-American senior Buek Hiles. Hiles' time in the swim was 2:09.8. With a winning time of 2:19.3, Ruis Pyrkko set a new meet and school record in the 200 yard division.

Florida State's swimming ability proved itself against the Bulldogs. The Seminoles of Tallahassee won nine out of eleven events.

In addition to tha first place wins, Florida State took seven number two wins. The Georgia Bulldogs copped four number two spots.

The meet provided some high excitement for about 500 FSU and U of G spectators who witnessed the two hour meet. Several contests resulted in endings so close that they required conferences between several judges to actually determine which team had won the match.

Following the varsity's example, the freshmen swimmers also took a decisive win over the Georgia frosh. Florida State swimmers won their meeting with the Georgia team 66-29, a score that almost copied their varsity brothers.

A young Florida State University quintet will be trying to even its record of 5-6 when they face Miami's Hurricanes here on Saturday night.

The Seminoles have defeated Tampa, Kentucky, Loyola of Louisiana and Clemson twice. They met defeat at the hands of Auburn, Vanderbilt, Florida, Georgia, South Carolina and Tennessee.

Miami holds an 8-4 record by notching wins over Rollins, Tampa, San Francisco, Fla. Southern, Army, Holy Cross and Miami of Ohio. The 'Canes lost to Santa Clara, Brigham Young, La Salle and split two games with Florida.

The two teams have played two mutual opponents. Tampa and Florida. FSU beat Tampa 88-60 while Miami smashed them 93-64.

The Hurricanes two games against Florida resulted in scores of 93-74 and 72-61. The Seminoles were defeated by the Gators 74-67.

The University of Miami is led by five foot, six inch Dick Hickox who has racked up 220 points. This elusive back court artist was chosen on several All-American teams. Virtually the same team as last year backs up the little man, who is the shortest on the 'Cane roster.

Miami's Jim Godfrey, Bruce Applegate, Julie Cohen and Mike McCoy will probably see action in the contest. McCoy is a seven foot, one inch giant. In his first year with Miami's varsity squad, he is the tallest man in the Hurricane lineup. Strong reserves also back up the starters.

Last year's Miami five had a 22-4 record. As a result of the fine season they were invited to participate in the NCAA tournament. They ranked second in the nation in scoring last year.

FSU will depend on the accuracy of Dave Fedor to a great extent. He has, bucketed 262 points for the tribe this season averaging 18.4 points per game. Fedor holds several records for the Seminoles and is the school's leading rebounder. The tribe will rely greatly on Feder's performance.

Second in the FSU points and rebound department is Ray Swain. He sports a 174 point for his total and a record of 94 rebounds. Dale Rickets, Charlie Long, Rufus Ashworth, Faurest Coogle and Jack Davis are also strong players for the Seminoles.

Florida State has scored 728 points while their opposition has recorded 720 nets. The Seminoles have an even 500 rebounds as compared to opponent's 507.

The tribe has won eight games against Miami, while dropping 14 contests in the series. The 'Canes have won only one game on the road and this may be an advantage for the FSU five. The tribe has won three out of four home contests. Their lone loss was to the University of Florida.

Height advantage goes to the Miamiuns. Only two men are under six feet tall. The short players for the 'Canes are Hickox and Bruce Shapiro. The UM taller players are McCoy, and Lou Alix. They measure seven feet, one inch and six feet, nine inches respectively.

The Seminoles only man under six feet is Jack Davis. FSU's tallest hoopster, Dave Fedor, is six feet, six inches.

A preliminary game will start at 5:30 between FSU's freshman team and the Gulf Coast Junior College of Panama City.

The frosh have a 3-1 record so far this season. They have wins over Gulf Coast, Manatee and Chipola. The only loss suffered by the frosh has been to the University of Florida.

"IT'S HERE—IF YOU WANT TO WORK FOR IT"

Even before Ron Spetrino received his engineering degree from Case he had good job offers from six companies.

He joined The Ohio Bell Telephone Company—his reason: "I was convinced an engineer could go further here—if he was willing to work for it."

As soon as Ron got his feet on the ground in telephone engineering, he was tapped for a tough assignment. The job—to engineer switching equipment modifications needed to prepare Cleveland for nationwide customer dialing of long distance calls.

Ron wrapped it up in five months, and found he had earned a shot at another tough assignment. In this job Ron helped engineer a completely new long distance switching center for Cleveland. This switching center connected Cleveland with the nationwide customer dialing network. It was about a year later that Ron put the finishing touches on the specs for this $1,600,000 project.

Today, as a Supervising Engineer, Ron heads a staff of five engineers and is responsible for telephone switching in much of the greater Cleveland area.

He supervises the design and purchase of $3 million worth of equipment a year. And even more important, he is charged with developing the technical and managerial skills of his staff.

Ron knows what he's talking about when he says, "In this business you have to do more than a good job. We expect a man to be a self-developer. We expect him to take responsibility from his first day on the job and think for himself. You don't get ahead around here by just doing time."

If you want a job in which you're given every chance to prove yourself, and real responsibility right from the start—you'll want to see your Placement Office for further information.

"Our number one aim is to have in all management jobs the most vital, intelligent, positive and imaginative men we can possibly find."

Brahms Featured By FSU Symphony

The University Symphony, conducted by Robert Sedore, will present its winter concert Monday with Jack Peterson as guest pianist playing Brahms' Concerto No. 1 for piano and orchestra.

John Boda of the Florida State University music faculty, a friend and colleague of the soloist, will conduct the orchestra for this number. Peterson, a doctoral student of Edward Kilenyi, is studying here while on leave as professor of music at Muskingum College, New Concord, Ohio.

The concert, which is free and open to the public, will be in Westcott Auditorium at 8:15 p.m.

Franklyn Carnahan of Cleveland, Ohio, who taught piano to both Peterson and Boda prior to their college days, will be present for the concert by his former students.

The original composition of another doctoral candidate, Frederick Mueller, will also be featured. Head of the Music Dept. at Spring Hill College, Mobile, Ala., Mueller will be present for the performance of his composition. The work, "Second Symphony" in four movements and the opening number on the program, Wagner's "Rienzi" overture, will be conducted by Robert Sedore.

A composition student of Dr. Boda, Mueller is a graduate of Julliard School of Music and the University of Houston (B.M.) and received the master of music in composition from Eastman School of Music. A graduate assistant in the FSU School of Music for the past two years, he has been bassoonist for both the Mobile and University Symphonies.

Peterson has renewed a friendship begun when he and Dr. Boda were with the Cleveland Orchestra. Boda was apprentice conductor in 1947 when Peterson won a competition and performed as soloist for the orchestra. Peterson holds the bachelor and master of music degrees from the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music.

PIANO SOLOIST . . . featured at the Winter Concert by the University Symphony, is doctoral candidate Jack Peterson (center) who will play Brahms' Cancerto No. 1 for Piano and Orchestra. Looking over the score with Peterson are Robert Sedore, left, conductor of the orchestra and Dr. John Boda, long time friend and colleague of Peterson who will be guest conductor for his performance with the University Symphony.

Coffee Hour Features Preu Talk On Swift

Dr. James Preu of the Florida State University English Department will discuss Gulliver's Travels, published in 1726, at the English Coffee Hour at 4 p.m. today in Westminster House.

The literary-social hour is open to the public.

He will describe both the use of comparison and contrast by Swift in achieving the effect of satire in the book.

"In 'Lilliput' where people are creatures only six inches tall, Swift uses their tiny size to make human vanity and pride ridiculous while in the land of the 'Brobdingnags' or giants, human physical grossness becomes hideous through exaggeration and human institutions become contemptible," Dr. Preu said.

"In 'Laputa,' the intellectual comes under Swift's satire and in 'Houyhnhnms,' a land ruled by horses, the loathsome Yahoos are more 'civilized' than mankind, because civilized men have just enough reason to increase and multiply their natural vices," he added.

The name "Gulliver" does not appear in the book itself and it was probably an afterthought on Swift's part, according to Dr. Preu, who said the original title of the book was Travels Into Several Remote Nations of the World by Lemuel Gulliver.

For Air Force

Leduc Tours Bases Located In Europe

Dr. Albert Leduc, professor of modern languages recently returned from a two-week tour of Air Force bases in Europe.

Dr. Leduc, a colonel in the Air Force Reserve, was one of six officers from the whole US chosen to make the "orientation" tour.

The officers were to report to the Pentagon their impressions of the military installations overseas and to inform the public and the community of their observations.

The three countries visited, England, France and Germany, all have fighter, bomber missile, or transport bases according to their proximity to the enemy.

FAVORABLY IMPRESSED

"As an American, I was very favorably impressed with the efficiency and very proud of the bases," recalled the professor of French.

Many Americans don't know why we have them there, he pointed out. "We depend very largely on the help of the French, the Germans and the English," he said.

The United States could not adequately maintain defense without having these bases in Europe.

Dr. Leduc, who has been connected with the Armed Forces for 28 years, did at all fed that our boys were getting lax in their precautions at these bases.

At one alert station, he and the commander walked in to meet the pilots on duty. One hotmeal. They were chatting relaxedly together; minutes later, the alert bell had rung and the men were in the air.

RELATIONS BETTER

Community relations, he said, are better among the military and citizens of these countries than between the tourists and the citizens. Two exceptions of which he was told, however, were the normal incidents such as auto accidents or boozing problems which involved both civilians and Americans. Each tended to be less tolerant of the other in these situations than they would have been with others of their group.

The second area of trouble was some of the Communist contrived incidents to provoke trouble.

One of the considerable problems of defense in other countries is that the Americans don't seem to know as many foreign languages as the Europeans. At some headquarters now, language classes are compulsory and in others are available.

"We need them — the French, the German, and the English. We are doing a very effective job with what we have and are well prepared," he concluded.

As Joe College And Betty Coed

Two FSU Students Attend World Premiere Of Movie

By BILL EGAN
As Told To Bonnie Perry

Four days before Christmas two Florida State University students were representatives to the world premiere of Where The Boys Are in Fort Lauderdale.

Bill Egan, who worked in the motion picture, and Gladys McCormick, were selected as official representatives from FSU to attend the opening.

The couple was chosen to lead the premiere parade of stars as "Joe College and Betty Coed." They received the "red carpet" treatment, only the carpet was composed of beach towels.

COLLEGE MOVIE

The movie is a tale about the mass migration of college kids to Fort Lauderdale during Easter holidays. The film was shot over the summer on Lauderdale Beach using the summer college migration as extras.

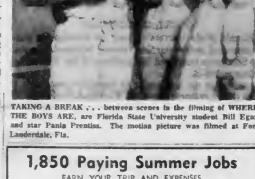
Thirteen other FSU students had parts in the movie, which will open in Tallahassee on Jan. 22. They are Thelma Smith, Bill Deitner, Dick Hume, Tom Fisher, Pat Helm, Bill Krausman, Berta Small, Charlie Minter, Ann Cornick, Walt McCrory, Ray Brennan, Pam and Phyllis Doud.

AND PAID, TOO

Egan describes the experience as being "overpaid and underworked." Extras received $10 a day and lunch. About the only drawback to the whole affair was working in the heat, says Egan. And to make matters worse, the movie crew set up ten feet square reflector mirrors to get the extra lighting necessary. They reflected heat, also, pointed out Egan.

Even though the student extras were novices in the movie-making business, they quickly learned the art of scene stealing. Every time Director Henry Levin called "cut" and asked for new positions for a new scene, Egan reports, the whole mob was afraid to move for fear someone else would get his choice spot before the camera.

OFF CAMERA



When the stars were off camera, said Egan, most of them were friendly, and ready to pass that time with the extras. Egan who was classed as a musician because of his ukelele playing did some off-camera entertaining while star Connie Francis added the vocal.

Other young stars in the movie are Paula Prentiss, Dolores Hart, Yvette Mimieux, Jim Hutton and George Hamilton.

NERVES SHATTERED

Waiting for the premiere preliminaries to finish, and finally see oneself on the screen, Egan explained, was a nerve shattering ordeal. But when the film finally appeared on the screen, Egan said the whole audience tensed for their own appearance. The theatre was filled with exclamations of "there I am . . . see me . . . there . . . there . . ."

After the film' showing, Egan and Miss McCormick were invited to a premiere party with the stars. Premieres, parties and stars; what better way to spend the holidays?

1961: YEAR OF DECISION

Well sir, here we are in 1961, which shows every sign of being quite a different year. First off, it is the only year since 1951 which begins and ends with the Figure 1. Of course, when it comes to Figure 1's, 1961, though distinguished, can hardly compare with 1911, which, most people agree, had not just two, but three Figure 1's! That, I'll wager, is a record that will stand for at least two hundred years!

1911 was, incidentally, notable for many other things. It was, for example, the year in which the New York Giants played the Philadelphia Athletics in the World Series. As we all know, the New York Giants have since moved to San Francisco and the Philadelphia Athletics to Kansas City. There is a movement afoot at present to move Chicago to Phoenix—the city, not the baseball team. Phoenix, in turn, would of course move to Chicago. It is felt that the change would be broadening for residents of both cities. Many Chicago folks, for example, have never seen an iguana. Many Phoenix folks, on the other hand, have never seen a frostbite.

There are, of course, certain difficulties attending a municipal shift of this size. For instance, to move Chicago you also have to move Lake Michigan. This, in itself, presents no great problem, what with modern scientific advances like electronics and the French draft. But if you will look at your map, you will find that Lake Michigan is connected to all the other Great Lakes, which in turn are connected to the St. Lawrence Seaway, which in turn is connected to the Atlantic Ocean. You start dragging Lake Michigan to Phoenix and, willy-nilly, you'll be dragging all that other stuff too. This would make our British allies terribly cross, and I can't say as I blame them, I mean, put yourself in their place. What if, for example, you were a British workingman who had been saving and scrimping all year for a summer holiday at Brighton Beach, and then when you got to Brighton Beach there wasn't any ocean? There you'd be with your inner tube and snorkel and nothing to do all day but dance the Lambeth Walk. This, you may be sure, would not make you NATO-minded.

I appeal most earnestly to the residents of Chicago and Phoenix to reconsider. I know it's no bowl of cherries going through life without ever seeing an iguana or a frostbite, but I ask you—Chicagoans, Phoenicians—is it too big a price to pay for preserving the unity of the free world? I am sure that if you search your hearts you will make the right decision, for all of us—whether we live in frostbitten Chicago, iguana-ridden Phoenix, or narrow-lapelled New Haven—are first and foremost Americans!

But I digress. We were speaking of 1961, our new year. And new it is! There is, for one thing, new pleasure in Marlboro Cigarettes. How can there be new pleasure in Marlboros when that fine, flavorful blend, that clean easy draw filter, have not been altered? The answer is simple: each time you light a Marlboro, it is like the first time. The flavor is such that we cannot wither nor custom stale. Marlboro never palls, never fades, never dwindles into dull routine. Each pack, each cigarette, each puff, makes you glad all over again that you are a Marlboro smoker!

So, Marlboros in hand, let us march confidently into 1961. May good fortune attend our ventures! May happiness reign! May Chicago and Phoenix soon recover from their disappointment and join our bright cavalcade into a brave tomorrow!

© 1961 Max Shulman

The makers of Marlboro and of the new unfiltered king-size Philip Morris Commander join Old Max in adding their good wishes for a happy and peaceful 1961.

Spring Colors Move To Shocking Realm

By ANNE CALVERT

As soon as females recover from the holiday season, their thoughts turn to clothes for Spring. The assault on papa's pocketbook this year, is being aided by store owners who put out Spring merchandise before the last Christmas decorations were down.

Local stores have taken on an all wide, with necklines loosely fitted.

New York are presenting styles which are a little extreme for college women. But modifications of those styles shou'd be "high fashion" here.

COLORS FULL OF LIFE

The colors for Spring are really full of life, and are guaranteed to make anyone stand out in a crowd! Have you ever seen anyone fade into the background in a shocking-pink dress? Pink is a color that will be seen quite a bit this Spring, along with the equally brilliant turquoise and canary yellow.

Leading designers are combining the colors, either by making separates or by accessorizing a one-color outfit with a sharply contrasting color.

TO BE DIFFERENT

If one desires to be really different, he could wear all three at the same time! A recent fashion show on campus advocated wearing a yellow skirt, a pink blouse, and setting the whole thing off with a turquoise sash. At least the outfit woke up the sleepers in the audience.

Lavender, so popular last year, is being carried over into the Spring lines. The ever-popular beige will be back, also.

Actual styles have changed little for the coming season. Hemlines are a bit higher; in some cases, above the knee. Skirts are pleated or flared, and collars are

This great seaborne health center will carry a new kind of aid abroad—with your help. Part of the people-to-people project Hope, it will enlist 200 specialists in sharing our health skills.

Ambassador with a blackboard, the Hope specialist will help the often woefully few local medical technicians train helpers. The result: many more hands. And that means one Hope dollar is multiplied many times over.

YOUR HELP CAN COME BACK A HUNDRED TIMES OVER

One local doctor for 100,000 people. These are the odds Hope may face. Yet Hope can mean so much. The health of this child. The health of five Indonesians. Trained hands and only a dollar's worth of penicillin can cure them of crippling yaws.

If enough of us help, the S.S. Hope will be outbound in 1960. First port of call: Indonesia. A bold health project called Hope will be underway.

The need is crucial. Many places, too many health hazards exist. Too many people robbed of the will to live. Too few hands to help. Often, a doctor for 100,000.

Hope's approach is practical. Help where a nation's doctors ask help. Help them help themselves to health. By training, upgrade skills—multiply hands. Hope's doctors, dentists, nurses, and technicians will man a center complete to 300-bed mobile unit and portable TV.

You can not only make every dollar do the work of many, you can earn a priceless dividend. With health comes self-respect. People at peace with themselves are less likely to war with others.

Hope is yours to give. It's a people-to-people project. For one year's worth, 3½ million Americans must give a dollar. Don't wait to be asked. Mail a dollar or more now to HOPE, Box 9808, Washington 15, D.C.

The committee recommended the establishment of an honor system committee, appointed by the President of the University to make a continuing study of the operation and effectiveness of the Honor System, to keep students and faculty members informed concerning the provisions of the system, and to make such recommendations as it may deem appropriate.

A junt faculty-student committee was appointed during the summer by acting FSU President Milton Carothers at the request of both student and faculty Senates. Hunt said the committee had been meeting regularly since early September in an attempt to develop a workable honor system.

You're driving into danger when troubles take the wheel! Park your troubles before you slip into the driver's seat. It's risky to let worries interfere when your sole problem should be how to drive safely. Last year, traffic accidents took 37,000 lives. Many of those responsible were drivers who let worries distract them from the road ahead. So when you drive, keep your mind where your car is—and keep on living.

Where traffic laws are obeyed and enforced, deaths go DOWN!

Theater First

Bowling To Give $12,000 For Play

The University Theatre performance of Assignment Judea March 1-7 will be an experiment in theater production which could begin a different way of trying out new plays.

It is the first time in the history of the American theater, a New York producer is granting funds to university to try out a play before its New York opening, Director Richard Fallon said.

Florida State University has received a grant of $12,000 from Producer Eddie Dowling to pay the professional talent for the lead roles in the premiere performance.

Fallon said the experiment could be a "most important new step" in getting down financial aid to producing a play by a playwright.

TEST FIRST

Most university facilities and personnel, the producers can test the play before an audience and make necessary revisions before moving it to New York

Many of the past playwrights have been capable of having their plays first performed by non-professionals, Fallon said.

The costs of preparing a show in New York production, to be staged professionally in other cities are prohibitive for plays which are not "sure-fire" successful, he explained.

SMALLER RISK

The producers will risk only $12,000 in the FSU venture, while a show is budgeted for the New York show.

Dowling, who discovered such playwrights as William Saroyan and Tennessee Williams and introduced Robert Evans and Sean Connery to the American stage, has been interested in finding a way to produce plays initially at less expense.

The opening night performance on March 1 is expected to attract many bookers from New York and Dowling himself will be on campus to supervise script changes and cast of the lead roles.

Also three other professionals will see the other leads. Khigh Dhiegh, an actor acclaimed in New York for his performance in Bertold Brecht's play, Io Jones and Player, has already been signed and will probably play the lead.

Dowling said a professional actress of the standing of Sylvia Sidney, Nina Foch or Gloria Swanson will play the lead.

Another professional will probably be cast as Pontius Pilate.

STUDENT PARTS

The remainder of the cast, including the parts of Judas, Caiaphas, centurion soldiers, two Herods, and others, will be student.

Fallon plans to under-study all professionals part to give student actors a greater experience in working with the actors. All rehearsals are open for observation.

During the week of performance, all professional theater people will conduct seminars which will be open to the public.

The first Student Senate meeting of the new semester will be Feb. 1 at 4:15 p.m. in the Senate Room of Longmire.

Apply Now: Asolo Festival

The Summer Sarasota Asolo Festival to be held June 11-Aug. 26 in Sarasota is now accepting applications.

Applications should have upper division classification and should select either Dr. Arthur Dorfag of the Speech Dept. or Richard Hills in the School of Music. The festival offers experience in the 17th and 18th Century theatre and may be taken as course for credit of nine semester hours.

Florida State University Players and Opera Guild and the Ringling and Mable Ringling Museum of Art sponsor the program.

The first four weeks are spent studying in Tallahassee and the next five and a half weeks in festival performing in Sarasota.

The Summer Festival was initiated last summer. The Asolo Theatre was first constructed in the palace of Queen Caterina Cornaro in Asolo, Italy in 1798.

In 1931 the State of Florida purchased the theatre and moved it to the Ringling Museum. It is the only 18th Century Venetian theatre in the U.S.

If Assignment in Judea arouses enough interest here, plans are to take it to Chicago.

The production will also be the first FSU tour play, Fallon said. The cast will present a minimum of nine performances in university and civic theatres in Central Florida March 9-22.

AUTHOR COMING

Author Patrick Welch is expected to arrive on campus about Feb. 8 to observe the production. A former banker, professional soldier and expert on Roman law, he has lived in Palm Beach since retiring from the U. S. Army in 1956.

Influenced by his study of Roman history, the play deals with political intrigue and personal relations surrounding the crucifixion, with new insight into the personalities of Judas and Pontius Pilate.

This is the second play given its premiere performance by the University Theatre, but The Morgan Rock, produced last spring, had no outside financial support.

If the venture is successful, Fallon hopes it will become an annual event.

PILATE, JUDAS, HEROD . . . and some other characters in the old historical drama of Easter show up under a new light in "Assignment in Judea," which will be produced here this March in advance of its Broadway presentation. Here Dr. Wayne Minnick, head of the Department of Speech, and Richard Fallon, director, look over the script for the new play by Patrick Welch. Broadway producer Eddie Dowling has put $12,000 into the FSU production, a unique laboratory premiere for the new play.

Insurance Is Now Available

Student Insurance will be sold today and tomorrow in room 408 of Longmire, announced Florida State University Secretary of Welfare Duncan Moore.

Moore said the insurance would cover a student from "the minute it was bought, through the summer until Sept. 14, 1961."

Reduced rates for one-half year's coverage will be $9 per single student; $29.50 for student and spouse; and $34.50 for student, spouse and dependents.

Should a student not be able to purchase the policy at this time, Moore said that he would be selling policies for several weeks hence.

Moore explained that a representative from Brown and Brown Insurance Co., Daytona Beach, agents of the Royal Indemnity Co., will be available to explain the policy today and tomorrow.

Moore pointed out the advantages of this year's company over last year's. He said that of the money paid in for policies, a certain percentage was set aside to cover claims. Any money left over from this percentage is to be given back to the FSU Student Government.

Psychologists Get State Aid

A grant of $2,000 has been received by two Florida State University psychologists from the Research Council of the Florida Board of Health for experiments in verbal conditioning therapy in mental patients.

Dr. Joel Greenspoon, associate professor, and Dr. H. L. Waskom, head of the Psychology Dept. at FSU will use 40 patients at the Florida State Hospital in Chattahoochee as subjects for the study. Graduate student assistant for the project will be Jim Fadigan.

Purpose of the research is to see if the delusional behavior of psychotic patients can be lessened by verbal conditioning procedures.

Rush And Scholarship

Panhellenic Meet Is Held Saturday

Recommendations for increased emphasis on scholarship and for pre-orientation rushing were made among key discussion topics at the annual Panhellenic Workshop Saturday.

Discussion of rush centered around the future possibility of having fall formal rush the week before classes begin, said Panhellenic President Fran Hall. This is done at many other colleges and universities, she said. Changing the rush schedule here would entail making arrangements with the administration to open dormitories a week early as well as opening other campus facilities early, she said.

Panhellenic will study the possibilities of scheduling rush earlier, Miss Hall said, adding that the change could not be made until Fall 1962.

Especially the Panhellenic procedures concerning distribution of party invitations and pledge bids it was recommended that an IBM method be used, said Miss Hall. Usually the preferential cards, invitations and matching are handled by Panhellenic.

Flambeau To Be Investigated

A committee to investigate the financial situation of the Flambeau has been appointed by Dean Government, President Carl Butler.

The committee is to determine whether the salaries now being paid are fairly distributed according to the amount of work involved.

Those selected for the committee are Myznon Champion, Don Thigpen, Bill McLemore, Bonnie Perry, Deanna Morris, Virginia Starrett, and Butler, chairman.

The IBM method might shorten the amount of time and the number of people needed for counting the paper-work involved in rush, she explained.

STUDY HALLS

Study halls and de-emphasis of activities were discussed as possible methods of improving scholarship among the sororities, said Hall. Setting of a limit on the number of sorority-fraternity exchange parties was also recommended.

During the luncheon session at the workshop Dean of Women Katherine Warren presented trophies to Kappa Alpha Theta for early, she said, scholastic average and to Alpha Xi Delta for the highest pledge class average for the Spring semester.

Mrs. Meyer Nimkoff, wife of the head of the Sociology Dept., and active alumna of Gamma Phi Beta, addressed the group at the luncheon.

Vanderbilt U. Airs Grants For Students Of Russian

Vanderbilt University, Nashville, Tenn., has announced a graduate program for 1961-62 leading to the master of arts degree in Russian language and literature as well as in related areas such as history and political science.

The university has a number of National Defense Education fellowships amounting to $2,250 plus allowances for travel and dependents available for students.

To qualify, applicants must have had three years of Russian language study (two years only for the areas of history and science) and a bachelor of arts degree or the equivalent.

Also available are a few Russian scholarships worth $1,750 for graduate study. A masters in teaching is offered for superior high school teachers interested in teaching Russian.

Anyone interested should contact Dr. Max Oppenheimer Jr. in the Modern Languages Dept. immediately. Deadlines for applying are Feb. 6 for NDEA fellowships and March 15 for others.

Student Dies In Accident

A Florida State University freshman was killed early Sunday in Lake City in an automobile accident in which another student was injured.

Richard Lee Harvey, 21, son of Patrolman R. W. Harvey, Birmingham, Ala., died when the car in which he was riding struck a power pole and tree at 1:55 a.m. Sunday

Driver of the 1956 Chevrolet sedan was Philip A. Browning, 20, sophomore from Lake City, who, Lake City police, said apparently lost control of the car at a railroad crossing.

The extent of Browning's injuries was unavailable here. He was taken to the University of Florida Medical Center for treatment.

Both students were residents of West Hall. Harvey was a former football and track athlete at a Birmingham high school. He was a business major.

Two non-student passengers in the car, Paul Barcia and James Moore, both of Lake City, escaped without serious injury.

Funeral services for Harvey will be held at 2 p.m. today at Roebuck Funeral Home, 9060 Galston Rd., Birmingham.

Phi Kappa Phi Initiates 12

Twelve new members have been initiated in the Florida State University chapter of Phi Kappa Phi, national honor society whose membership comes from all divisions of the university.

The honor society, founded in 1897, recognizes superior scholarship by electing to membership high ranking students in many fields of study.

Seniors who were initiated are Raffaele Biondi, Robert Gilliam, Marilyn Martin Lapicola, Ward E. N. Seric, James Ramsdell Stewart Jr., Dan Voich Jr., and Gary A. Watterson.

Graduate students initiated are Martha N. Boulknight, and Horace Gray. Three graduate students were initiated in absentia: George Joseph Goulette, John Gilliam Hughes Jr. and Eleanor Mary Ladd.

Stoakes Will Talk On Radio

Dr. Paul Stoakes, English professor who has just returned from the University of Damascus, will be heard on WFSU-FM at 7:45 tonight.

The program will be a recorded discussion made in Damascus of the program of "people to people" rapport between Florida State University and the Syrian school.

Participating with Dr. Stoakes will be Mrs. Olive Cross, on leave from the FSU English Dept. in her second year at Damascus, and Dr. William Kirk, cultural affairs officer at Istanbul for the U.S. Information Agency.

Dr. Stoakes spent two months in Damascus as a consultant to the Syrian Ministry of Education and Damascus University.

University Concert Band Presents Annual Concert

The Florida State University Concert Band will present a program at 8 tonight in Opperman Music Hall.

Robert T. Braunagel, assistant professor of music, will conduct the 95-piece band in the program which annually precedes the examination period.

Bach's "If Thou be Near" and Howard Hanson's "Chorals and Alleluia" will begin the concert. Pentrayals in music make up three other numbers to be performed.

They include "Frescoes" by Haydn Wood, and two movements: Vienna, 1913," and "The Bandstand at Hyde Park".

"Sunday Morning at Glion" is the tile of a pastoral-type piece on the program. "Cavalry of the Steppes", music of a martial nature by Lev-Rupper, will conclude this portion of the concert.

Music of a South American flavor will close the program when the Band will play "Latin Music" by Christopher Faul, and Glenn Osser's popular "Beguine for Band."

Both of these numbers feature the percussion section, which will augment itself with odd and colorful instruments not often heard.

The concert is free and open to the public.

Reception Held

A reception for graduates and their families will be held at Florida State University President Gordon Blackwell's home from 11 a.m. to 12 noon Jan. 28.

Dr. Howard M. Phillips, President of Alabama College, and an old friend of Dr. Blackwell's, will speak at the graduation exercises at 2 p.m. that afternoon in Westcott Auditorium.

Dr. Phillips taught for many years as a biologist at Emory University.

FSU Government Leaders Divided On Honor Code Report

BY JOAN ABBOTT
AND JOYCELYN WARD

Open discussion among student government leaders over proposed changes in the Honor System has already begun and may erupt further before any agreement is reached concerning modification of the system.

Less than a week after presentation of the faculty-student committee report on the honor system, the problems created or left unsolved by the report were described as "numerous" by various student government leaders yesterday.

The report was labeled "disappointing" by Attorney General Roy Mathis who said he had expected more "dynamic" changes would be recommended.

"The Honor System should be such that the court would be dynamic and the action that they take should be dynamic," Mathis said.

"The new system (proposed) is lacking in those essentials that make the court dynamic and therefore I'm fearful that the entire system may go by the wayside," he added.

"The court and its members should have a reputation for taking definite and speedy action against those who break the honor code," Mathis said.

WEAKENS COURT

The attorney general explained that by removing from the jurisdiction of the court lying and stealing, which are not now the problem areas, the court would be weakened. He added that the solutions proposed by the committee did not strengthen the court.

Mathis charged that even under the existing court, claims have been made to him that action had not been taken with due speed or within the six-school-day limit after the violation has been reported.

Whether or not the removal of lying and stealing from the system would strengthen or weaken it, however, was open to much debate. Several students agreed it would be better to limit the code to a definable area and therefore be more able to enforce it.

"Learning is the business of the University and for this reason restricting the Honor System to academic areas is best," Dr. Howard E. Bell of the Psychology Dept. said in what seems to approximate the position of the supporters of the revision.

The previous Honor System "sold too cheap," he said, with too many vague offenses covered.

"The problem of students not turning cheaters in would still be with us," commented Student Body President Carl Butler on the proposed changes.

UNSOLVED PROBLEMS

Although terming the report of the committee generally satisfactory, Butler said it left "a great many questions unanswered, and problems unsolved."

These problems include not only the jurisdiction of the court and the handling of lying and cheating cases, but also those technically associated with adopting be required to approve the changes before they went into effect, the Constitution now requires only majority approval of 25 percent of the student body voting to pass amendments.

To integrate the proposal into the Constitution, massive changes in the Constitution would be necessary. Mathis added that a committee could not stipulate acceptance of a proposal in such a manner.

LYING, STEALING

Butler questioned especially whether the cases of lying and stealing would go before the administration if they were removed from the honor code.

The committee in recommending the change expressed the belief that outside agencies in the city were equipped to take care of stealing.

Butler recommended the study of the solutions offered by the committee along with others "as a means of improving or abolishing our honor system."

Paralleling the question of the removal of lying and stealing as the recommended minimum punishment of offenders of the academics—only code.

Sen. Myznon Champion seriously questioned the recommendation that the Honor Court be required to suspend a student convicted of academmy dishonesty. "Mitigating circumstances in some cases might necessitate some other penalty and the court should be allowed to use its discretion," she said.

Sen. Jean Sauer felt freshmen needed more consideration on their first offense and that in this case the penalty was too severe.

Sen. Champion also questioned the recommendation that faculty members not be allowed to proctor exams, as not providing for individual circumstances.

Karen Ekman Reigns Over Annual Charity Bowl Game

Karen Ekman reigned Saturday as queen of the annual Charity Bowl football game sponsored by Sigma Nu and Kappa Alpha fraternities.

Runner-up was Marilee Bluhm, with Bobbie Calvert, Jane Hodges and Paula Baker completing the court. Miss Ekman is a member of Zeta Tau Alpha sorority.

Since the game ended in a scoreless tie, the two fraternities will share the winner's trophy. The Sigma Nu's will keep it one semester, the KA's the other.

All trophies were presented at a dance Saturday night at the Leon County fairgrounds.

Most valuable linsman and back were Walt McCrory and Jim Richards for the Sigma Nu team and Dunny Dunlan and Mike Mulley for the KA's.

Kappa Alpha Theta sorority was honored for selling the most tickets to the bowl game. Proceeds of sales are designated for the Florida Sheriffs' Boys Ranch at Live Oak.

The afternoon game, played on Florida High field, was preceded by a parade downtown.

Cerf Will Speak At FSU Lecture Series

Bennett Cerf—publisher, humorist, columnist, television panelist, and author—will speak on "Changing Styles in American Humor" in the University Lecture Series at 8:15 p.m. Feb. 8 in Westcott Auditorium.

SPONSORS SAY NO WRITERS

As president of Random House, a publishing company he began, Cerf promotes numerous new-comers in the writing field. This in part explains his appeal to young people on college and university campuses.

From his publishing company have come such books as Gaudalcanal Diary, Thirty Seconds Over Tokyo, The Snake Pit, The Young Lions, Ten North Frederick, The FBI Story, No Time for Sergeans, Don't Go Near the Water, Band, and Art One.

Random House also legalized the publication of James Joyce's Ulysses in America, and publishes the American College Dictionary, and the Landmark, All About and Beginner Books for children

Recently, Random House acquired the publishing house of Alfred A Knopf, Inc., Bagimer Books, and L. W. Singer Co.

After being a reporter on the New York Herald Tribune and clerk on the Stock Exchange, he purchased the Modern Library Series in 1925 and began his publishing career. He transformed the series into a set of modestly priced classics available to the public.

Cerf graduated with Phi Beta Kappa membership from Columbia University in 1920. While attending the university, he edited the college humor magazine, The Jester.

Flambeau Editorials

"Move One To The Back Burner — One Up To The Front Burner — "

And They Forgot To Mention..

Student and faculty interpretation of what is intended by the proposed academic honor system will either make its success possible or force it to be completely abolished.

Unfortunately, while the faculty-student honor committee has been able to set forth a definite suggestion on how to remedy the problem of an honor system on this campus, it has neglected to mention the ways in which this can be done, the manner in which the unconstitutional aspects of this proposal will fit into the student body constitution, and how the former honor offenses will fit into the new code. Therefore, we are led to ask just how the committee expects to get a reliable well-founded vote from the student body either for or against the suggested changes.

FIRST OF ALL, the constitution of the student body would have to be amended to accept the conditions offered in the honor committee's proposal, and such an amendment will have to be passed by a majority vote of at least 25 per cent of the student body voting at a special election. The committee's suggestion calls for acceptance of the proposed system by 90 per cent of the students voting — and unconstitutional clause in itself.

What methods would the committee suggest for enforcing the new system? How would it enforce the provision that faculty members report students for cheating on an examination or for plagerizing a paper? The committee must admit that not all faculty members make it a habit to report cheating.

IS IT NECESSARY for any organizacent of the deans at this university be required to accept the conditions set forth concerning the role of the faculty in the proposed system, and then be responsible for enforcing this system within their own areas.

What will happen to lying and stealing of a non-academic nature? One member of the committee suggests that it is only reasonable to expect students guilty of stealing to be tried in the downtown courts. Is it feasible to send a coed accused of stealing clothing in her dormitory to the city court for theft? Would it be reasonable to send a student accused of vandalism to university property—such as furniture—to the Tallahassee police? These are definitely petty offenses, but they are the majority of type currently tried in the university courts.

A UNIVERSITY IS a unique, artificial community existing on the outskirts of the city. Its population is comprised of students from all over the world; students who are responsible to the university that has drawn them here. They are protected by a special campus police force and security officer; they have their own judicial system—effective as it may or may not be— and they are here under the complete jurisdiction of the university for the period in which they are enrolled.

Therefore, it is impossible to believe that the faculty-student committee really intended such cases to be brought up in the city courts.

LYING, HAVING been left completely out of the picture, we can only imagine to be treated as the different individuals will interpret it. In other words, it will remain an unidentified object to be handled by the particular court involved. Who would decide the criteria for sentencing such an offense? Indeed, who would decide what constitutes lying.

One point, with which the committee had nothing to do, is that there were no representatives of the student court on this committee. These people are certainly qualified to some degree to help the committee reach its decisions, and could perhaps have provided for some of the points neglected.

ONE OF THE MAIN objects hampering the effectiveness of the present honor code is the fact that too few people, faculty and students alike, seem to know or be able to describe the honor system. Too many professors interpret it incorrectly to members of their classes; too many dormitory officers do not realize where their particular jurisdiction ends and the honor system takes over, and too many students are inclined to label anything shady as an "honor offense." The reason for this gross misunderstanding is quite simple. Too few people are concerned enough to read the student body constitution where the present system is thoroughly outlined and defined.

The effectiveness of the new proposal, once the neglected portions are remedied, will depend entirely upon th full cooperation of faculty and students — and upon the complete understanding of just what an honor system is, does and provides.

Film Insults Intelligence

Operation Abolition aimed more at abolishing faith in the editing ability of the House Un-American Activities Committee than at showing the influences of Communist infiltration in student groups, inciting them to riot.

The film's apparent slanted approach to the question of Communist influence in the rioting of the San Francisco students presented what most gullible students can readily accept and wave as a standard against the Marxist philosophy. There, is only one question that we can ask. Why not be honest about the matter and give a straight view which will point out just as vividly to the student the dangers of mass rioting and the possibilities of becoming tools of the ever-lurking monster Communism?

IT IS NECESSARY for any organization, government sponsored or otherwise to have to deceive the American populace in order to protect freedom and a so-called democracy? Has truth become so useless an item that it no longer has any weight or value? Or perhaps, Americans are no longer considered rational enough beings to handle facts accurately.

What is the value of a democracy bought at the price of half truths? Is it a democracy or a mass-deception? What is the value of a democracy that does not allow one the freedom of rational thought, the possibility of intelligence in the adult American?

ARE ALL AMERICANS so moronic, subversive and blind that we must be spoon-fed a carefully prepared brand of "truth" from our kindergarten days to our death?

This film, we feel, exaggerated the role of Communist infiltration. Nevertheless, we are not juvenile enough or radical enough to scream, "Hoax" and then forget its significance. There is a great deal of Communist infiltration today and it is most evident in the actions of a small minority group. Only a concerned and accurately informed majority of citizens will ever be able to combat Communist efforts, and films like Operation Abolition do not tend to inform the viewers — instead, it insults their intelligence and angers their sense of justice.

Coed Asks Students To Petition Congress

TO THE EDITOR:

Last Thursday afternoon F.S.U. students were privileged to see a film edited by the House Un-American Activities Committee about the San Francisco Student Riots. The students thought they were aiding in the preservation of the individual's freedom to believe and act as he wishes by demonstrating against the existence of the House Un-American Activities Committee. It is natural for the Communist party in the U. S. to try to rid themselves of any check on their work.

BUT STILL others argue that Communist's existence in this country doesn' (sic) constitute any real threat so why waste money on supporting this committee? This is the reasoning of an uninformed apathetic American. An American communist's work is ceaseless. J. Edgar Hoover, head of the F.B.I. said, "To dismiss lightly the existence of the subversive threat in the United States is to deliberately commit national suicide. In some quarters we are doing just that."

Lenin wrote in his master plan for world conquest, "First, we will take Eastern Europe, then the masses of Asia, then we will encircle the United States, which will be the last bastion of capitalism. We will not have to attack. It will fall like an overripe fruit into our hands."

Our contemporary, Nikita Khrushchev announced in 1956, "If anyone thinks that our smiles mean that abondonment of the eachings of Marx, Engels and Lenin, he is deceiving himself. Evid

IN AN ADDRESS t Lenin School of Political W fare in 1931, Dimitri Ma aki said, "War in the be tween communism and cap ism is inevitable. Toda course, we are not p ready to attack. Ou will come in 20-30 years. Then we shall need the ele of surprise.

"The bourgeoisie will to be put to sleep. So we begin by launching the spectacular peace move on record. There will be trifling overtures and heard-of concessions. The italistic countries, stupid decadent, will rejoice in operate in their ruin. They will leap at anot chance to be friends. As as their guard is dow shall smash them with clenched fist."

F.S.U. STUDENTS can in keeping this comm alive by sending the follo paragraph and signature Hon Francis E. Walter, Committee on Un-Americ Activities, House Office B ing, Washington, D.C.

PETITION TO THE CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES

We, the undersigned en mend the Committee on American Activities for excellent work in expos Communist subversion in United States. We petition House of Representatives to increase the appropriations for the said Committee and commend and support its valuable work.

Reflections

Coma Dons Sackcloth, Ashes

By LESLIE POWELL

Coma stood there, stepping over in her own tears. She wore sackcloth and in her hair, ashes. From time to time a bit of hot ash fell through onto her scalp, and then she gave voice to great wails of woe, and rent the sackcloth and gnashed her teeth in her best Baptist fashion.

"Woe, woe," she shrieked. "Woe is mine. I hate ha-lus-boo-hoo occasions. That's what graduation is. What will I do now that my buddy Betty Chazarra has gone. What will become of the Flambeau? Who will rend the gloom on Monday's and Thursday's?

"AND WHERE else will we find a good sport like Betty? Who will be as willing to go along with a gag, or swap wisecracks or throw Ben Sharp in Westcott Pool?

"Oh, the joy of revelation the day Betty first shouted "Shazam" and Ben stood momentarily clad in red long johns just before his supernatural powers catapulted him through the roof.

"Poor persevering Betty. She's probably the only coed ever to graduate from FSU without once seeing her name spelled correctly in print.

"Without Betty, I'll be an orphan. Coma, twenty-nine year old girl orphan. I can't have it, I just can't. I don't even own a dog; I was the only dog in my litter."

AND AGAIN great wails rolled across the Soda Shop, giving the tourists hiccups. Coma whipped out a great bandana and wiped her eyes, wiped Ben Sharp's nose and helped poor Leslie Powell fasten a loose gallus. The Flambeau Greek chorus (non denominational) went into action. Moans, shouts, the sounds of ripped clothing, torn flesh and bitten nails rent the air. From the Rosa Nell Wilson table came great harrumphing cries of "Good Show, good show, grossly good show."

Bonnie Perry was called on to read Betty's citations and her committee positions. Between great gulps of salt tears, Perry read. Betty Chazarra, Co-Chairman of the Keep the Editor Happy Committee; Co-Chairman of the Take The Dishes Back to the Soda Shop Committee; Chairman of the Sex Committee, Chairman of the Throw Ben Sharp in Westcott Pool Committee, Vice President in charge of the Back Seat Committee, Honored veteran of the Rats to Student Government Committee and Flambeau Expert on junior counselors, languages past and present, women's dorm life, old elevators, the coed mentality, how best to dry your laundry in limited space, and between committee meetings, Betty Chazarra has faithfully attended classes and has written lucid, readable articles for the pages of the Flambeau."

THE ENTIRE hall was punctuated with groans and assorted hysterics from Editor Morris. "I never wanted to be personnel manager; just editor," she kept repeating over and over.

And when the goodbyes were over, the little troops wound its way to the front gate, there to wave 'bye' in unison. "Haven't had such an emotional fest around these parts since Godin abdicated for Yale," Coma said. "We sure are gonna miss Betty Chazarra."

Writer Comments On Paper's Policy

TO THE EDITOR:

The Flambeau staff has maintained a record of turning out a good campus newspaper and suddenly, there is an issue that is hardly any credit to those concerned! Tuesday's (January 10) issue is one.

First, appeared an article concerning the publicized Jeff Poland and his refusal to be admitted to the Florida A&M University. Mr. Poland applied because " . . . living in an era of rapid change in Southern relations, I want to learn about the problems of Southern Negroes". but, he then presumes to know after all about " . . . the problems of Southern Negroes" for he occupies the "Guest Column" in explaining them. In the first "Guest Column," appeared a very interesting article by President Blackwall, and so, I hoped that future columns would be of the worth the space. However, Mr. Poland decided to use this space to prove that he does " . . . need to learn. . . ." I agree with Mr. Poland. He does need to learn about such problems, but the "Guest Column" should not have been used to justify his ignorance in the matter!

ON THE FRONT page was a picture of three students standing in front of the infirmary. What important significance did this picture have for the article below it . . . that questionnaire could be held the hand? Why couldn't the picture of President Blackwell appearing on the last page have taken the place of the wasted space on the front page?

The article entitled "Students Commend Collins" might have read "FHO Students Receive New Representation." The sentences concerning past Governor Collins should have merited a separate article and not have been underemphasized by the remainder of the article which no longer concerned itself with Collins.

WHY DO ARTICLES like George Miller's "West Hall Hang Together" appear in the Flambeau? I realize the importance of world politics and why devote space to the personal opinions of a student? Leave opinions in such matters to qualified people and better source and print discussions on campus matters!

JOHN M. CLARK

EDITORS NOTE: There is no article on the editorial page of the Flambeau issue in question which was written by "George" Miller. Columnist Jim Miller wrote "West Call Hang Together." If the writer of this letter would attend a Flambeau staff meeting, we might hear some of his questions answered.

Hunt Thanks Flambeau

TO THE EDITOR:

Last Monday our committee finished its deliberations and its report. The committee has met every week of the semester. This has been an extra chore for each of us — one which we accepted only because we were asked to. We would like to think that our recommendations were sensible, but only the future can tell us that.

I wanted personally to thank you for the way you have carried yourselves this semester with respect to us. You must have been tempted to try to find out what we were up to, or to nag at us to hurry along. I thank you for keeping your hands off.

Now that the report is out, it is everybody's property, and I hope you will work it over.

If the students vote not to have an Honor System, I hope you will help to make that change come about with dignity. If the students vote to accept our changes I hope the Flambeau will work to make FSU's Academic Honor System a force, not a farce.

Hated Ideas Deserve Free Expression

TO THE EDITOR:

Have just finished reading Friday's editorial on the "American" Nazi Party of Arlington, Virginia. Altho (sic) I'm an anti-fascist as I am anti-Communist-Bitter(sic) so— I was alarmed at the suggestion that such Nazi activity "may in time cause America to decide it can no longer afford the luxury of allowing such parties to exist under nominal restraints."

Freedom of belief, speech and association for dissenters is no "luxury" in a free society. It is an absolute necessity. When we begin to say "Freedom of speech, sure, but not for crackpots," then we begin to write the obituary of democracy.

WHY? BECAUSE, men and politics being what they are, no agency or official or legislature can be trusted to be the judge of which citizens are legitimately exercising their rights and which citizens are the subversive to have rights.

If Congress had the power to outlaw the Nazi party tomorrow, they would also have the power to outlaw the White Citizen's Council. Would you trust them not to do so? And what would happen to those Negroes which dare to criticize the House un-American committee? Would you trust the Florida legislature not to outlaw the NAACP, CORE (and even Liberal Forum and Canterbury House if they had the chance? I imagine the Flambeau itself would be banned for emasculated if our state legislators were not restrained by the Bill of Rights. Unless we guarantee basic constitutional liberties to absolutely everyone, we may wake up some day to find that liberty is enjoyed only by the groups and factions in power.

EVEN THE MOST repressive dictatorship gives its citizens the freedom to speak for "sensible" viewpoints. The real test of our devotion to liberty is whether we grant it to the idea or movement we hate.

t These Are Memories

But these are all memories and now the athletic committee is ying in a rehearing on the controversial transfer of your squad. rehearing was brought about by the staunch and loyal support followers of you and the gymnastic program. But these sup- rs don't have the final say about the reinstatement and the committee does.

The athletic director pointed out to them recently that there are a few schools in this area of the country that have gymnastics m here and these are not subsidized athletic teams. Neither have any competition for your top flight squad.

He also pointed out that Florida State has not the money to in the subsidation class. And he brought figures to back it. It's hard to argue with a shallow pocketbook.

You won't argue. You'll simply go before the committee and the case for the Florida State gymnastic team. You'll let the glorious record the team has compiled and you'll how that type of record adds substantially to the reputation prestige of FSU.

ou Want It For FSU

You'll do this because of your followers and the University personally have been associated with the greats of the game since you are one. You've written ters about the sports for every type of publication from magazine to circular. You want FSU to continue to benefit from the fine Gymkana ations and Tumbling Tot program which you originated, de- ped and made famous. The core of these programs is the gymnastic squad, you believe. It is your sincerest wish that FSU will continue to enjoy your programs and your teams.

And you realize that this may not continue. You've felt the misgivings pull tight around your neck for the last few years. You financial that you are leaving on a Fulbright grant for South ast next year. The last time you left on a Fulbright, that to India, the athletic department under Perry Moss drastically cut the budget.

Though you are leaving the Gymkana program in the capable hands of Alexis Demas, you realize that things won't be the same when you return.

So you will go before the committee and plead a sincere case. You'll plead it because you are Dr. Hartley Price and gymnastics are life

Florida State Slows Hurricane Hickox

Seminoles Upset Mighty Miami Cagers

87-78; Tribe Limits Hickox To Three

By MARK HILLIS

Flambeau Sports Writer

Florida State put a tight defense on Miami's highly-touted Dick Hickox this past Saturday night and rocked to a 89-78 hard fought victory over the Hurricane's in Tully Gym. The game was witnessed by a standing room crowd only of 4,200.

Jack Davis who played his finest game of the season defensively as he held All-American Hickox to 3 points his lowest point production in 3 seasons.

It was only a year ago in Tully Gym that diminutive Hickox ripped the nets for 31 points and a last minute field goal to beat the Seminoles 80-81.

All five FSU starters hit in the double-figure brackets but, as in previous games against the Hurricanes, it was Dave Fedor who spurred the Seminoles. Fedor hit the buckets for 23 points and had a tremendous night on the backboards pulling down 18 rebounds. As the buzzer sounded at halftime Fedor fired an amazing shot to give the Seminoles a 46-44 half-time lead.

Miami trailing 44-46 was going for their last shot when Fedor stole the ball and made the last second two-pointer.

The Seminoles had one of their best nights at the charity line as they hit on 27 of 30 free throws. Fedor led in this department also, bucketing 7-7 and Ricketts was close behind with 6-6.

The four other Seminole starters hitting in the double-figure brackets were Ray Swain with 21, Ricketts 16, Rufus Ashworth 13, and Davis 11. Rickett's 16 points came before intermission. During the second half he burt his ankle and was taken out of the game.

Florida State began the game with a zone defense but quickly switched to a man to man as the Hurricane's 7-1 Mike McCoy kept hitting on his accurate jumpers. McCoy who scored 15 points in the first half was limited to 5 in the second stanza as he was hard-pressed by Swann. Julie Cohen took scoring honors for Miami with 20 markers.

The Seminoles were trailing 40-35 when Coach Bud Kennedy made his defensive move to man to man. Behind 44-37 with 2:33 left the Seminoles went on an 11 point spree with Ricketts netting 6. Miamu's 44-37 margin proved to be their widest of the night.

During the last stanza the Hurricanes were lurless as they could only come within 2 points of FSU's lead. With 9:33 left to go the Seminoles enjoyed their widest margin at 75-61.

Florida State now 6-6 for the season outshot the Hurricanes 49 per cent to 47, and out-rebounded them 39-36. FSU also connected on 90 per cent of their free throws while Miamu could only manage 74 per cent.

Frosh Compile 4-1 Record

Baby Seminoles Seek Auburn Scalp In Columbus Tonight

By BILL VERIGAN

Flambeau Sports Writer

Florida State's freshman cagers look for another scalp to add to their collection when they meet Auburn's frosh in Columbus, Georgia tonight.

The Baby Seminoles have a 4-1 record and have scored 351 points while opponents has man aged 265. They have hit on 48.1 per cent of their attempted shots from the floor and have bucketed 66.4 per cent of their charity tosses.

The Baby Seminoles' record includes a 68-52 victory over Gulf Coast Junior College last Saturday night. Other wins were over Manatee JC (81-44), Chipola JC (47-42), and Gulf Coast JC (86-39), while their lone loss was against the University of Florida's Baby Gators.

Bobby Lovell, 6-2 guard from Chattanooga, Tennessee, was high point man with a 21 point performance for the freshmen in last Saturday's preliminary. He has run up a total of 91 points in his five performances. Sam Butler, 6-1 guard, was second high for the night with 14 points and now has a total of 53 rings.

Larry Woodrow, a 6-4 forward, hit on six of eight attempts from the floor for twelve points which boosted him to third place in total points scored with 42 notches. In fourth place is Harold Clark, the tallest man on the team at 6-6, with 39 points.

The freshman coach, Fred Powers, is directing his first team at Florida State. He was graduated last June and is presently working on his masters degree. While a student at FSU, he played on the 1956-57 freshman squad and served as varsity manager for three years.

The young coach has expressed concern over tonight's contest. Statistics were not available on the Auburn frosh; however, a tough fight is expected.

He said, "All we know about Auburn is that they have a 6-11 boy. We haven't been able to think about the past because of the importance of this game."

Power has been training his team in defense as much as offense while preparing them for their varsity roles. Defensive tactics have been more and more important on the college basketball scene since the rise of Pacific Coast and Western schools.

The freshmen use ashuffle offense similar to that of the varsity, but many variations have been added to compensate for different styles of defense.

The average height of FSU's frosh is over 6 feet, 2 inches, but Auburn has a slight advantage in this area. The game will be played in neutral territory, and the freshmen may gain some comfort from the fact that they won't have to contend with a partisan Auburn crowd.

The remainder of the Baby Seminole schedule includes four games against the Albany Blues, an air force team, Chipola JC, Brevard JC, and Florida's Baby Gators.

Meeting Today

There will be a meeting of the varsity baseball team this afternoon.

The meeting is scheduled for 4:00 p.m. in room 230 of Tully Gymnasium.

Pictures of the World Series will be shown, according to baseball coach Danny Litwhiler.

Positions Open

Positions will be open on the Flambeau sports staff second semester because of the increase in sports activities.

The spring semester requires a greater number of reporters because of the wide diversification of sports activities and reporters with interest in these sports are needed.

The sports to be covered include varsity baseball, track, golf, tennis, and freshmen baseball.

Applicants for positions as reporters need no previous sports writing experience, although some would be helpful. Requirements are dependability, a working knowledge of the sport, and good English skills.

Applicants can contact Ben Sharp at the Pi Kappa Alpha House or the Flambeau office.

Mural Play Halts For Semester

Intramural activity stops today for the semester break. However, 12 games in the fraternity and dorm independent divisions were played before the football contests ended.

Fraternity action produced these scores: KA 26-TC 6, PKT 19-SPE 13, PDT 26-SC 7, SAE 19-ATO 18, SC 46-SPE 30, DTD 13-ATO 12, DC 20-FKA 6, KS 59-TEP 7, and PDT 20-PKP 14.

Tribe Stalks Auburn 'Cats At Columbus

Florida State's varsity hoopsters face Auburn tonight at Columbus, Georgia. The Seminoles will attempt to avenge a 75-47 loss to the Tigers earlier this season.

FSU will enter the game with a serious handicap. The Tribe's star sophomore guard, Dale Ricketts, will be unable to play due to a severe ankle sprain. It was reported however, the Ricketts should be able to play against Rollins on January 28.

Substituting for Ricketts in the lineup tonight will be junior guard Tim Edney.

The game tonight will be played in the Columbus Municipal Auditorium at 8:15. The game will be preceded by a junior varsity game at 6:00.

The Seminoles will be hard at work during semester break. Two games are scheduled. One game is away and the other will be played at the Tully gymnasium. On January 28, the tribe faces Rollins College at Winter Park. The Rollins five will count heavily on the performance of Dick Bishop. Bishop has been outstanding on both offense and defense. He is a fast and hard shooting guard.

Florida State will count on Dave Fedor and Dale Ricketts to offer considerable resistance to the Rollins five.

Seminole court work on January 31 will match the tribe with the University of Alabama at Florida State.

THE ENGINEERS HAVE HAIRY EARS

Today in this age of technology when engineering graduates are wooed and courted by all of America's great industries, how do you account for the fact that Rimbaud Sigafoos, who finished at the very top of his class at M.I.T., turned down hundreds of attractive job offers to accept employment as a machinery wiper at the Acme Ice Company at a salary of $20 a week with a twelve-hour day, a seven-day week, and only fifteen minutes for lunch?

I know what you are thinking: "Cherchez la femme!" You are thinking that Mr. Acme, head of the Acme Ice Company, has a beautiful daughter with whom Rimbaud is madly in love and he took the job only to be near her.

Friends, you are wrong. It is true that Mr. Acme does have a daughter, a large, torpid lass named Claudia who spends all her waking hours scooping marzipan out of a bucket and staring at a television set which has not worked in some years. Rimbaud has not the slightest interest in Claudia; not, indeed, does any other man, excepting possibly John Ringling North.

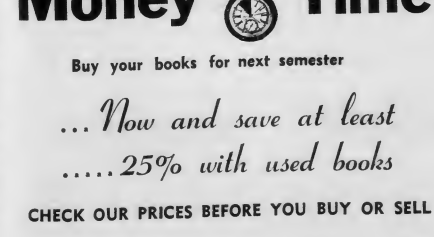
So how come Rimbaud keeps working for the Acme Ice Company? Can it be that they provide him with free Marlboro Cigarettes, and all day long he is able to settle back, make himself comfortable and enjoy the filter cigarette with the unfiltered taste?

...a large, torpid lass named Claudia

No, friends, no. Rimbaud is not allowed to smoke on the job and when he finishes his long, miserable day he has to buy his own Marlboros, even as you and I, in order to settle back and enjoy that choice tobacco, that smooth, mellow flavor, that incomparable filter, that pack or box.

Well, friends, you might as well give up because you'll never in a million years guess why Rimbaud works for the Acme Ice Company. The reason is simply this: Rimbaud is a seal!

He started as a performing seal in vaudeville. One night on the way to the Ed Sullivan show, he took the wrong subway. All night the poor mammal rode the B.M.T., seeking a helping hand. Finally a kindly brakeman named Ernest Thompson Sipsfoot rescued the hapless Rimbaud.



He took Rimbaud home and raised him as his own, and Rimbaud, to show his appreciation, studied hard and got excellent marks and finished a distinguished academic career as valedictorian of M.I.T.

Rimbaud never complained to his kindly foster father, but through all those years of grammar school and high school and college, he darn near died of the heat! A seal, you must remember, is by nature a denizen of the Arctic, so you can imagine how poor Rimbaud must have suffered in subtropical New York and Boston, especially in those tight Ivy League suits.

But today at the Acme Ice Company, Rimbaud has finally found a temperature to his liking. He is very happy and sends greetings to his many friends.

Pranksters Work Even Near Exams

By BILL EGAN

Social activity is coming to a standstill now that exams are almost upon us, however, the activities of pranksters have been doing everything but sanding still —just ask the Pi Beta Phi's and the Kappa Alphas.

The KA's picture of Robert E. Lee, which they consider almost sacred, was stolen from their living room a few weeks ago. The fraternity which stole it, ate with it hanging in their dining room for three days until they started to panic when it was rumored that the KSs were ready to start a war to find out who had their treasure.

The picture was returned to them by placing it in the phone booth outside the Mecca and phoning the KA house to tell them its location. As the KAs descended upon the phone booth, the fraternity which stole Gen. Lee had a good laugh watching from the corner.

PI PHI ARROW

The Pi Phi's have been having trouble with the electrified arrow insignia which occasionally hangs over the doorway to their sorority house.

When the arrow was stolen recently, Pi Phi Judy McMullen told a neighbor, "Shoot 'em with a gun if you see them."

Ann Schloss said that they're getting pretty tired of the joke "It gets stolen all the time."

Pi Phi president, Glenda Powers, said, "Whoever does it should be considerate enough to see that it's electrically unhurt. This is about the fourth time it has been stolen and we have to pay an electrician to put it back up every time. One time we found it hanging from Westcott gate."

The arrow has been secretly returned and now the girls are busy tracking down their composite which has disappeared from the house.

Helpful Gal Becomes Gra

Walking into the office one afternoon, a small-voiced girl said, "I heard the Flambeau needed some help; so I thought I'd come over."

'Help' characterizes Betty Chazarra, assistant feature editor and graduating social welfare major, perfectly. Help can mean two things where Betty is concerned: what she's been to the Flambeau (in all seriousness), and what staffers feel is needed when they became victims of a Chazarra prank.

Betty is continually befuddling the sports staff with her basketball maneuvers. Basketball Flambeau style is played with a copy basket attached to the top of a door with an artgum for the ball!

HARD WORKER

Besides knocking out stories every Monday and Thursday afternoons, plus proofreading copy at the Tallahassee Democrat until about 8 p.m. on these nights, Betty holds down a student assistant's job in the Modern Languages Dept. and manages to keep her grades intact.

In addition to all this, Betty sits in on Wednesday Senate meetings as reporter. Most Flambeau Senate reporters train for a year covering Women's Senate, then graduate to Student Senate. Betty took over the job efficiently this year with no training at all.

THOUGHT COMPOSITION

In writing a newspaper story, it is always the lead (beginning paragraph) that causes a journalist to cry in anguish. When that is achieved, the rest of a story follows in order.

Betty has a special way of bypassing this problem. She's the only writer on the staff that possess in thoughts; tears them strips and glues them into

It is rare when a pe possess true wit, yet thought provoking statem seriousness. And when the person can also be disarmi his tactfulness, one is fa to knowing such a person

The Flambeau staff ha so graced by the presen Betty Chazarra, to whom above qualities belong.

Alumni Drive For Funds Set Into Motion

An ambitious fund drive to support Florida State University rises in areas where legislative appropriations are inadequate is now being promoted by the Alumni Assn.

Alumni are being asked to contribute towards a long-range goal of $30,000 for the Florida State University Foundation.

Initiated last year under the guidance of the late President Dr. M. Stronzier, the foundation money from private sources for critical areas needing state funds.

Since the foundation was begun last year, Dr. Strozier challenged Alumni Assn. to raise $150,000.

In response to the challenge, Greater FSU Fund was set up by the Alumni Assn. to conduct annual money raising campaigns, T. A. Watts, assistant director of alumni affairs, said.

FIRST LAST YEAR

The first Greater FSU drive last year raised almost $10,000. This campaign hopes to double the amount in the current drive. It will continue through March.

Now in its third week, the '61 drive has already collected $3,000 of the $10,000 aim.

Efforts so far have been directed to Alumni Association members through the mail. Instead of using annual dues as in the past, Alumni are asked to make donations to the drive. Annual membership is given for donations of $5 or more.

Personal contact will be used in eight major Florida cities, where telephone solicitation is being used, Watts said.

Besides instigating the foundation, President Strozier specified critical areas as scholarships, the graduate school, library, professorships and lectureships, publications and the permanent art collection.

Watts pointed out that contributions to the alumni drive can be designated for a specific school, department or other use. Undesignated funds will go into the FSU Foundation funds which are administered by a board of directors.

Folders and envelopes have been mailed to about 19,000 members, Watts said.

Officials are hoping graduates aware that they need higher education by contributions to FSU, he commented. They stress the idea that since the state pays most of the cost of education for Floridians, alumni should return some sort of dividend, he added.

Gov. Farris Bryant will be the guest of student government leaders at a luncheon tomorrow in the president's dining room at Seminole Club.

Seventeen campus organizations have been requested to submit copies of their constitutions and conformances about their respective organizations by Feb. 14, said Roy Mathis, attorney-general.

Mathis said that if this request is not complied with a recommendation will be made to Student Senate proposing that the rules not be recognized as organizations at Florida State University.

The organizations are Circle K, Delta Sigma Pi, Florida Correctional Research Association, Future Business Leaders, Gold Key, Insurance and Real Estate Society, International Club, Kappa Kappa Psi, Pi Delta Phi, Pi Sigma Alpha, Riflemen of the Corps, Seminole Drivers, Sigma Lambda Sigma, Sigma Pi Sigma, Social Work Club, Stats Scholarship Club and Theatre, Dance Group.

The non-professional cast for the premiere performance of Assignment in Judea was announced yesterday by Richard Fallon, director.

The University Theatre will present the new play by Patrick Welch March 1-4 and 6-7 with professional actors in the lead roles. Students and faculty members will understudy the professionals and fill supporting roles.

Sam Baker and Sally Mount will understudy the main characters, Penina Blake and Claudia Procula. Stanley DeHart will understudy Herod and Judas Iscariot while Robin Bowen will understudy the centurion, Terence.

Non-professional roles will be played by Peggy Traylor, as Martha Pontillus Pilate; Arthur Dorlag, Caiaphus: Cal Yeomans, Alphaeus; Kent Wood, Marcus; Dennis Demetriou, Publius Cyprus; Isa Davison, Agent I; Baker, Agent II; Jon Carnaghie, sentry; J. Bruce Bodkin and Carl Stewart, priests; Melinda Lundy, serving girl.

Activity Books

Spring activity books which have not been picked up by next Monday can only be obtained between 1 and 3 p.m. Monday through Friday each week, Director of Student Activities Reid Montgomery announced.

Students are asked to come to the Westcott Ticket Office to pick up books only at designated times. Under this plan, they will not have to stand in long lines which often form to purchase tickets for sporting events, Dr. Montgomery said.

Poland Is Suspended From Florida State

Jefferson Poland, Florida State University student, was suspended at the end of the Fall semester by the administration on the grounds that he had violated the terms of his probation.

Poland was placed on probation in March for participating in a sit-in demonstration with other FSU and Florida A & M students.

Following an incident last Fall, the university disciplinary committee recommended his immediate suspension, but President Gordon Blackwell postponed it to the end of the semester.

The incident occurred when a scheduled public panel discussion on school desegration was postponed and a subsequent "protest" gathering of students took place at the scheduled time and location. The sponsoring FSU Scholarship Club had called off the panel after Poland and another student had spoken-out to bring Negro friends to the meeting.

INSUBORDINATION

Dean of Students R. R. Ogles said Poland had been guilty of insubordination to an administrator, and of being "uncooperative and defiant" when being counseled on the terms of his probation.

"I have stayed well within the rather vague limits of my probation," Poland claimed in an "open letter" to Dr. Ogles' last week.

Answering the charge of insubordination to an administrator when he accompanied an A & M student to an FSU play, Poland said he did not ask permission of the Speech Dept. as advised by Assistant Dean of Students Harry Day, because he thought it was a suggestion, not an order.

"I went to a Negro campus; accompanied a Negro to a play; took part in a peaceful demonstration on the FSU campus for which no other student was punished. I neglected to act upon a suggestion by the assistant dean of students," Poland declared in the letter.

POLITICAL PRESSURES

"I realize that the university is under outside political pressure from segregationist officials to get rid of students who carry their belief in human rights 'too far'—that is, beyond conversation in the Soda Shop," he continued.

"I realize that it may seem expedient for the university to yield to such pressure . . . , the fact remains, however, that I have not violated the regulations of this university," Poland declared.

Werner Baum

Baum Named Faculty Dean

Dr. Werner A. Baum, acting dean of faculties, has been appointed by the Board of Control as permanent dean of faculties at Florida State University.

Since coming to FSU in 1940 to head the then new Meteorology Dept. the 36-year-old educator has served also as director of university research, dean of the Graduate School and since last spring as acting dean of faculties.

He is a native of Giessen, Germany, and holds a bachelor's degree in mathematics and master's and doctor's degrees in meteorology from the University of Chicago. He also holds a certificate in Russian from the University of Colorado.

While head of the Meteorology Dept. at FSU from 1940 to 1957 he edited the Journal of Meteorology and since then he has served as editor in chief of the periodicals of the American Meteorological Society. He has written numerous scientific articles in journals and books and has served as consultant to the U. S. Air Force, National Science Foundation and other agencies.

Dr. Baum served as a faculty member at University of Maryland and at University of Chicago before coming to FSU and from 1944 to 1946 was in the Weather and Intelligence Branches of the U. S. Navy.

Library Dedicated To Strozier Friday

Florida State University will dedicate the $2,000,000 Robert Manning Strozier Library in a special ceremony Friday.

A friend and colleague of the former FSU president, Dr. Napier Wilt, who is dean of humanities at the University of Chicago, will be the speaker at a ceremony in the Library Hall at 11 a.m.

A portrait of Strozier will be unveiled during the ceremony. An oil painting on a canvas of 25 by 30 inches, it is the work of Frank Benatti of New York and is the gift of the FSU classes of 1957 and 1960.

Mrs. Strozier, widow of the educator who served FSU from Sept., 1957, until his death last April 20, will come to the ceremony.

The library parking lot will not be used Friday morning because of the dedication ceremony.

A committee planning the celebration is headed by Dr. John A. Griffin, director of University Relations. Other members are Dean Louis Shores of the Library School; Director N. Orwin Rush of the Library; Assistant Dean Robert Clapp of the Library School; William Quinly; and Dean of the Faculties Werner A. Baum.

To Enable Fund Raising

Incorporation Of SG Under Senate Study

Possibilities of incorporating Student Government or creating a corporation separate from Student Government are being studied by a committee of student senators under the chairmanship of Myrgnon Champion.

The study was begun, Miss Champion reported to Senate Wednesday, in relation to the financing of a swimming pool for the proposed student union. As a corporation, Student Government could undertake various money-making ventures to supplement the funds already set aside for the construction of the pool.

However, since construction of the student union has been delayed by the federal government's raising the down payment requirement for building loans, the work of the proposed corporation could be broadened to include helping finance the union, Miss Champion said.

COMMITTEE

The committee, which includes Sens. Boyd Elam and Dick Burns is meeting with Dean Charles A. Rovetta of the School of Business and the school's attorney, John Dillinger.

There seems to be general agreement among the committee members that incorporation would be a good move for Student Government to make, Miss Champion said. Disagreement has arisen over the form of incorporation however, she added. Whether to incorporate Student Government or to create a separate entity is one of the chief problems, she said.

The composition of the board of directors of the corporation, Miss Champion listed as another major problem to be solved before incorporation plans could proceede.

Dillinger and Rovetta will draw up the charter, she reported.

PREVIOUS ATTEMPT

A previous attempt at incorporation was made in 1955 by a group of students who took out a charter in the name of the student body of Florida State University.

Earlier this year Student Government found the records concerning the old charter and ascertained that it was not binding on anyone but the students to whom the Circuit Court granted it. The old charter had not been registered at the Secretary of State's office as required by Florida law, nor had it been ratified by Student Senate.

In other action Student Body Vice President Bobby Byrd appointed a committee to promote the Gymnastics team and to encourage acceptance of the decision of the Athletic Committee concerning the fate of the team.

Sen. Nancy Sindon will be chairman of the Senate committee. Other members are Sens. Lou Rich, Willie Richason, Karl Kutter and Chet Adair.

Students who had attended the athletic committee hearings reported that gymnastics would probably remain in the Physical Education Dept. rather than be transferred back to the Athletic Dept. Miss Sindon reported that if this was the final outcome of the hearing it would not change the status of the gymnastics team greatly except that scholarships to gymnasts would not be available from athletic funds. The team would still be able to compete with Georgia Tech and send men to national meets.

WFSU To Air Memorial To Dr. Dohnanyi

Thursday, on the first anniversary of the death of Ernst von Dohnanyi, WFSU-FM will devote three hours of its evening schedule to the performance of his music.

Although many familiar works will be played, emphasis will be on compositions that have not frequently been performed in Tallahassee, according to Marjorie Newman, program director.

Also scheduled is a discussion of Messaga to Posterity, a book of memoirs by Dohnanyi, which will be reviewed by Dr. Allan Thomson.

Dohnanyi, who achieved worldwide recognition as a composer, performer, conductor and teacher, was a member of the Florida State University Music faculty preceding his death last Feb. 9.

PROGRAM TO INCLUDE

The Memorial Concert, beginning at 9 to 11:15 p.m., includes chamber music, orchestral works, and piano compositions. Dohnanyi will be heard as piano soloist playing his own works.

The program will be String Quartet No. 2, Sonata for Piano and Cello, Concerto for Violin and Orchestra, Second Piano Concerto, Winterreigen, Variations on a Hungarian Theme, and The Symphony in E flat.

The Symphony was heard on WFSU-FM for the first time last month when it was programmed as a Featured Work of the day. It is being repeated Thursday, so that more listeners will have an opportunity to hear it.

Oglesby Indicates

Long Range Traffic Plans Are Started

Long range plans to solve the traffic problem at Florida State University are being made by the Committee of Buildings and Grounds in cooperation with the city planner and the State Road Dept., Dean of Students R. R. Oglesby said last week.

Dr. Oglesby termed traffic one of the most "pressing problems" the university is facing.

He commended the Student-Faculty Traffic Committee for their work on short term detailed regulations, but said that long range plans taking into consideration the future location of campus buildings and city streets were also needed.

Traffic counts and charts of traffic and student flow will be made by Mel Conner of the State Road Dept. in order to ascertain exactly where the traffic problems exist.

Conner is also developing a poll to be mailed to the students and faculty early this Spring concerning patterns of usage of sidewalks and streets.

POSSIBLE SOLUTIONS

Dr. Oglesby outlined several possible solutions to the traffic problem including the elimination of cars from the center of campus, or halting traffic during changing of classes. The second, he said, would stop student use of cars for going back and forth to classes.

Additional traffic problems may also arise when Call St. is closed, Dr. Oglesby added. The street will not be closed until Tennessee St. construction is complete, however.

Parking meters might also be installed with the proceeds to go for purchase of land adjacent to the campus for parking lots, Dr. Oglesby suggested.

Another plan might be space rental, or a longer range possibility might be parking garages such as have been built at some larger universities, Dr. Oglesby added.

The dean said he didn't anticipate further restrictions on driving according to a student's classification, adding that personally he believed area control to be the preferred method.

Vice President Milton W. Carothers is chairman of the Committee on Buildings and Grounds which is studying the problems and their possible solutions.

In Living Areas

Pre-Week Dicussions Held To Bolster REW Interest

Prior to Religious Emphasis Week, Feb. 21-24, Florida State University faculty members will speak on themes related to "Conscious on Campus" in pre-week discussions in various living areas.

The pre-week discussions are designed to stimulate thinking and promote interest in Religious Emphasis Week (REW) which will be Feb. 26-29 according to Jan Pearce, student chairman of the Week.

Approximately one-half of the sororities and fraternities, all women's dormitories and the FHO houses will take part in the discussions. Some groups will be host both to a speaker and another sorority, fraternity, or FHO house. Groups will be combined relative to size and space.

"By combining groups, we hope to reduce the number of speakers and improve on quality and interest," said Betts DeHart, chairman of the discussions.

Sororities and fraternities which do not participate in the pre-week discussions will take part in the activities of the week itself, Miss Dehart said.

TENTATIVE SCHEDULE

All dormitory discussions are tentatively scheduled for Feb. 22, from 4:30 to 5:30 p.m. Other groups will schedule the talks on Tuesday, Wednesday or Thursday evening of the pre-week.

Although the general subjects are to be related to the theme of the week, "Conscious on Campus," the speakers will choose their own topics.

Speakers for the pre-week discussions include Dean of students R. R. Oglesby, Dean of Women Katherine Warren, Dr. Harry Day, Miss Elizabeth Lynn, Dr. Earl Beck, Miss Helen Richey, Dr. Richard Baker, Dr. Richard Bartlett, Dr. Eugene Boyce, Dr. Ralph Caldwell, Dr. Milton Carothers, Dr. Dehart Krans, Dr. S. T. Lastinger.

Dr. Jack Rollow, Dr. Virgil Strickland, Dr. Thomas Yarborough, Dr. Sara Herndon, Dr. Herman Freck, Mrs. Nona M. Gooding, Dr. Gifford Hald, Dr. Sara Lou Hammon, Dr. Daisy Parker and Dr. Ivan Johnson.

The Executive Committee for REW is composed of Dr. Ray Sheline, faculty chairman; Jan Pearce, student chairman; Dr. Bob Lawton, faculty vice chairman; Chaplain John Carey, executive secretary; Judy McMillan, student secretary; Miriam Wilson, treasurer; and Martha Bedell, ex-officio member.

Wright Piano Concert Will Offer Chopin

Thomas Wright, pianist and associate professor of music, will present a concert of Chopin selections at 8:15 tomorrow night in Opperman Music Hall.

The program is free and open to the public.

The all Chopin program by the concert pianist will include the Fantaisie in F Minor, the Sonata in B Flat Minor, and the four Ballades.

Why No Graduate Courses?

In most academic circles, the emphasis is to stimulate an active interest and participation in graduate studies and schools. Not so on the FSU campus.

At FSU, the student who is advanced to the point of having completed all the undergraduate courses in his major field before his senior year with a straight 'A' average is not considered capable of tackling a graduate course in that field unless he has first taken and passed the "all-important" graduate record examination. This is one sure way of discouraging a large number of potential graduate students from further academic pursuits.

AN ARGUMENT might be advanced that a student with no interest in graduate work before he tries some will not make good graduate material anyway. This is definitely a false attitude to take for each undergraduate is a potential graduate student. Taking a few graduate courses might be just the stimulus that the previously undecided student needs.

The graduate record examination is an excellent basis for electing graduate students, but to deny students who will be taking the examination within a matter of weeks entrance to the 500 level regardless of whether they seek graduate credit or not, is not good sense on the part of anyone.

IT IS, INSTEAD, cutting one's own throat in order to stick jealously to the false standard of "each in his own place." It is a result of over departmentalization in an area where there should be instead vastly more cooperation. A student who is capable of doing good work, one who is a potential graduate student and who has a strong academic background, should certainly be considered for admittance in graduate courses.

For a growing university with aspirations to greatness and academic reputation—we don't seem too interested in supporting our own products.

Kennedy Supports Student Aid

One of the first praiseworthy ideas to be put forth from the new government is that of a program designed to promote world peace through American aid to foreign scholars. No price tag was attached to the program. Perhaps the persons behind this idea realize that minds are less susceptible to being bought than they are being subsidized.

While the news release was couched in the usually florid and grandiose style of professional amateurs writing for mass effect, and details are neglected in favor of such statements as "the institutions essential to self-confident and effective nationhood," the idea of an experimental peace corp of young Americans to work overseas is a commendable one, one that should not only have occurred to national leaders ten years ago, but should have gone into effect long before now.

IT IS TO BE hoped that the proposal means what it says about aid to foreign students. Foreign students should be brought to this country in large numbers to live and study in America and see our system for themselves.

Further, not only should financial aid be made to foreign students who desire to study in America and vice versa, but a long, hard, realistic look at the immigration quotas should be taken by the national lawmakers. Those nations with large unfilled quotas should be cut down to size, and the quotas of other nations should be enlarged to admit a sensible number of immigrants. Foreign students who come here to study and desire to stay should be encouraged and aided in every way.

FOREIGN SCHOLARS who study here and stay here might be used to teach other foreign students who come to learn in America.

Strangers coming to study at American universities should be housed as often as possible in dormitories with fellow students or perhaps better, placed in American homes . . . not the homes of middle class aristocracy, lawyers, doctors, or hometown bankers, but in the homes of secondary school teachers, farmers, small businessmen and tradespeople.

Stop sending foreign visitors to Washington and the metropolitan areas. Most of them probably are more familiar with museums and landmarks than the native American is. Let them get out in the sticks, in Tallahassee, in Cheyenne in Salina and a thousand other American cities and towns where they can observe more settled stratas of society, and see a generally less pretentious personality at work and play. And should we help them with financial aid. Why not? We spend more for less things of value every year.

Let's Get Serious

'Liberals' Side-Step Laws

BY GERRY DOBSON

The adroit maneuvering of President Kennedy and Speaker Rayburn in their successful effort to "pack" the House Rules Committee, is an example of an all-too-recurrent and frequent device. Our American "liberals," while piously crying for a "safeguard of our Constitutional rights" when ever they feel their privileges or immunities are threatened, nonetheless have no qualms about blithely sidestepping laws and traditions which get in the way of their "God-ordained program."

First of all, one might mention Roosevelt's attempt to pack the Supreme Court in the 30's. Although the attempt failed, it is a shining example of the type of tactic employed by the "liberal": "If we can't get what we want through the established channels, we'll either change the channels, or institute new ones." Thus, when F.D.R. saw that the Supreme Court was invalidating much of his New Deal legislation, he chose the easy way of merely adding enough men of his own persuasion to the Court to get his way, rather than pressing for the amendments that would have made his program in agreement with our Constitution. Why? Because it would have been too difficult—even impossible—to pass the required amendments. While the Roosevelitan method might technically have been "legal" it was, to say the least, of dubious moral virtue.

THEN WE HAVE the spectacle of Wayne Morse. This esteemed gentleman, who is vehemently against filibusters when they are directed against things he favors) nonetheless once held the world's filibuster record. One might guess that a person of Senator Morse's integrity, believing a Senate procedure to be "wrong," would not himself use that procedure, for it might be considered hypocritical by

And there's the 1954 Supreme Court decision declaring segregation in the public schools unconstitutional. Since many decisions of the Supreme Court had declared that separate but equal facilities were constitutional and, indeed, the whole Southern tradition of segregation was built upon such decisions, it could be argued (and is) that a constitutional amendment might be needed to reverse the original interpretation.

WHY THEN, did our liberals choose the means they did to effect desegregation . . . which are in violation of the English common law upon which our legal system is based, and which are furthermore patently in violation of sections of our Constitution as it stands today?

Because it was clear only means to achieve the end they desired — it would have been completely impossible for the "liberals" to successfully amend the Constitution to end segregation, since twelve states could block ratification of the amendment, and seventeen states had segregated public schools at the time.

Which brings us up to today. The House Rules Committee as it was constituted might have blocked part of Kennedy's program. Instead of accepting this in good grace and trying to win acceptance for the program, even though this might have been more difficult, the "liberals" chose to "change the channels." Who was it that said that the ends don't justify the means? He ought to repeat it to our liberal friends.

Poland's Expulsion Unworthy

TO THE EDITOR:

The expulsion of Jeff Poland is an arbitrary action unworthy of a university which aspires to greatness. The series of "offenses" charged against Poland were, neither singly nor collectively, sufficient grounds for expulsion. Further, he is serving as scapegoat, getting full punishment for incidents for which in some cases he was not solely responsible and in others, which he did not instigate.

Mr. Poland's real offense is, as he says, that he is fighting for an unpopular cause and, unlike others, has not chosen discreet silence and inaction after intimidation by officials of this school. Today an integrationist is pilloried; tomorrow it may be a Socialist, an agnostic or even an anti-ROTC agitator.

The hierarchy (Deans Oglesby, Warren, Loucks and Day) claims it does not punish students for their opinions. I would like to know its interpretation of this action. No one can claim Poland's expulsion is an abrogation of "equal protection of the laws." For these individuals — who constitute FSU's highest court — act not under law, but by decree.

Flambeau Shows Improvement

TO THE EDITOR:

Received the January 10th issue of the Flambeau via Phil Degnon and want to compliment you on an improved newspaper. I was especially impressed with the article by Jefferson Poland.

IN SUCH critical times as confront the world today, the universities should exercise their academic duty by expressing opinions concerning contemporary problems of our day.

I am looking forward to even more objective analysis from the FSU student body.

Jump-Jump Countdown

TO THE EDITOR:

Being in possession of that unique classification, known to the general student body as an 8th semester freshman, I would project a few remarks concerning the current row over the honor system at FSU.

IN MY SOJOURN here, I have encountered students with honor and students with systems. Also students with both . . . and some with neither (and not too much of anything else either!) The system of honor court, honor system, honor mod (sic) and honorless have all come up before. And the significant point that I glean from this proverbial lesson is this: as long as honor is bartered about like grada point averages, Saturday mite (sic) dates, and letters in the University Post Office, it will never be really significant in the more profound thoughts of the student body.

Journalists today have a way of cheapening words. TOGETHERNESS, for example, has gone to Hell (apologies to Philip Wylie!) LOVE has become the capacity to endure (Thanx (sic) to Fr (sic) Martin!); IDENTIFICATION and FATHER IMAGE are practical jokes. And at FSU, HONOR and anything to do with it no longer has the impact of meaning that they once had. Now why is this? From high atop West Hall, it looks this way: the recent volume of superlibel (sic) details surrounding honor at FSU has made us lose the total concept of what we're after. "Forest for the trees routine.)

SO WE CAN throw up our hands and say that society is too complex; we can become the Organization College and the Lonely University. Even publish the Hidden Disorders. Or, we can rethink honor and realize that it is basically an emotional response . . . a human entity (sic) . . . that is biologically basic. It is a function of environment and culture . . . a thing that grows over the years and in depth. Plans and systems for creating honor are petty in relation to the feeling that causes it.

How this can be done I cannot say. In another week or so I shall take my academe regalia down to the Jump-Jump and, with a solemn countdown, launch myself into the orbit of the "versus world."

"Sail on, sail on, oh ship of state"

Government Saps Initiative

TO THE EDITOR:

Perhaps worthy of note in The Florida Flambeau:

The more one does for Human Nature the less it will do for itself.

People nowadays want to "Lean upon Government for their needs."

THIS COUNTRY has grown to giant strength because everyone had to work hard, save money, and proved for his present and future.

Not so any more.

When we seek government help, we rob ourselves of the incentive for doing it ourselves.

The "government" is just a lot of people spending our money. It doesn't produce anything . . . the people produce. It has not money, save what it borrows or takes from the people.

WE SOLVE our problems, surmount obstacles, by developing our own ability.

The combined strengths of all the people have made us a great people.

We have made ourselves the greatest nation in the world.

BUT: THE more government does for the individual, the less he will do for himself.

When the incentive to do it ourselves is taken from us, the power of the nation declines.

That's what's going on now. To a degree, that is more dangerous to the people than our present enemies.

Reflections

Columnist Welcomes Newcomers, Returnees

Hello freshmen, transfers, transients and returnees. It is pleasant to see Coy Cranford, Rick Miller, Nancy Wicks and Bill Cox back at Florida State—and to know that Vic Franzi is here again and hoping to stay.

To the newcomers, the Flambeau extends a most cordial invitation to come up and work with us. Learn to live in poverty . . . economic and intellectual . . . at first hand. Skip the pathos of tedious sociology courses, unless you'd rather be bored for credit. Where but on the Flambeau staff could you meet so many people you'd like to forget?

OH, YES, thank you, fan club, for the small figure of the dwarf, "Sleepy." However, my mother, the registrar and my counselor are all of the opinion that I should have received "Dopey" instead.

Since there are new people wandering around, it probably will help to list the eating establishments on and near campus and give their one or two peculiar characteristics.

FIRST, of course, is the Soda Shop. Here gather the weary, the comatose and those just dumb enough to be smart and vice versa. It used to be that the tourists came to the Soda Shop to view the regulars, but now it is the other way around. And if you choose to frequent the Soda Shop be sure to bring a watch: the Soda Shop clock is on Rocky Mountain time and runs two hours behind the class schedule. Also, if you plan to come there often, bring hipboots and a flotation belt.

For pinball addicts there is the Mecca. It's machines are always hot, and the sole requirements are a feel for pinball and pocketful of nickles.

The Sweet Shop has a pinball supply of the New York Times, a relatively congenial atmosphere and a host of pinball machines. The University Inn offers a coffee club, but beyond that I can't say because it always appears to be full of customers. The Corner is airy and roomy and most of the customers seem to speak in the Grad dialect.

THE STUDENT Center is hard to classify. Mostly it seems to appeal to the Fe Fabian axis, but even some hairy mongrels have been seen wandering in and out. Other eating houses on campus are plain unadorned cafeterias. I like the Suwannee Room because the grill work allows one to poke bread crusts in food about to expire in line.

You have now become a part of the eternal triangle of the hills, i. e., FSU, the Capitol and A&M. Practice your tongue-in-cheek attitude of between the three. Then head home and with the Spring campaign elections coming up, you will need it even more.

GET USED TO little irritations because these are a part of life at FSU. Squirrels will short the power and douse the lights in campus wide. People like that will be alerted by the printers ink. Don't listen to rumors that go "They say . . ." or "they are . . ." because they is the most ominous word in the collegiate vocabulary with the possible exception of legislate or integrate.

Don't listen to instructors that say "grades aren't everything," because they're not. And don't be hesitant about having instructors repeat a lot of books they request for a course as often as necessary.

LOOK FOR likeable people. There are a lot of them around but they seldom get their names in the Flambeau. You won't believe it, but there are quite a few in Westcott and more in the Hospital (on the staff and on the wards). There are even some on the campus police force.

And between me you and the big ear to the wall, it's easy. I know several more teen-year old jokers.

Writer Says Editorial Insults The Intelligence

TO THE EDITOR:

The reader of the editorial Film Insults Intelligence would logically expect to be presented with the reasons why the film insulted intelligence. This does not prove to be the case. He will find insinuations of lies contained in the film and many gilded verbal alibis ending with question marks, which have no answers supplied.

The Editorial states, "the film's apparent slanted approach . . ." reader may very well wish to know why it is apparent that the film is slanted, but no reasons are given.

"Why not be honest about the matter?" asks the writer. We all approve of honesty, but what was it that J. Edgar Hoover was dishonest about? It makes one wonder because the Director of the FBI generally enjoys a very good reputation in this country. Of course, the writer does not mention that the distinguished FBI Chief identified the known Communists and the part each played in the riot. Perhaps he wasn't aware of this point and forgotten it.

The writer asks many questions such as "What is the value of a democracy today" at the price of half truths." The question asks the reader to assume that answers to the asking half truths for the purpose of buying a democracy. No political reasons are given as to which to base such an assumption.

Whereas the United States is a "so-called democracy" as has never been, nor was ever intended to be one. The USA is a republic and not a democracy. "Is it a democracy or a mass-deception?" asks the FLAMBEAU. The obvious answer, not given, is that it is neither.

Would it be too much to expect the FLAMBEAU to show exactly what insulted ? An intelligent reader is certain to conclude that his intelligence has been insulted by.

FSU Swimmers Meet Alabama Here Thursday

Seminoles Whip Texas A&M, Lose To SMU, Hiles, Thompson, Pyykko Break Records

By BILL VERIGAN
Flambeau Sports Writer

After splitting a pair of dual meets on the road, Florida State's swimming team entertains Alabama's Crimson Tide at the FSU pool Thursday night.

This will be the first time the two teams have been matched and will be the second Southeastern Conference contest of the season for the Seminoles.

Florida State's traveling mermen had their seventeen victory dual meet skein snapped by highly ranked Southern Methodist University by a 60-35 margin before downing Texas A&M's hopes with a 58-37 thrashing.

The Seminoles were paced on their longest road trip of the season by sensational senior Buck Hiles, two-time All-American diver Curt Genders, and outstanding junior freestyler, Paul Thompson.

HILES REWRITES RECORD

Hiles rewrote two Florida State school records with a time of 2:08.4 in the 200-yard individual medley and a :51. timing in the 100-yard freestyle, both of which come against SMU's Mustangs. The All-American freestyler also copped two pool records during the trip with his 200-yard medley time against the Mustangs and a clocking of 1:25.5 in the 133-yard individual medley at Texas A&M.

Texas A&M's Aggies had two of their pool records toppled by Thompson. He garnered a position in the record books with a 2:10.4 220-yard freestyle and a 4:45.6 440-yard freestyle.

Genders, putting out one of the best dual meet performances that Coach Bum Stults said he had ever seen, amassed 308.45 points against the Mustangs for a first place. He also took a first against the Aggies.

PYYKKO BREAKS MARK, TOO

Risto Pyykko, a sophomore, also took a pool record against Texas A&M when he swam the 100-yard butterfly in :58.3.

The Methodists have been ranked among the top ten teams in the country for three years and have also taken the Southwestern Conference crown for the past four seasons. This was SMU's first dual meet of the season after winning the Southwestern Conference Relays.

SMU DEPTH HURTS

The cause of FSU's downfall lay in Southern Methodist's relay strength and the depth of eleven returning lettermen plus the ability of Olympic finalist, Aubrey Burer. Burer took firsts in both the 220-yard and 440-yard freestyles.

Florida State's wins went to Genders, Hiles, and Pete Davis. Davis, a sophomore, took the 200-yard backstroke.

A more pleasant outcome awaited FSU when they met Texas A&M. The Seminoles have now won seven out of eight meetings with the Aggies. The tribe copped eight firsts, four seconds, and four thirds, as compared to three firsts, six seconds, and five thirds for the Aggies.

First places went to Hiles, Genders, Thompson, Pyykko, and Bill Richardson for the Seminoles. Richardson won the 200-yard breaststroke.

The win gave Florida State a 2-1 record for the season.

Swain, Fedor Lead Tribe To Victory

Florida State Cagers Defeat Rollins, Alabama Over Break

By MARK HILLIS
Flambeau Sports Writer

Florida State University's basketball team faired well over the semester break as they defeated the Rollins Tars 78-70 in Winter Park and the Alabama Crimson Tide 68-57 on their home court.

In defeating Rollins the Seminoles notched their 12 consecutive victory over the Tars. Ray Swain and David Fedor provided the spark for the Seminole's 78-70.... victory.

Nine Semnoles entered the game with each one of them entering the scoring column. Swain and Fedor shared high point honors for the Tallahassee five each, ripping the meshes for 19 points.

FSU built up a 17 point lead at one place of the game but not until after the lead had ehanged hands 12 times. In the waning minutes of the first half the Seminoles made their bid and shot out to a 37-0 lead. With only 4:12 left in the game FSU held a commanding 74-57 margin.

Hoping for an upset victory the Tars scrapped all the way but their effort was in vain. The Seminoles showed some effects of their 10-day layoff as the Tars repeatedly stole the ball.

Bob Griffith and Dick Bishop both seniors at Rollins wound up with 30 and 20 points respectively. The Tars canned 40.2 per cent of their shots as compared to FSU's 50 per cent effort.

This past week the Seminole five set Alabama's Crimson Tide and toppled the SEC team 68-57 before a crowd of 3,500 in Tully Gymnasium.

Dave Fedor proved to be the thorn in Alabama's side as he led all scorers with 24 points and pulled down 19 rebounds. This was the 40th straight game in which Fedor has hit in the double-figure brackets.

Backing Fedor up were juniors Rufus Ashworth and Ray Swain who both punished 12 points. Guard Jack Davis scored 9 points before fouling out with 6:13 left. Dale Rickards added 8 points.

Dropping only one game in 6 starts at Tully Gym the Seminoles reasted to a 44-36 halftime edge with Swain, Asnworth, and Fedor providing the points.

After missing his first attempt from the field Fedor meshed 7 straight baskets and finished the game with a 9 for 12 effort.

FSU Thinclads Finish Sixth In Annual Coliseum Relays

Florida State's debuting track team ran into stiff competition in the annual Coliseum Relays held in Monigomery, Ala., and finished sixth in team standings with eight and one half points.

The University of Alabama won the team title by nipping the Tigers of Auburn by one and one half points. Northeast Louisiana State, Georgia Tech, and LSU also finished ahead of the Seminoles.

Bill Davis and Steve Long were the only FSU eindermen to place in the indoor meet, which is the first test of the track season every year.

Davis finished second in the 800-yard dash be[illegible] of Northeast Louisiana State, the school which took the trophy in last year's Relay's.

Long tied for second in the high jump with a 6-1 effort. Alabama's Ronald Carter won the event with a 6-2 jump.

In this event last year, Long set a Coliseum Relays's record by leaping 6-2½ to crack the existing mark of 6-2 set by Lloyd Lassar in 1956.

"It was a very good meet," said track coach Mike Long. "It was one of those meets that was evenly contested."

"I was a little bit disappointed but in all honesty, the other teams were just too strong for us."

Long cited Davis' efforts as a main outstanding feature and also praised Quentin Till, who ran the anchor lap of the mile relay and was responsible for FSU's photo finish second to N. E. La. State in this event.

HERE'S THE SHAFT . . . being built for an elevator, which has been given to Florida State University and will be installed in Westcott Building by late March. Just half a century old, Westcott and its four floors have been the talk of stair-climbers for many years. Shaft is on west side of building south of windowless Westcott Auditorium (background).

Elevator To Be In Westcott

Florida State University's Westcott Bldg., whose four floors have been a complaint of stair-climbers for 50 years, is getting an elevator.

An elevator of the hydraulic sort, about 10 years old, and valued at $15,000, has been given to FSU by T. R. Smith, president of the Fryer-Smith Motor Company of Quincy. Assistant FSU Business Manager Ray E. Green Jr. said it should be installed by late March.

The elevator was in the old Quincy Hotel, which has been wrecked to make room for a car lot. Green said the elevator will operate to the third floor of Westcott.

University maintenance forces now are building a brick shaft for the elevator on the west side of Westcott Building and Montgomery-Bryce Elevator Company of Jacksonville will install the lift. Construction of the shaft and installation will cost a total of about $11,000.

Westcott Bldg. is used principally for the administrative offices of the University but the Art Dept. has classrooms and studios nn the third and fourth floor.

THIS WEEK . . . is national advertising week in Florida by proclamation of Gov. Farris Bryant. Here the governor hands copy of his proclamation to Carla Westphal, president of Gamma Alpha Chi professional ad group for women at FSU and Jorge Gomez, president of Alpha Delta Sigma professional ad fraternity for men at FSU. The two groups are sponsoring advertising day at FSU today.

Kappa Kappa Gamma Will Come On Campus In Spring

Kappa Kappa Gamma, national sorority, will colonize its 89th chapter on the Florida State University campus this spring.

This chapter will be the third chapter in Florida. The other two chapters are at Rollins College and at the University of Miami.

Kappa Kappa Gamma is the second oldest Greek-letter social sorority in the United States.

KKG will be rushing during Spring informal rush in Longmire. An extension to two days has been granted by Panhellenic, moving their first rush dates to February 16 and 17.

LATE REGISTRATION

Late rush registration for those who decide they would be interested in the new sorority will be held February 17, from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. in the Panhellenic office, 203 Longmire. Registration for regular rush will be held Thursday, February 9, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. in Longmire auditorium.

Kappa Kappa Gamma is represented locally by five transfer students. Lamoine Brittan is the graduate counselor. Sally Montgomery and Mamie Read from the University of Georgia and Lee Solomon and Gail Grout from the University of Mississippi are the other representatives.

The pin is a golden key set with fifteen gems. The jewels may be pearls, diamonds or sapphires.

Construction of the Kappa Kappa Gamma chapter house will begin this month or next, reported Miss Brittan, and will be finished by September, 1961. The house will be located on Jefferson St across from the Alpha Delta Pi house

Early Study In Languages Is Advocated

A language teacher who is fluent in four foreign languages advocates beginning the study of a language in elementary school and "continuing it uninterruptedly through high school and college."

Prof. Max Oppenheimer Jr. of Florida State University's Modern Languages Dept. says in an article "What Price Language?" in The Educational Forum this when one has finished the average two-year college course in a language he has had only 540 hours.

"Five hundred and forty hours of exposure to a language in a non-indigenous environment is much too little to achieve any sort of proficiency," he said, and "obviously the average person can not and should not spend the thousands of hours it takes a dedicated specialist to achieve perfect fluency in a foreign language."

This time problem can be solved, he said, by starting early in school and continuing through college. "While one should not expect the average student to achieve absolute native perfection at the end of his schooling, even the poorest student studying a foreign language through elementary school, high school and possibly college will be proficient and able to communicate with facility in the foreign language," he said.

Hard study is the key to learning, he emphasized. "Modern laboratories with fancy equipment will not make linguists out of anyone who does not also apply the seat of the pants to the seat of the chair," he concluded.

Evangelist Graham Will Crusade Here

By GLENDA POWERS
Flambeau Staff Writer

Billy Graham, who in the last ten years has attracted more than 20 million people to his various crusades, will speak Saturday at 7:30 p. m. in Doak S. Campbell Stadium.

The Tallahassee rally, expected to attract the largest single crowd for any purpose in the history of the city, according to Dr. Harold G. Sanders, general chairman of the city crusade, is part of the Florida Billy Graham Crusade.

The world-famous evangelist from Charlotte, N. C., appeared here six years ago but rain interrupted his sermon. Florida State University students and faculty were prime factors in both his past and coming appearance, Dr. Sanders said.

Delegates from 42 countries in this area will attend the Saturday rally, with commercial and school buses and private cars bringing groups from communities and churches.

SIGNIFICANCE

"Graham's appearance here is of great significance for both Florida and FSU," said Sanders. "I hope this crusade will give Tallahassee citizens and FSU students a new spiritual consciousness," he continued.

Choirs and small groups of singers are invited to augment the University Singers, in the combined choir of about 1,500 people. The choir will be directed by Cliff Barrows, song leader for the Graham crusade. Music of the choirs will be televised and recorded by ABC-TV and used on 500 stations Sunday afternoon on "The Hour of Decision" telecast.

In addition to Graham and Barrows, Beverly Shea, soloist; the Rev. Grady Wilson, associate Evangelist, and Willis Haymaker, crusade director, will be in Tallahassee this morning for a Press conference at 11 at the Floridan Hotel.

A 12:30 luncheon, with a limited number of guests, will include Gen. Farris Bryant, who will introduce Graham.

Schools May Be Without Windows

Windowless schoolhouses are advocated by an educational researcher, whose study of costs shows that windows are the most expensive part of a schoolhouse both to build and maintain.

Thomas A. Backus conducted the research for a doctorate degree, which was awarded him at Florida State University Fall semester graduation exercises.

"Schools could be reinstructed and operated more economically, and at the same time provide a more healthful and efficient and learning laboratory by the elimination of windows from classrooms, and the addition of adequate lighting, sound-proofing and air conditioning," said Backus.

In addition to cutting construction and maintenance costs, he said, the windowless classrooms would have more space for chalk boards, cabinets and pictures outside noise and distraction would be eliminated, eyestrain due to glare would be cut down, and classrooms could be used as fallout shelters in event of atomic attack.

STUDENTS WOULDN'T SUFFER

Students wouldn't suffer by not being able to look out windows during a dull moment, according to Backus. He said "in a classroom which is alive with activity, neither students nor teacher are confined by the four walls which surround them."

He added, however, that his study was of construction and maintenance costs in relation to economy of operation, and that suitability of windowless schools for instruction deserved further consideration

MOST EXPENSIVE

The most expensive sort of windows to maintain, Backus found, are the old double-hung wooden frame windows. Windows least expensive to maintain, he has found, are steel frame windows.

If one considers just the expense of building and maintaining a schoolhouse, the ideal one would have concrete floors, block walls, and a galvanized steel roof.

Backus added that there are some compelling disadvantages about galvanized roofs, which would insulate poorly and would make schools look like barns.

Backus conducted his studies under the direction of Dr Eugene S. Lawler, professor of education at FSU. Backus received his bachelor's and master's degrees from Colorado State College of Education. He is presently a natural science instructor at St. Petersburg Junior College

All Florida State University faculty, staff and students are requested to report their 1961 license numbers as soon as possible to the campus police, room 2, Westcott Bldg.

President Is Grandparent

The president of Florida State University, Dr. Gordon W. Blackwell, and Mrs. Blackwell are now grandparents. A daughter, Sara Elizabeth, was born to Mr. and Mrs. Gordon L. Blackwell in Boston Jan. 29.

The younger Blackwell is a student at the Graduate School of Business Administration in Boston and his wife is the former Cecelia Watson of Sarasota. Mother and baby were reported doing well.

Sara Elizabeth was named for her two grandmothers. The maternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Watson of Sarasota.

Decals

No change in traffic registration status for sophomores who become juniors this semester will be made until the registrar's office prints a list of those eligible, campus police announced.

Sophomores are given red decals while junior receive white decals permitting more liberal use of their cars on campus. Sophomores are not permitted to use cars in certain areas during certain hours.

The registrar's list may not be ready until two weeks after the beginning of the semester, the office said.

Assume Heavier Loads

Faculty To Receive Increased Salaries

The state Cabinet Wednesday approved university budgets which would considerably raise faculty salaries for 1961-63 but would limit expansion of faculty and facilities.

Along with pay raises, professors would be given heavier teaching loads.

The cabinet turned down requests for funds to pay for new positions on the faculty.

The approved allocation, which must still pass the Legislature, gives an average over-all salary raise of 23 per cent for the biennium—from $6,913 to $8,255 next year and $8,550 in 1962.

Deans and full professors stand to gain the most from the proposed increases: a 29.7 per cent raise from the current $9,115 to $11,500 for '62 and $11,900 for '63.

Associate professors would receive $8,700 next year and $9,100 in '63, a gain of 24.8 per cent.

Assistant professors would be raised from $6,274 to $7,400 and instructors from $5,376 to $5,900.

EVEN WITH OTHERS

Florida State University salaries would be about on a level with the University of Florida and the University of South Florida. Identical raises were given the three institutions.

At the same time the cabinet made recommendations on other phases of the university budget, apparently cutting the capital outlay request which would hamper physical expansion.

Salary increases were given top priority in the budget request, and FSU President Blackwell said he was delighted with the cabinet's action.

But he expressed concern that no new faculty positions appeared possible and that construction of new buildings to alleviate overcrowding might be "handicapped."

ENROLLMENT GROWS

Enrollment at FSU will continue to increase, the president said.

The approved raises will put FSU approximately on a level with 20 comparable state universities as of last year, when a comparative study was made.

The university, through the Board of Control, had asked for slightly higher raises to compare favorably with what salaries are expected to be at these schools the next two years, allowing for seven to eight per cent increases there.

Dr. Byrard Culpepper, executive director for the Board of Control, called the raise a "nice increase" which would be fine for the present program.

Blackwell and Culpepper said they had not yet had time to analyze the full effect of the decision on expansion.

SETS AVERAGE

The cabinet's procedure is to set an average salary for each faculty rank, appropriating a lump sum to the university on that basis. Specific allocation of available funds is left to each school.

Salaries at the Negro Florida A&M University remain considerably lower than at the three white schools, but are said to be based on comparable Negro institutions. The over-all academic average was set at $6,391 for '62 and $6,613 for '63.

The average teacher load was raised to 400 student semester hours at FSU and USF, compared to 380 at the U of F. Officials said courses at the U of F are generally more technical, in explanation of the hour difference.

The new budget is intended to eventually even up the percentage of top-level and lower division personnel as recommended by the board of control, at 50-50.

The present division at FSU is 55.3 per cent of the academic staff composed of full professors and associates.

Value Of Education

Florida Businessmen Give Thanks To AAUP

A spokesman for Florida businessmen assured university professors Monday night that business appreciates the contributions of higher education and the need to support it financially.

"Business needs education," Harold Colee, executive vice president and general manager of the Florida Chamber of Commerce, told the FSU American Assn. of University Professors.

The former state president of the Chamber of Commerce was one of a series of speakers this year on various facets of state support of higher education.

Colee cited the attraction educational institutions have for bringing industry to the state — "Nearly every industry wants to be near centers of research and training."

PULLS POPULATION

The "population-pulling power" of a good education system is another advantage to state businessmen, Colee said.

Business also makes use of the energies and qualifications of students produced by the universities, he pointed out.

Besides supporting universities financially, Colee said business should do a better job of protecting their academic freedom against those who do not understand their function.

Universities are creatures of society but society must understand that freedom of individual thought is essential to their functioning, he declared.

AGAINST FEDERAL AID

The state organizationo opposes federal aid to education because of the possible danger of federal control, the official said. To be only alternative to federal aid is adequate support on the state level, he remarked.

Colee also discussed the problem of industry outbidding universities for the services of capable men by offering higher salaries.

If able professors are removed from the classroom, leaving only the less competent, the country will suffer, he pointed out. "What happens to the universities happens to Americans."

In response to a question, Colee said business would not strongly oppose more taxes if necessary and if presented properly, as a "commercially wrapped package in a merchandisable fashion."

HIGHEST IN SOUTH

Florida has the highest per capita income of any southern state, he remarked, and is 10th in population in the U. S. As the population grows, productivity also increases, meaning more money to pay for schools, he added.

But teaching salaries have remained low compared to other states partially because this wealth was attracted to the state by the absence of income tax and the benefit of homestead exemption laws.

Colee promised the Chamber of Commerce would help in any way possible to influence the Legislature and the people favorably.

He said he has spoken throughout the state on the need to maintain schools on a level with any in the nation. A continuous job of selling education is needed, he declared.

Bergman Film To Be Shown

The Florida State University Film Club will present the Swedish film, Sawdust and Tinsel (The Naked Night), Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in Westcott Auditorium.

This drama of circus life and human frailty is directed by the Swedish writer-director Ingmar Bergman.

Alf Sjoberg plays the circus owner; Harriet Andersson—a sort of Swedish Audrey Hepburn —is the sulky young equestrienne; and Anders Ek is shown as the old circus clown.

All students taking the Graduate Record Exam, must pick up applications and pay fees at 203 Education by 5 p.m. today for the March 10 and 11 exam.

ASSIGNMENT IN JUDEA . . . recently went into rehearsal and will have its premiere performance as the third play of the year presented by the University Theatre. Students who are rehearsing to perform with Eddie Dowling are Sam Baker, Sally Moure, Cal Yeomans, and Peggy Traylor. The play will be March 1-7. (Photo by Lloyd Hines)

FLORIDA STATE UNIVERSITY'S . . . $2,000,000 Library will be dedicated as the Robert Manning Strozier Library on Feb. 10 as FSU honors the president who served the institution from 1957 until his death on April 20, 1960. An old friend and colleague, Dr. Napier Wilt of the University of Chicago, will be the speaker for the dedication ceremony at 11 a.m.

Hall Of Merit Is Created As FSU's Highest Honor

A Hall of Merit was created by Student Senate Wednesday by a vote of 27 to 13 after nearly an hour of heated debate.

Intended to be the highest honor that could be bestowed upon a person by the student body, the Hall of Merit would honor undergraduates, alumni, staff members or other persons related to the university.

Opponents of the measure tagged it as "superfluous" and overlapping other honoraries.

Supporters of the bill, among them Sen. Dick Hume, claimed that this was impossible because the hall was not a membership honorary. Whether or not the Hall of Merit succeeds in becoming the highest honor and worth while honor depends on the "initial response it gets," said Men's Vice President Marion Clark, one of the bill's sponsors.

After the debate had extended for over 40 minutes, Student Body Vice President Bobby Byrd invoked the power of the chair to limit further debate.

The bill provides that five persons be chosen for membership in the Hall of Merit the first year, in succeeding years up to two persons may be added to the hall, although the selection committee is not bound to select any members in a given year unless it feels that membership is deserved.

SELECTION COMMITTEE

The selection committee will include student body president and the president of the university as ex-officio members, six students and the dean of students.

Members of the Hall of Merit will be honored at a special program and presented with plaques. In case recognition is given a deceased person, the plaque will be given to the nearest relative.

A similar plaque will be displayed at a designated place on campus.

The bill did not establish any criteria for membership in the Hall of Merit but rather left that to be established by the committees.

Examples of possible designations were made by sponsors of the bill. Sen. Jack Eilertsen and Clark. Prominent among the possible choices would be Student Members who had brought recognition to the university because of their independent research. "I think they will be able to draw a line between members of the faculty who are doing research and those who are doing exceptional research," Clark said.

Examples of possible student choices that were cited included athletes, one who made first string all-American or one who brought recognition to the school by attending the Olympics; students who did outstanding individual research or provided exceptional leadership.

ALREADY HONORED

"People who have any chance of being honored have already been honored in their field," Sen. Chuck Kemman declared. "I think we've already got enough honoraries to honor anyone that needs to be honored," he said.

Sen. Jim Miller, labeling the entire bill "superfluous" and unclear, charged that students "would not have a chance" to be elected to the hall because they would not do anything on the scale of importance that faculty members or alumni would do.

Answering the charge that the bill was "nebulous," Sen. Boyd Elam, chairman of the Organizations and Finance Committee which studied the bill, said this was a deliberate intention in order to give the selection committee the widest possible latitude in their choices.

ROLL CALLS

Two roll call votes were taken on the bill, one concerning its postponement until the next Senate meeting, defeated 21 to 19, and the final roll call on the bill as a whole.

Slated for the creation of the Hall of Merit were Clark, Champion, Eilertsen, Elam, Farnell, Powers, Rich, Boyd, Boykin, Burke, Currie, Doomar, Fountain, Hume, Kuttler, LeGate, Marler, Richason, Saucr, Simpson, Sandin, Stevens, Stoker, Thigpen, Tilly, Baldwin and King.

Against: Women's Vice President Bedell, Sens. Ferlita, Finlay, Keene Macklem Miller, Robinson, Eastridge, Kemman, Talley, Wareham, Dobson and Paluzzi.

Abstaining was Sen. Chet Adair.

After Hesitation

Bryant Approves Dean Of Faculties

By ROSA NELL WILSON
Flambeau News Editor

Gov. Farris Bryant gave his approval yesterday to the FSU administrative structure after delaying the appointment of a dean of faculties last week by questioning the need for the position.

At his press conference yesterday, Bryant termed the administrative structure "proper."

With the governor's approval, the way was apparently clear for the State Board of Education to approve appointment of Dr. Werner Baum as dean of faculties.

Dr. Baum, who has been acting dean, received the formal title from the Board of Control last week, along with a salary raise from $14 000 to $15,000.

BOARD RECONSIDERED

The short-lived controversy was stirred up last week when the governor announced the board's action was being reconsidered by the State Board of Education, composed of cabinet members and headed by the governor as chairman.

Bryant questioned the need of a dean of faculties, and was reported in state newspapers as saying he wanted to find out why FSU had 22 deans and the University of Florida only 12.

Bryant said yesterday he had conferred with Dr. Edward Culpepper, executive director of the Board of Control, on the matter.

"My own resolution of this problem is that the administrative structure at Florida State University as now set up with the position of dean of faculties is proper," he told newsmen.

"With the dean of faculties handling academic matters, the vice president handling administration, the business manager handling financial matters and the dean of students handling relations of the university administration with the student body, Dr. Blackwell will have an effective administrative organization which will enable him to perform his proper functions through these administrative representatives without necessarily being lost himself in the detail of doing these jobs."

DIFFERENT TITLES

The apparent discrepancy in the number of deans at the U of F and FSU was really a difference in titles given to similar jobs, Bryant's press aide, John Evans, explained.

Both have about 22-23, considering that some are part-time administrators and part-time teachers.

Bryant said he suggested the position was improper because he was not sure it was needed and "any excess position is an improper one."

The FSU dean of faculties supervises the academic activities of nine schools in the university. The deans of these schools and two directors, of the library and summer school, report to him.

"I could not possibly keep in close touch with all of those deans and work with all of them," President Gordon Blackwell commented Wednesday.

SINCERE QUESTION

He added the governor had raised a very sincere question which could be answered satisfactorily.

The personal qualifications of Dr. Baum for the job never seemed to be in question.

A meteorologist, he was promoted from dean of the Graduate School and director of research to be acting dean of faculties last Spring, when Dr. Milton Carothers, who had been acting dean, was named vice president.

The first dean of faculties was Dr. Charles Davis, appointed in the previous administration of Dr. Robert Strozier. Dr. Carothers became acting dean when Dr. Davis resigned in 1959 to become president of Winthrop College.

Portrait To Be Shown At The Dedication Fri.

By TONI DICARLO
Flambeau Staff Writer

All students and faculty members are invited to attend the dedication of the $2,000,000 Robert Manning Strozier Library at 11 a.m. today in the Library Lecture Hall.

The highlight of the ceremony will be the unveiling of a 25 by 30 inch portrait of the late Florida State University president. The painting, a gift of the FSU classes of 1957 and 1960, was done by Frank Benning of New York.

Benning, who was chosen from a group of eight artists being considered, painted the oil portrait from Mrs. Strozier's favorite photograph of her husband. The educator is portrayed in a blue-grey suit in an informal pose.

Dr. Gunnar Bosch, head of the FSU Art Dept., said that, "The eyes are beautifully done, and the dash of red in the Legion of Honor ribbon in the buttonhole adds a dash of warmth that is very typical of Dr. Strozier's personality."

DANIEL TO UNVEIL

J. J. Daniel, chairman of the State Board of Control, will unveil the portrait, which will be placed in the library in the circulation desk area

Dr. Napier Wilt, dean of humanities at the University of Chicago and a personal friend of the Strouiers, will speak on "Libraries and Humanities." A member of the Chicago faculty since 1923, Wilt is the author of several books on humor and the theatre.

Mrs. Strozier, widow of the educator who served FSU from September, 1957, until his death last April, has come to Tallahassee from Chicago, her present home, to attend the dedication. She will be the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Rod Shaw while she is here.

Dr. Strozier was a language teacher and administrator who came to FSU after 12 years at the University of Chicago as dean of students and professor of romance languages. He was a native of Georgia and served on the faculty of the University of Georgia before going to Chicago.

The library parking lot will be closed this morning because of the ceremony.

Librarians and university officials from various neighboring states were invited to the ceremony.

The Rev. Van B. Barrett will give the invocation.

The committee which planned the dedication was headed by Dr. John A. Griffin, director of university relations. Other members were Dean Louis Shores of the Library School; Director R. Orwin Rush of the Library; Assistant Dean Robert Clapp of the Library School; William Quinly, director, Audio-Visual Center, and Dean of the Faculties Werner A. Baum.

Reaver Speaks At Coffee

Dr. Russel Reaver of the English Dept. will discuss "The Art of Parody" at the English Coffee Hour at 4 p.m. this afternoon in Westminster House. The literary-social hour is open to the public.

Parody is indirect literary criticism through which one can gain an understanding of examples in literary taste and fashion through the centuries, said Reaver.

A writer will sometimes establish a style that becomes a trademark and thus invite a parody. This was true of the very involved sentence structure used by Henry James which was parodied by Max Beerbohm.

"It takes keen intellect and insight to write a parody as it is written in the same style as the author's and the result may become just as significant as the piece of literature it is parodying."

Reaver also said the twentieth century parodist especially provides a view of the spread of literary history from Chaucer to the present.

These students planning to graduate in June must make application for degrees at the Registrar's Office in 108 Westcott on or before Feb. 12.

Cabinet's Wisdom Questioned

When the state cabinet questions the wisdom of the high admission requirements for Florida universities, we can only question the personal wisdom of the individuals involved.

The cabinet has suggested that we lower the requirements for admission and "educate the masses." At the same time, however, it refused to consider requests for new teaching positions. Now that presently employed professors are about to receive a long-delayed and much needed increase in salary, the cabinet seems to think that it is reasonable to expect them to increase their teaching loads with larger classes than the present university facilities can stand.

IN ORDER to maintain the degree of quality in education which Florida universities have achieved, it has long been apparent that the universities were going to have to increase professor pay to attract and keep more of the top-ranking educators. It is this type of educator, combined with a high quality of student that will provide the ultimate worth or greatness of a university.

If the requirements are lowered too much more than they are now, it will become impossible to maintain any sort of student quality or educational excellence. Would the cabinet like to suggest that we lower our standards and admit everyone who applies—with no exceptions, thus becoming a state of poorly educated citizens in order to make sure that everyone has an "equal" education? If this is the case, then why hasn't something been done about providing equal educational opportunities for both Negro and white students in the state? Isn't this a logical and integral part of equal education, of not "penalizing" the masses?

IT IS PARTICULARLY amusing to hear the State School Superintendent admit that under the present admission requirements he could never have gone to college. By his own admission, he becomes indicative of the type of educational standards that he is prepared to support — second rate. The members of our present cabinet do not seem to realize that a university is not merely a continuation of high school. It's purposes are much deeper and should not be placed in a low qual[illegible] Nor should the educational background of the cabinet members be a gauge as to the necessity of requirements for the present student population.

According to an article in the Tampa Tribune, the State Agriculture Commissioner feels that, "We have a responsibility to try to educate the masses, not just the exceptional students." A look at the grade presently being issued from the registrar's offices will prove to the commissioner that the majority of the university students are average "C" or below students. Can this type of student be considered an exceptional student, and can the cabinet expect the universities to be bogged down with students of even lesser ability if it is not willing to make an increase in the number of professors and physical facilities?

How can the universities as they are presently operated increase their teaching loads, lower their admission requirements and still accept no new teaching positions? To consider this possible, shows a remarkable shortsightedness on the part of the governor and his cabinet.

What Happened To Grades?

What happened to the registrar's office? It has usually held a reputation for at least semi-efficiency, but this time, it has outdone itself for being instrumental in creating a mess.

The majority of students enrolled left the campus for a brief three-day semester break pre-registered for the new semester. Now, one and half weeks after they are back, they are placed in the position of making frantic trips to counselors and to drop and add which is already closed. Is the mix-up to be attributed to the lateness of the grades being issued, the shortness of semester break, or the system of pre-registration and a too short drop and add? Perhaps it is a combination of all these factors, mixed in with a little blind planning.

ADMITTEDLY, IT is difficult to forsee the eventual effect of some present actions, but it is incredible that the mess has resulted from the late grades is solely the result of an oversight.

What happens to those students who are duly registered at FSU and who haven't received their grades yet, or don't their count? Perhaps they are the result of inaccuracies on the university's master student list, which certainly will never receive a prize for accuracy. Again, there are students who have received only one grade out of five, and are dismayed because the registrar's office cannot find a record of their other grades. And then there are the students who are receiving competely incorrect grades. Do they have someone else's grades, or did they actually fail all those courses? It would seem that after the long delay in issuing the grades, that they would at least have had a certain degree of accuracy.

A LOOK AT THE tentative schedule for the next year shows an equally short semester break is planned—another three day "vacation". We strongly suggest that the registrar's office look to the scheduling of next year's exams, semester break and pre-registration with more of an eye on the outcome.

A little planning might save some wear and tear on counselors, students and the registrar's office which will have to cope with the irate mob sooner or later.

After all, a university of this size, can really offer no valid excuse for such inefficiency. It should know better. The present mess leads back to the question, What happened in the registrar's office?

Letter To The Editor

Coed Appalled At Poland's Expulsion

TO THE EDITOR:

I am appalled by the implications of the circumstances surrounding the recent expulsion of one Jefferson Poland from the Florida State University. If the reasons presented by Mr. Poland in Tuesday's Flambeau (also appearing in a recent UPI dispatch) are the sole grounds for his expulsion, this development brings several pertinent questions to mind.

(1) Are the students of Florida State University to assume from this incident that any one of them may be pushed outside the doors of the academic world if he dares step off the smoothly (?) running wheel of "subordination." In this instance, a nonviolent action based on beliefs seems to be classified as "insubordination." Perhaps the women in our dormitories should be warned that they may be endangering their academic standing when they speak to the switchboard operators from A&M University in public.

(2) ONCE AGAIN, I arrive at a question that has plagued my mind for four years—what is the purpose of spending four years as a student in an academic institution if one must spend that time devoting within the narrow confines of the fixed beliefs of others. Expression should be a vital part of education.

In closing, let me say that the phrase ". . . make FSU a GREAT university" bad best be discarded. Such an assertion in the light of such events as Mr. Poland's expulsion places our university in a situation similar to that of a small child waving his arms, beating on his chest, and shouting, "I am GREAT!" He may be tolerated; he may even be overtly acknowledged; but his claims will not be believed by any other than himself.

Honor System Revisions Raise Thoughty Questions

By MYGNON CHAMPION

A spirited debate can be expected in Student Senate Wednesday when the proposed Honor System revision comes up for a vote.

The bill, which is an outgrowth of the Faculty-Student Committee to Study the Honor System, has already evoked considerable controversy among student government officers. Even before it reaches the Senate floor, the bill is certain to receive a severe gunglover in the Judicial and Rules Committee Monday afternoon.

THE MAIN POINTS of debate in the bill are: (1) elimination of lying and stealing as Honor Code infractions; (2) compulsory suspension in all convictions of cheating: (3) prohibition against proctoring of any exam; and (4) the requirement of a 90 per cent vote in favor of the proposed changes in order to pass.

At the present time, the Student Body Constitution lists three offenses (lying, cheating, and stealing) as violations of the Honor Code. Under the proposed System, cheating would be the only violation.

SEVERAL QUESTIONS have been raised in reference to this change. How are lying and stealing to be punished? Will regular law-enforcement officers investigate these offenses or will it be done by the Administration? Will students who would otherwise be handled by Honor Court now be tried in city court? Will some of these cases be too minor to involve city authorities? Will the Administration handle these cases?

At present a student who is convicted of cheating may receive a variety of penalties. He may be given an "F" in the course, be placed on Honor Court probation or be suspended from school. Under the proposed System, all students convicted of cheating will be suspended.

IS THE RIGIDITY of this punishment too inflexible? Is it wise to have a single punishment or should the Honor Court be allowed to use its discretion in meeting out punishment? Is the person who has looked on someone else's paper as guilty as the person who has stolen an exam?

The new System would allow no proctoring by professors except in very particular circumstances as outlined in the bill itself. Is any proctoring consistent with an Honor System? On the other hand, how wise is this prohibition against proctoring? Are most students too involved with taking their own exams to watch for other students who are cheating?

FINALLY, THE bill provides that the changes will not become law unless 90 per cent of the students voting in a campus - wide election state that they favor the proposal. A vote in favor of the proposal will be taken both as a vote of confidence in the Honor System and as a pledge to follow it completely (both by not cheating and by reporting anyone whom you know or have reason to believe has cheated).

Such a vote would be highly encouraging, but it seems doubtful that such a vote will be forthcoming. In fact, it seems doubtful that 90 per cent of the students would vote the same way on any issue, particularly one so controversial as this.

Just Wondering

Is There Real Merit In Hall Of Merit?

By DEANNA MORRIS and LESLIE POWELL

Just wondering what kind of honorary this new Hall of Merit is planning to be. If it carefully follows through with its professed intentions, it can be a very nice little honor for the hometown crew.

But if it follows the traditional way of FSU honoraries—those with the big ideals and the big popular vote—then we can just chalk it up as another popularity contest. When we speak of extending this honor to faculty, students, alumnus or others that are or have been connected with the university, and have brought outstanding recognition names such as Dr. Robert Manning Strozier, our late president; Ernst Von Dohnanyi, the late composer and Carlisle Floyd, composer of the operas, Wothering Heights and Susanna.

THE PROPOSED bill calls for the appointment of five persons to the Hall of Merit during the first year. What should be kept in mind is that there may not be five, and for that matter, there may not be two per year as stipulated in the bill. We urge those responsible to not appoint people just to fill a quota as seems to be happening on the Hall of Fame.

Faculty members who bring recognition to the university for their outstanding research are among the examples listed by the committee. But is this just another mediocre honor? How long will it take for students and faculty alike to distinguish between Hall of Merit and Hall of Fame? Actually, which is to be called the "highest honor that could be bestowed upon a person" by the student body now?

IF THE HALL of Merit is to successfully carry off its aim of honoring those men and women who have brought or who may in time bring national recognition to FSU, it will have to be polished to a distinct thoroughness that will not allow the insertion of various student officers, campus personalities and embryo immortals into the ranks of the respected and revered.

Hall of Merit can be a worthwhile honor, If it is not spoiled by unworthy aims of ambitious students.

Dear Mama Seminole

DEAR MAMA SEMINOLE:

The Florida State University pays tribute today to the enduring values of society. In this instance the values were expressed in the life of Robert Manning Strozier — scholar, teacher, leader. In naming the library for its former President, the University recognizes the contributions which he made in the three he years that he led us. They were exciting year—yes, when one man took a dream and pursued that dream with with such faith, such strength and such courage that we were able to share his vision of a great university.

IT IS APPROPRIATE that such recognition take form that has been chosen. For Dr. Strozier the library was the hub, the center of academic life and he made it the trademark of this university in its literature and publications. However, the most appropriate tribute this most uncommon man will not take place in ceremonies today. The final tribute will be a continuing one—a tribute that will be made in all of the tomorrows as we seek to translate his dream into reality, and uphold the values in which he believed.

And to which he gave his life.

Love,
Georgie VIII

Coma Is Impressed By Early Marriage

By LESLIE POWELL

Coma struggled into her regular chair in the Soda Shop. "Sheesh," she groaned, dropping her cigarette holder. As she stooped to retrieve it, her feet became entangled in the several strands of beads she wore. Like the lights in an old time movie house, Coma began to change color with alacrity. We managed to extract her at the magenta stage.

"Hey, man," the man at the next table said, tapping me on the shoulder, "She ain't getting no oxygen from the waist down; her legs are black."

"SHUT UP, fool," Coma growled, "I'm wearing my leotards."

"Now," she said, "where were we?"

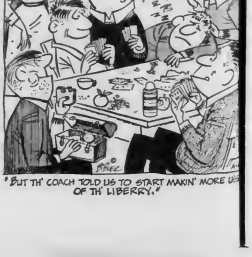
"Sheesh," I said.

"Oh, yeah, sheesh. Over the break I was reading all about the joys and sorrows of teenage marriages. It is enough to break your heart. Can you imagine having to decide between accepting your diploma in the maternity ward, or having your baby in an auditorium?

"OH, THE heart rending affairs of a young mother of fourteen and a half. She finds out what cheats the adults of this world really are. She will remember all those Anglo-Saxon words she used to hear but could never find in any dictionary. And she has to guide the life of her little family. Will Johnny be allowed to play stick-'em-up with toy switchblade? Can Johnny's taps on his bootees, or will carriage set ostracize him? Should he have a DA haircut to match the matching plaid beanie?

"And I doubt that any one discerning young mother can find a leather jacket and levis to fit a toddler. And of course, there is the home to work on. Just where do edges shall you take off? Will he agree to cutting his own burns? How will his contact on the paper route feel? Will his Gilda Gray tattoo fade into an itchy swivel every time he flings the late sun through the window?

"SHOULD A young mother insist on her husband pulling out of the Golden Dog Knifing Society? If he won't give up his membership should she withdraw from Ladies Auxiliary and the PTA? Or maybe the little lady should see a shrink. See? I'm glad I'm not a teenager anymore. All those decisions to make. I am glad I've gotten fatalistic and decided that marriage is an idealistic side of sixty rather than a half. She finds nothing more than a body with which to share beer and a burp with.



And Coma was off on her sunbonnet framing sweet rum of a face, humming "Flings" all the way to Prep for Marriage class.

Valdosta State Invades Florida State Tomorrow

By MARK HILLIS
Flambeau Sports Writer

This Saturday night Valdosta State invades the Seminole's lair at 6 p.m. in their inaugural contest with Coach Bud Kennedy's improving basketball team.

Victors in five of their last six, starts the Seminoles will be seeking their fourth consecutive victory over the fine Valdosta team who sports an 11-2 record.

Valdosta State, current co-leaders in the GIAC, have recently defeated Rollins, an 8 point victim of FSU. Coach Gary Colson's Rebels are led on the court by forward Homer Chambliss (15.6) and guard Doug Winters (15.1) their top scorers.

The game will start at 6:00 p.m. in order to allow the Rebel team to return home for special campus activities. Only FSU student I. D. cards are required for admission.

Three technical fouls within 49 seconds and seven foul shots gave Florida State the momentum needed to overcome a torrid scoring attack by the Citadel Bulldogs and coast to a 83-77 victory in Tully Gym this past Monday.

The Seminole fans that saw the game witnessed one of the most exciting of the season. The Bulldogs were slapped with five technical fouls by the two SEC cage officials each foul spelling defeat for the Citadel.

Their head coach, Mel Thompson had this comment to make about the game's officiating. "I thought they (the officials) stunk. I've never said this before but what else can I say? I don't think that we played our best ball game but when you shoot 64% and get beat what can you do?"

Dave Fedor took high-point honors bagging 27 points to lead the Seminoles to their third straight victory.

A Dab Of Sportsmanship

Citadel basketball forces, both eagers and coaches, met a neurotic evening last Monday night. They argued with the referees again and again and received frustration for their trouble.

This is the usual payoff for those who waste time and energy attempting to prevail over the iron word of a sports official.

In an athletic contest, and particularly in a cage battle, calling balls, enforcing the rules, and judging the rightful possession of the ball is a demanding job. It's one that exhausts both the tongue and the patience and one that will tolerate no demands by players.

This is not to indicate that a referee's job is always—or ever—carried out precisely to the letter of the law. It is humanly impossible to keep up with charging players and still keep a careful watch on every movement of every cager.

But referees are people who make mistakes, but their mistakes usually balance out. And no amount of persuasion will change the decision.

The Citadel learned this the hard way. The gentlemanly decorum of the catalogue claims characterized a cadet in the "West Point of the South" was nowhere in evidence.

Their muttered profanities began with the initial call against them and grew increasingly louder throughout the contest. In the second half the officials began penalizing them for their language. The profanity may have cost them the ball game.

Frustrated the referees were poor. They called some fouls on the Bulldogs that were not deserved. But they were not partisan and were biased in their inaccurateness.

Coach Hugh Durham was off the bench with many calls. But the difference came in the wording of the protests and vulgar language got its just reward.

The Florida State will be walking into a pit when they travel to South Carolina next week. The Cadets will be out in force and will be armed with propaganda of how they "were robbed." It's going to be a trying experience for the Seminoles.

The word "sportsmanship" is lost in a cloud of triteness, but maybe a little of it, taken before each contest, will help avoid the tenuous of referee-baiting.

Tigers Seek Revenge

FSU Tankers Duel Suwanee Swimmers

By BILL VERIGAN
Flambeau Sports Writer

Florida State's swimming team concludes a two-night home stand tonight at 8 p.m. against Sewanee's revenge-hungry mermen.

The Sewanee Tigers, directed by former FSU diving coach, Ted Britondo, are eager to sink their claws into the Seminoles in answer to a close 50-45 loss suffered at the hands of the Tribe last year.

The five-point difference was as close as FSU came to defeat in last season's 10 meet sweep.

The Tigers' hopes rest mainly on the experience of sprinters Charlie Robinson, and Jim Studeman, backstroker Dick Wolverton, breaststroker George Lewis, and diver Ronnie Zodin.

The Seminoles had a 2-1 record for the season before they met Alabama's Crimson Tide last night. This was the first meeting between the two schools since Alabama just entered swimming competition last year. The Tide was overwhelmed by Sewanee in a dual meet earlier this year.

FSU will take a horde of stars, including Buck Hiles and Curt Genders into the contest.

Hiles was an All-American in the 440-yard freestyle during his sophomore year and holds numerous records. He was Florida State's top man in points last season. His two latest school records came on the last tour against Southern Methodist. They were in the 200-yard individual medley and the 100-yard freestyle.

Curt Genders has always been an outstanding performer during his school career. He has been a two-time All-American diver in the low-board. During the Texas tour he racked up 308.45 points against SMU.

Backing up the leaders will be junior Paul Thompson and sophomore Risto Pyykko. Thompson holds two pool records for the FSU pool; moreover, at Texas A&M he smashed their 220 and 440-freestyle pool records.

Pyykko, holder of three freshman swimming records, now owns the Texas A&M butterfly standard.

In the last 35 meets, dating back to 1957, Florida State has won 31, lost three, and tied one. Ironically enough, the only three disappointments came at the hands of Southern Methodist. Before the loss this year the Tribe had won seventeen straight dual meets, and they will be trying their best to build up another winning streak.

Managers Needed

Managers are now being accepted for the varsity and freshman baseball teams.

Anyone interested in accepting one of these positions should contact Coach Danny Litwhiler on the FSU baseball diamond Monday through Friday from 4 until 5:30 p.m.

Any assistance will be greatly appreciated by the athletic department, says Litwhiler.

Gymnastic Team Defends Crown

Florida's State's gymnastic team is traveling to Baton Rouge for the Mardi Gras Champions ships tomorrow.

Holdovers from last year's squad which copped the title are Jack Ryder, competing in tumbling and trampoline. Bill Bewsin in the All-Around, Rick Miller, in the All-Around, and Jerome Edwards, in the rope climbing event.

Joe Kreene, a graduate of last year's freshman squad who competes in tumbling and the trampoline, freshman Ray Schafer, in the All-Around and Yoshito Hatano, in the All-Around.

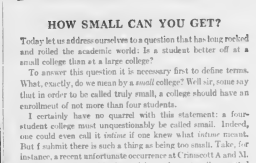
Joe Gusic is coaching the team this year on a volunteer basis.

Committee Renders Gymnastic Verdict

Florida State University's athletic committee meets today to render a final verdict on the thoroughly discussed gymnastics controversy.

This will be a closed session in which the committee members will discuss all aspects of the situation again, vote and draft a letter to Pres. Gordon W. Blackwell recommending a course of action.

Today's meeting will also be the last in a series of rehearings agreed to by Dean Mode Stone and the athletic committee after 730 students expressed an opinion on the issue via a questionnaire printed in the Flambeau.



Previously, the committee has heard interested parties discuss different sides of the question. At the first meeting, the committee talked with Athletic Director Vaughn Mancha and student representatives Nancy Sinden, Wally Keene, Chet Adair, Jack Ryder, and Ben Sharp.

At the second meeting, the committee heard Dr. Hartley Price and Dr Kenneth Miller. Price is the coach of the gymnastics squad and Miller is the head of the Department of Physical Education.

The controversy arose last spring, when the athletic committee voted to transfer the gymnastics squad from the Athletic Department, which handles all intercollegiate sports, to the Physical Education Department because of "lack of competition" and financial reasons.

Their decision raised a furor among student followers of the sport, which had been one of the most successful at FSU in the last few years.

After the annual presentation of Gymkana, a gymnastics show originated by Price, student feeling on the matter reached a peak. The Flambeau survey showed clearly that there was enough student opinion on the issue to warrant rehearings, which was granted by the committee.

HOW SMALL CAN YOU GET?

Today let us address ourselves to a question that has long rocked and rolled the academic world: Is a student better off at a small college than at a large college?

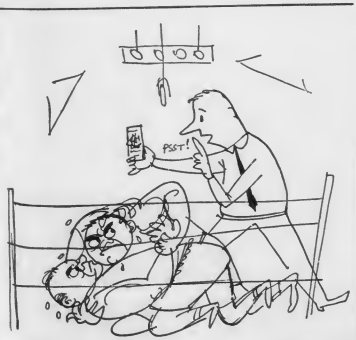
To answer this question it is necessary first to define terms. What, exactly, do we mean by a small college? Well sir, some say that in order to be called truly small, a college should have an enrollment of not more than four students.

I certainly have no quarrel with this statement: a four-student college must unquestionably be called small. Indeed, one could even call it intense if one knew what intense meant. But I submit there is such a thing as being too small. Take, for instance, a recent unfortunate occurrence at Crimscott A and M.

Crimscott A and M, situated in a pleasant valley nestled between Denver and Baltimore, was founded by A. and M. Crimscott, two brothers who left Ireland in 1706 to escape the potato famine of 1841. As a result of their foresight, the Crimscott brothers never went without potatoes for one single day of their lives—and mighty grateful they were! One night, full of gratitude after a hearty meal of French fries, cottage fries, hash browns, and au gratin, they decided to show their appreciation to this bountiful land of potatoes by endowing a college. They stipulated that enrollment should never exceed four students because they felt that only by keeping the college thin small could each student be assured of the personalized attention, the camaraderie, the feeling of belonging, that is all too often lacking in higher education.

Well sir, things went along swimmingly until one Saturday a few years ago. On this day Crimscott had a football game scheduled against Minnesota, its traditional rival. Football was, of course, something of a problem at Crimscott, what with only four students enrolled in the entire college. It was easy enough to muster a backfield, but finding a good line—or even a bad line—baffled the most resourceful coaching minds in the country.

Well sir, on the morning of the big game against Minnesota, its traditional rival, a capricious destiny dealt Crimscott a cruel blow—in fact, four cruel blows. Signfore, the quarterback, woke up that morning with the breakbone fever. Wrichards, the fullback, was unable to start his motorcycle. Beerbohm-Tree, the wingback-tailback, got his necktie caught in his espresso machine. Langerhans, the tailback, was stolen by gypsies.



Consequently, also, none of the Crimscott team showed up at the game, and Minnesota, its traditional rival, was able to score almost at will. Crimscott was so out of sorts that they immediately broke off football relations with Minnesota, its traditional rival. This later became known as the Dred Scott Decision.

So you can see how only four students might be too small an enrollment. The number I personally favor is twenty. How come? Because when you have twenty students and one of them opens a pack of Marlboro Cigarettes, there are enough to go around for everybody, and no one has to be deprived of Marlboro's fine, mild flavor, of Marlboro's easy-drawing filter, of Marlboro's joy and zest and steadfast companionship, and as a result you have a student body that is filled with sweet content and amity and harmony and concord and togetherness and soft pack and flip-top box.

That's how come.

© 1961 Max Shulman

You will also find twenty cigarettes—twenty incomparable unfiltered king-size cigarettes—in each pack of Marlboro's new partner in pleasure—the Philip Morris Commander. Welcome aboard!

REW Bronchures To Be Mailed Out

Brochures about Religious Emphasis Week, containing the complete program, pictures and biographies of the guest leaders and the purposes of the Week will be mailed to every student this year, said Chaplain John J. Carey.

In previous years the pamphlets were handed out during the Week and all students were not reached in this manner, he said.

The organized campus religious groups are also participating in the effort to contact students about the Week, which will be from Feb. 26 through March 1. The different religious bodies have been asked to send letters to all students of their religious preference concerning the Week's program and highlighting activities of special interest to those of their faith and which are being held at their religious house, the Chaplain added.

"This is a part of a publicity program designed to bring to the attention of different groups events that are of special interest to them," he said.

The faculty will also be contacted by letters emphasizing three types of activities of special interest to them. These events include the four panel discussions in which various faculty members are participating, the daily faculty luncheons during the Week and the informal sessions which will be held at various faculty members' homes during the evenings.

Other special groups to be contacted by letters are the graduate students, foreign students and married students.

Announcements about the Week and notices about the schedule are also being posted in the men's and women's dormitores and the fraternity and sororities.

Dog Training Class To Open

Students and faculty members interested in enrolling in a course on dog obedience are invited to attend an organizational meeting of the Capital City Obedience Club at 7:30 p.m. in the Jefferson Street Community Center Monday.

This first meeting for owners only, will consist of orientation and explanation of the standard course in obedience training. A special motion picture on obedience will also be shown.

Beginning with the second meeting of the 87 course, any dog over six months old may attend the classes accompanied by his trainer, who must be over 14 years of age.

Col. Roland E. Murphy, president of the club, says, "No dog in good health is too old to benefit from this course."

Down A Dark Alley And Into The Ground..

NO UNION CARDS . . . but plenty of labor in the downtown Coffee Lounge as (l. to r.) David Bates, John Goldinger, George Thorburg, Jack Schuler and Al Gorman arrange to cater to the customers. (Photo by Lloyd Hines)

A sign marks the alley entrance. The alley sets the informal tone, and the visitor who follows it emerges into the softly lit Vienna Coffee Lounge.

Student visitors to the brick-and-paneled wall, sub-surface café will be reminded that Vienna is a "coffee lounge," not a "coffee house." A thin distinction, perhaps, but with a telling difference of connotation.

LOW BEAMS

The ceiling is supported by beams that often make taller visitors duck instinctively. Actual head-bumpers, however, are dim, star-shaped, colored lights that chart the interior. Three-quarter size tables and captain's chairs add to the cozy atmosphere.

Prior to August, the Lounge wasn't even a hole in the ground. There was one wall, but the rest of the location was solidly packed earth which had to be dug up and removed. Two months of extensive construction and a lot of elbow grease brought Vienna into being.

DONE BY STUDENTS

Although there has been a recent turnover in management, much of the work was done by Dick Warner and Dave Bates, both Florida State University students.

Grad student Warner and senior Bates had to learn to do nearly everything, from construction, decorating and managing, down to operating the Expresso coffee machine.

Warner stated that the general consensus of opinion is "we have a pretty nice place here," a sentiment which is wholeheartedly shared by the new manager, John Goldinger and his assistant, Al Gorman.

MUSICAL ATMOSPHERE

A hi fi and six speakers set the musical atmosphere. On Thursday and Sunday nights, a modern jazz trio, headed by student Jack Caldwell and featuring bass fiddle, drums and piano, provides an informal floorshow.

The rustic, red piano, used by the combo and belonging to the Lounge, is an eye-catching bit of furnishing. It is an invitation to musically inclined visitors to furnish their own music!

Interesting paintings and other objects on display in the Vienna Coffee Lounge are the works of FSU art students and are changed periodically. These, and such items as colored, draped netting provide extra touches to a generally friendly atmosphere.

ESPRESSO MACHINE

The $885 Espresso machine is the only one of its kind in the immediate area. Imported coffee beans are ground on the premises. The espresso coffee bean is burned . . . by longer roasting, and ground very fine.

To call the Vienna Lounge a "coffee house" infers that it is a "beatnik" joint, which it is felt, the great majority of students would not accept.

Vienna is operated entirely FSU students, and while it not expressly designed for dents, it offers them escape the ordinary!

THE MOST USEFUL EMPLOYEE . . . anywhere is the one that does the dishes. George Thorburg rattles the china for the camera-man. (Photo by Lloyd Hines)

For Rush: Try Water Proof Styles In Case Of Rain

By ANNE CALVERT

Next week brings another series of rush parties, and though they're a week away, now is the time to start thinking of what to wear.

Since the weatherman doesn't seem to want to cooperate with the "Spring" rush idea, preferring "wet" rush instead, female rushees should plan a hairstyle that isn't too badly damaged by dampness.

Sunday will be the dressiest day of parties, and for that, the best bet is a suit or "classic" dress. Dark colors are fine but pastels can be worn, since this is "Spring." Fabric choice may be wool, silk, or a heavy synthetic.

ON SATURDAY

Saturday parties are more informal. Something comfortable, such as a "dyed-to-mach" outfit or tailored dress, will be just the thing.

Heels and hose are a must on both days. Gloves should be worn on Sunday, but are optional on Saturday.

The best rule for jewelry and accessories is to keep it simple. The fashion height this Spring for accessories is next to nothing . . . the "Jackie" look, you know.

LAST LOOK

Most sorority houses are equipped with some sort of powder room for taking one last look before making the grand entrance. So have no fear about getting mussed on your way to a party.

Most important is to look at ease.

FSU Is Scene Of Education Meeting

Teaching machines will be the subject of a conference at Florida State University Feb. 16-18

Co-sponsored by the State Department of Education and FSU, the conference will be held in the School of Education lecture hall where a number of the teaching machines will be on exhibit.

The three-day conference will open with a social hour at 8 p.m. Feb. 16. Dr. Otis McBride, head of the Audio-Visual Education Dept., said general sessions will begin at 8:30 a.m. Friday with a welcome by FSU President Gordon W. Blackwell.

A leading authority on teaching machines, Dr. Arthur A. Lumsdaine of the University of California at Los Angeles, will speak on "New Emphasis in Programmed Learning" at 9:30 a.m. Friday.

Wayland B Phillips, consultant in mathematics, State Dept. of Education, will be the speaker at 11 a.m. He will discuss "Learning About Specifics Through Sample Programs."

Other speakers include Dr. Hazen Curtis, head of the Educational Research and Testing Dept., FSU; Dr. F. J. King, research associate in the same department; Dr. Willard Nelson, Psychology Dept. and Leroy Smith, helping teacher in mathematics, Duval County Schools, Jacksonville.

Dr. Russel Kropp, educational research and testing, FSU, will be chairman of teaching machine demonstrations which will be held Friday, 3:30-5 p.m. and Saturday, 9-10 a.m.

On Friday at 7 p.m. a banquet will be held in Suwannee Room. Louis Swatts, general supervisor, Hillsborough County Schools, Tampa, will give the address.

An entertainment feature, "The Fish Hooks" will be presented by Andy Moorer, David Kearns and Bill Reynolds. Master of ceremonies will be Dr. Sam H. Moorer, director, Division of Instructional Services, State Dept. of Education.

Confederate Imprints Are Shown

A collection of Confederate imprints will be exhibited for the first time in the display room of the Florida State University library Sunday and will be on view through the Spring.

Friends of the Library and members of the two chapters of United Daughters of the Confederacy in Tallahassee have been invited to the opening of the exhibit at 4 p.m. Sunday.

The interested public also is invited, Miss Nancy Bird, head of special collections, said.

Lester Hargrett of Tallahassee, who supplied 73 of the items, will talk informally to those attending the exhibit in the Library Lecture Hall. Visitors will inspect the Confederate imprints, many of them quite rare, in the display room on the first floor. One of the items on display is one of two known copies of the first printing of South Carolina's "Declaration," when the state seceeded from the Union Dec. 20, 1860. It has the editorial revisions which were made before another printing, which was widely distributed.

This is the property of Hargrett, a well known bibliographer who has lived in Tallahassee for the past eight years. He is the compiler of two bibliographies, one on Indian constitutions and laws and the other on Oklahoma imprints.

His vast collections of books and pamphlets published in the Confederate states durong the Civil War was gathered incidentally.

Students Help In Movie Selection

By MARY ELLEN HARRIS
Assistant Feature Editor

Students are partly responsible for the selection of campus movies!

According to Miss Marie Williams, director of social activities, students with whom she comes in contact are asked to list several movies they would like to see--or see again.

From these suggestions, a major list is compiled. Students are then asked to check twelve films from the compiled list.

The final choice is left up to Miss Williams with regard to the recency of showing on the campus, and to attendance figures.

BALANCED PROGRAM

A balanced program is also considered, as well as principle actors. "I always pick for the stars; the outstanding older stars," Miss Williams said. Figures prove that movies starring these actors are the most popular.

Movies are ordered from United World Films and from Films, Incorporated at a special rate.

Since student funds are used to purchase these films, only students and university personnel are invited to attend the campus movies without charge.

Present cost per person attending the movies is 1.7 cents. This is due in part to the increased attendance resulting from the use of Westcott Auditorium.

TOOK CHARGE

In 1956, when Miss Williams first took charge of the movie program, films were shown five times weekly in the residence halls. The average attendance weekly was 230; the average cost per person was $.16.

This past semester has resulted in the largest attendance on record: 22,100 people saw 11 movies in Westcott Auditorium with average weekly attendance of 2000, Miss Williams said.

The greatest difficulty encountered, according to Miss Williams, is enforcement of the fire regulation laws. She spoke of it as a "source of great concern" and said that a short film has been prepared to remind the viewers that smoking in the Auditorium is against state, local and campus laws.

A "BOON"

Miss Williams enjoys directing this activity more than any other she said, and considers it a "boon" to those who are "dating girls or raising families."

This semester's program consists of some of the most popular movies recent years. The Glenn Miller Story with James Stewart, June Allyson, Louis Armstrong and Gene Krupa will be shown May 4 through 6, and is only one of the eight outstanding films scheduled to appear.

Tonight and tomorrow night David and Bathsheba with Gregory Peck and Susan Hayward will be shown at 7:30 p.m.

The classic Barretts of Wimpole Street with Jennifer Jones and John Gielgud, and the Barbarian and The Geisha starring John Wayne, Sam Jaffe, and Eiko Ando will also be shown in February.

The hilarious and wacky comedy Operation Petticoat starring Cary Grant, Tony Curtis, Diana Merrill and Gene Evans is scheduled March 24 and 25.

April will bring Ingrid Bergman and Curt Jurgens in The Inn of the Sixth Happiness. Boom Town with Clark Gable, Claudette Colbert, Spencer Tracy and Hedy Lamarr, and Ten North Frederick starring Gary Cooper, Diane Varsi, and Suzy Parker will also be shown.

TRI SIGMA . . . officially opened their new house at 515 West Park Ave. Sunday. Guest Jo Ann Helm was greeted at the door by Maryann Milmore, house president Mrs. Richard Potter, Regional Collegiate Director; Faye Gordy, president; and Oulda Lanier, social chairman.

Tri-Sigmas Move In

The house that Jack built is nothing compared to the house that the Sigmas "built."

Although none of the girls holds membership cards in local unions, the Tri-Sigmas cleaned the yard, built bookcases and shelves, painted, furnished, and washed walls, screens, windows, and venetian blinds in their new house on West Park Ave. between the Alpha Gamma Delta and Sigma Kappa houses.

The members sold spices to pay for the dishes and utensils used in the house. Plans for moving into the house were formulated this past December.

The house has four bedrooms, a housemother's room, dining room, kitchen, and living room. The downstairs is done in various shades of blue. Wall to wall carpeting is used both upstairs and downstairs. Indirect lighting is employed in the living room.

The house accommodates 16 girls.

HOUSE GIFTS

A brass fireplace screen and andirons were given to the sorority by Captain Brett, a friend of the local alumna. The alumna chapter also presented the girls with a clock and brass vases for their mantlepiece.

James Lowe, husband of a local alumna, did the plumbing and the wiring and supervised the girls' work. Mrs. Wilson Cogswell and Mrs. James Lowe also worked with the girls in making arrangements for the house.

The house was completed to enable the girls to move in during the semester break. A formal dedication ceremony with Chaplain John Carey officiating was held Jan. 29, the day after the Sigmas moved in.

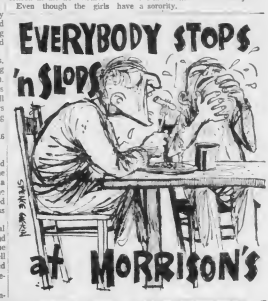
A reception for friends and faculty was held last Sunday afternoon in the new house.

Even though the girls have moved in, their work is not over yet. At present they are doing their own house work and cooking.

Meals must be eaten in two shifts since the dining room is too small to permit all the members to eat at once. This lack of space has fostered a sense of closeness among the members who live in the house. In fact, it's almost more like a family than a sorority.

Randel To Speak To FSU Wives Club

"An Evening with Mark Twain" will be the topic of a talk by Dr. William Randel at 8 p.m. Feb. 16 in the University School Auditorium.



The talk will be sponsored by the Newcomers Division of the University Wives for the benefit of the Foreign Students Loan Club.

Tickets, on sale now at Bill's Book Store, are $.35 for students and $1 for non-students.

Loren Gergens briefs two of his salesmen on new telephone services for business customers.

"I DIDN'T WANT TO BE STOCKPILED"

When Loren Gergens was working for his B.S. degree in Business Administration at the University of Denver, he had definite ideas about the kind of job he wanted to land. He was determined to profit from the experience of several of his friends who had accepted promising jobs only to find themselves in "manpower pools"—waiting to be pulled into a responsible position. "I didn't want to be stockpiled," Loren says. "That's no way to start."

As a senior, Loren talked to twelve companies and joined The Mountain States Telephone & Telegraph Company, an associated company of the Bell Telephone System.

From his first day challenges were thrown at him thick and fast. First, he supervised a group of service representatives who handle the communications needs of telephone customers. Then he served as manager of several telephone business offices. In these jobs Loren had to prove himself on the firing line, make right decisions and carry them through. He knew his next jump depended on only one man—Loren Gergens.

In July, 1960, he was made Sales Manager in Boulder, Colorado.

"I'm on the ground floor of a newly created telephone marketing organization. And I can tell you things are going to move fast!" Loren says. "It's rough at times, but hard work is fun when you know you're going somewhere—in a business where there's somewhere to go."

If you're interested in a job in which you can be your own prime mover—a job in which you're given a chance to show what you can do, right from the start—you'll want to visit your Placement Office for literature and additional information.

"Our number one aim is to have in all management jobs the most vital, intelligent, positive and imaginative men we can possibly find."

Cerf Advocates LessSophistication In College Humor

By BONNIE FREEDMAN
Flambeau Staff Writer

"College students tend to be too sophisticated in their humor . . . They don't realize that a good belly-laugh is one of the most pleasant things in the world," said Bennett Cerf Wednesday night.

"Censors are a little too strict on them in their humor magazines nowadays though," he added.

The humorist and publisher is encouraged by the concern of the college generation in world affairs. He said that for a long time students in college were very aloof to what was going on around them.

Now, there is a trend to "involvementism" — an active concern about political and social problems, he remarked.

Speaking in the University Lecture Series Wednesday, Cerf was enthusiastic about the "fresh wind that is blowing across the country," in the form of a new, young administration, which is probably the first administration that could "play Yale."

COLLEGE EDITOR

Cerf first entered the publishing business — he is president of Random House — when he found that he had a good memory for the jokes he came across as editor of the Columbia University humor magazine, The Jester. His first collection of jokes, Pocket Full of Humor, sold over 50 million copies.

Around the beginning of the century, the sort of humor America enjoyed was the political satire, as in Peter Finley Dunn's Mr. Dooley, an Irish fellow who commented on the world scene. Cerf said. Artemus Ward was another humorist who came out with "cracker-barrel" philosophies.

When World War I started, the country seemed to lose all the good humorists. "That's the thing about a sense of humor," said Cerf. "We keep it when we don't need it, and lose it when we need it most."

A defensive form of humor developed after the first war, which Cerf calls insult humor. Radio and television picked it up, and many of the comics depended upon a "goat" to get a laugh.

NEW FORM

In the past eight years, a new form of radio and TV program has become popular, the sort that "touches your heart as well as your head."

Cerf feels that the country is much too sensitive now, that the "fences that surround humor are being drawn in." Satirists are called communists and fascists, and people can no longer laugh at their own mistakes.

Cerf said the new comedians such as Mort Sahl, Shelly Berman, Bob Newhart, and Joey Bishop are good, but are still afraid of hitting a sore spot. He thinks there are too few who are willing to say "I don't agree with you, I object."

Of the current humorist, Cerf feels that the greatest are James Thurber, Ogden Nash, E. B. White, and Al Capp. He believes there are not enough such men to supply the need now, and said that any aspiring writers who want to know what they should write ought to try their hand at humor.

Actors Chosen To Star In Premiere

Louise Allbritton, Frederic Tozere and Knight Dheigh have been named as the professional actors to take parts in the coming premiere production of Asalgamemnent of Judea.

The play, written by Florida author Patrick Welch of Palm Beach, will feature Miss Allbritton in the role of Procula, Pilate's wife. She starred in The Egg and I, Sitting Pretty, and Walk a Crooked Mile, and on Broadway played in Seven Year Itch and Third Person.

Pilate will be portrayed by Tozere, a New York actor who is leaving the Walter Slezak company of My Three Angels to take part in the FSU production.

Knight Dheigh, recently praised by New York critics for his role in In the Jungle of Cities, will play the part of Herod.

DOWLING HERE

Eddie Dowling, theatrical producer who introduced the plays of Tennessee Williams and William Saroyan to Broadway, will be in Tallahassee to produce the play. Dowling also intends to take the role of Judas on stage.

Dowling and Welch arrived this week to begin preparations for the show. Dheigh will be the next professional member of the cast to arrive. He will reach Tallahassee on Feb. 15.

Assignment in Judea takes place in Pilate's palace just prior to the crucifixion of Christ. Pilate is a weakling who has just been assigned to govern Judea, and he undergoes many moments of indecision in trying to act on the problem of the Carpenter from Nazareth and on the disturbance being caused by the new Christian movement.

Herod (Dheigh) threatens Pilate with the report of maladministration to the Roman Emperor if Pilate doesn't cooperate with his political schemes. Procula (Miss Allbrition) sees the danger in all this and cautions her husband.

PRIESTS PRESSURE

Meanwhile, the Jewish priests are putting pressure on Pilate to do something about the Galilean "madman." Pilate finally has Christ arrested and tried by a Jewish court, which finds him guilty of blasphemy.

Pilate has Christ crucified over the objections of his wife and many others. When his wife finally convinces him to take Christ down from the cross alive, it is too late, for the electrical storm is already announcing his death.

This play, according to Dowling, is "the most significant of the many thought-provoking plays I have produced — and this includes such major award winners as The Glass Menagerie, The Iceman Cometh and King Richard II."

Senate Provides For Vot Of Absentee FSU Student

Provisions for absentee balloting and for training of poll workers for ca elections were approved by Senate Wednesday.

Students who must be away from campus on the day of any campus-wide or class elections may request absentee ballots from the secretary of elections under the provisions of the bill.

The chief purpose of the bill, according to its sponsors Sens. Mygnon Champion and Jim Miller, is to allow interning students to vote in the Spring elections.

Students must request the ballots in writing no later than 10 days prior to the election, accompanying their request with their identification card. The secretary of elections is required by the bill to mail the ballots no later than nine days before the election.

Absentee ballots will be counted only if they are returned by 6 p. m. of the election day, the bill provides.

In another election bill, introduced by Sen. Kathleen Daly and Bill Boykin, pre-numbering of ballots in precinct elections, legalizing of write-in votes and training of poll workers were made a part of the election code.

The reasons for requiring training of poll workers were given as a means toward eliminating future charges of irregularities in the operation of the polls.

The bill also requires that every ballot be checked for its legality before it is counted and that if any part of the ballot is illegal, the entire ballot shall be disqualified.

The bill originally called for separate polls for each precinct in Fall senatorial elections but this was struck from the bill before its unanimous passage.

Senate directed the Labor, Student Services and Education committees to investigate the possibility of working with the Tallahassee Chamber of Commerce and other advertising organizations to procure signs about the university for the highways approaching Tallahassee.

Sen. Carl Kuttler, sponsor of the measure, said he believed that such signs were needed. The resolution passed unanim

Reams cases brought before court during summer school sion were not included in the s. Inclusion of these cases have increased the total, Miss Reams.

NOT MAJORITY

e cases brought in the court not represent the majority of ases involving drinking of graduate women as these s represent only those in- e which have been reported, of our Dean Reams.

dents on the source from ich the alcohol was obtained that in the cases this year, ents obtained the liquor from ida State University men, from a girl friend under 21, from a girl friend over 21, bought beer in Tallahassee two obtained it from pack- stores

Dean Reams does not attribute the increase in drinking cases to the ruhng that girls over 21 may drink or to the opening of the package stores. The statistics do not bear out these reasons, said Miss Reams.

"More cases are being caught because the girls who do take the chance, drink more," she said. The general campus atmosphere is not as restrained as in previous years. There are more girls drinking and more girls drinking more, she commented.

"The rule that 21 year olds may drink is not the only reason. There is less restraint in every phase of campus life," she added.

COMBAT INCREASE

To combat the increase in drinking Miss Reams suggests impressing on undergraduates under 21 that drinking is not the thing to do here or making the penalty more severe.

At present each of Miss Reams three weeks restrictions are given for the first offense and it takes several offenses for suspension.

The survey also shows that students, in general, are becoming more concerned about the drinking problems, said Miss Reams. In the current year, seven cases were reported by fellow students; 16 by student officers in the dorm and 20 by dorm counselors. Student officers also felt that the drinking forums held in the dorms earlier this year also evidenced the general concern of the students about the problem.

Lecture Series To Be Given By Blackwell

"American Society in the Sixties" will be the subject of a lecture by President Gordon W. Blackwell in the Library Lecture Hall tomorrow night at 7:30.

The president's lecture will be part of the American Studies Lecture series, a study course for 72 regularly enrolled students which is also open to the public.

The subject for this year's series is "The United States In the Sixties."

Dr. William Randel, program director, announced that the next three lectures will be "Exporting the American Image," by Dr. Paul Stoakes, English Dept., Feb. 22; "The Relevance of Theology" by Waldo Beach, Duke University, March 1; and "Education and the Population Explosion," by Dr. Stanton Dietrich, Sociology Dept., March 8.

Other lectures in the series will include one on Florida business by J. J. Daniel, chairman of the Board of Control, the administration of justice, by Chief Justice Elwyn Thomas of the Supreme Court of Florida; and "The Nuclear Threat to American Civilization," a symposium with Dr. Charles Edington, biological sciences, Dr. Lewis Killian, sociology, and Dr. Edgar Henderson, philosophy.

The Phi Beta Kappa address on March 29 by historian Vann Woodward of Johns Hopkins University will also be a part of the series.

The "Know Your State Government" campaign will be launched tonight at the Young Democrats meeting in the Library Lecture Hall at 7:30.

The Young Democrats and the Leon County legislative delegation are sponsoring this campaign to inform and educate the student body on the true government of Florida.

Wilson Wright, assistant attorney general, will speak on the functions of the attorney general's office.

All students are invited to attend.

Heart Drive To Sponsor Free Coffee

Students may drink coffee free contributing to the Heart Fund restaurants in the Tallahassee on Valentine's Day, today.

Eating places in the university will participate in the collection, sponsored jointly by Sig Phi Epsilon Fraternity and Leon County Heart Council.

Instead of paying for coffee, members of approximately 65 restaurants will be asked to make donations to the fund drive.

Donations to have coffee, courtesy of the Heart Fund, have been distributed to these restaurants fraternity members.

Participating in a national fraternity project to aid the Heart Fund, SPE members helped prepare kits for the campaign.

Members of SPE and Alpha Phi Omega will join townspeople in going door to door collections during the fund drive.

Gymnastics

Athletic Committee Recommends Move

By BEN SHARP
Flambeau Sports Editor

Florida State University's Athletic Committee will recommend to President Gordon W. Blackwell that the gymnastics team be made a part of the Physical Education Department, according to Dean Mode Stone, chairman of the committee.

"The committee is unanimous in its recommendation to Dr. Blackwell that gymnastics be transferred to the Department of Physical Education and Recreation," said Stone.

"We are transmitting the recommendation of the Athletic Committee to President Blackwell for his final decision," Stone continued. The letter will be sent to President Blackwell today.

Carl Butler, Student Body President and student member of the committee, said that no new information particularly was brought up. "The basic factor involved was the lack of competition on the intercollegiate level "

Bobby Byrd, Student Body Vice-President and the other student representative to the committee, agreed.

The Committee generally did not want to decrease the emphasis on gymnastics," Byrd asserted," but to just get it out of the Intercollegiate Athletic Department. Wa for a fact, don't compete with intercollegiate competition."

"It's like having history in the Math Department."

"It was the committee's hope that Florida State could offer gymnastics by an alternate program," Byrd continued. "It is certainly something we should find ways to finance. Florida State is unique in offering as much as we do in the field of gymnastics."

This was the final recomendation of the Athletic Committee as a result of the rehearings which the committee scheduled after students had expressed discontent with this same decision, which was rendered initially last spring.

The first two rehearings were devoted to testimony by Dr. Vaughn Mancha, Athletic Director, Dr. Hartley Price, coach of the gymnastics squad, Dr. Kenneth Miller, head of the Department of Physical Education and Recreation and five student body representatives.

The five student representatives were Nancy Sindoo, Wally Keene, Jack Ryder, Chet Adair, and Beri Sharp.

"The Athletic Committee is proud of the free discussion of the issues involved in the gymnastics program. The student body can be rightfully proud of the manner in which the seven students discussed the subject," stated Stone.

"The Athletic Committee feels that these discussions have been profitable to the student body in understanding the decision made several months ago." Stone said.

That decision to move gymnastics from the Athletic Dept. to the Physical Education Dept. was based both on lack of competition and lack of finances to transport the team to Intercollegiate competition.

Most of the principal gymnastics competitoor is located in the Mid-West and the Northeast Mancha told the board that FSU could not possibly afford to enter that realm of gymnastics competition because of travel costs.

Furthermore, Mancha said that there was no suitable competition located in the Southeast. Mancha stated that the little competition FSU did have was supplied by Georgia Tech and Citadel, a pair of schools with unsubsidized programs. Since FSU was not competing with unsubsidized schools, Mancha concluded that there was no reason for Florida State to have a subsidized program.

The Athletic Committee agreed.

Students Study REW Theme At Centers

Conscience on Campus by Dr. Edwin Beach, one of the main speakers for Religious Emphasis Week, is being studied by students at many of the religious houses in preparation for the week.

Florida State University's Religious Emphasis Week will be Feb. 26-March 1, taking its theme from the title of the book.

The Methodist, Presbyterian, Episcopal and Congregational houses are among those having discussion groups on the book, with the book being made available at others.

The book, subtitled "An Interpretation of Christian Ethics for College Life," analyzes the problems that most college face as falling into four areas, drinking, sexual ethics, fraternity and sorority life and academic dishonesty. FSU Chaplain John J. Carey said.

Dr. Beach attempts to "make clear that these are only symptoms of a much deeper problem," said the chaplain.

"When we just attack these problems as such we are not getting at the root of the problem of college life," according to Dr. Beach, the chaplain added.

LACK OF VALUES

Dr. Beach maintains that "our lack of direction, our uncertainty about values, our lack of meaning in life," is the basic problem, said the Rev. Carey.

"When a person is able to find himself, some of these so-called symptoms disappear," according to Dr. Beach, the chaplain related.

Dr. Beach is professor of Christian ethics and director of the Graduate School in Religion at Duke University, North Carolina.

Chaplain Carey termed the book one of the "frankest and best written" of books on Christian ethics in college.

Many of the administrative staff are reading the book, he added.

Additional copies of the book have been ordered and will be available at Bill's Book Store, he said.

The final meeting of the REW general committee will be Thursday at 5 p.m. in the Club Room in Longmire Bldg.

Graham Talk Draws 14000

Some 14,000 people witnessed the "acceptance of Christ" by an estimated 375 individuals in response to the words of Billy Graham Saturday night in Doak S. Campbell Stadium.

Approximately 2,000 Florida State University students helped make up the chilly crowd assembled to hear the famed evangelist and other members of the Graham team, including soloist Beverly Shea, song leader, and Cliff Barrows, directing a 1,500 voice choir.

After various welcomes and opening remarks, including those of FSU Coach Bill Peterson, who jokingly commented that he asked Graham "to bless the grounds (football)" which they were now occupying.

In his official welcome to Graham, Gov. C. Farris Bryant referred to these days as "truly times that try men's souls."

Graham prefaced his remarks by saying that for each individual assembled in the stadium, this was a "moment of destiny and decision . . . for each it was a rendezvous with God."

THREE MYSTERIES

In his message, the evangelist spoke of three mysteries, the problem of human iniquity, the problem of human suffering, and the problem of death. The survey of such problems led to the question, "What is man?" Graham then discussed man as he was, man as he became, and man as he could be.

After extending the invitation to come down before man in acceptance of God, Graham continued, "There are hundreds of others in these stands tonight whom God is speaking to. We're going to wait. I'm asking you to come down. I'm asking you to come right now."

"There are others burdened by the load of sin, that is searing your souls. Why don't you come down? Come down and find the wonderful forgiveness He has offered you," he implored.

In response to such words, people responded from every part of the stadium to stand with bowed heads before Graham and the assembly. A free counseling was sought out each individual who had responded in order to strengthen and guide them in the coming weeks and to give literature to read and study.

Preceding the invitation, Graham promised everyone that a life filled with the love of Christ "offers new dimensions of living, new power and new joy."

Graham asked students to commit intellectual suicide" by accepting Christ and the teaching of the Bible on faith. He commented that a great conformity that exists in life today.

"What is the vast riddle and mystery of life? What causes humao sufferings? Why do we have racial hatred? Why can't we have brotherhood and achieve peace?" he asked.

He cited an "emptiness and lost ness" in the generation, and gave examples of current movies and plays which portrayed such "lost" people.

In Dedication Friday

Library Becomes Official Memorial To Dr. Strozier

By ROSA NELL WILSON

"The honor any humanist would prefer to any other" was accorded to Robert Manning Strozier Friday morning with the dedication of the Florida State University Library to his memory.

Dr. Napier Wilt, friend and former colleague of the late president, in his dedicatory address said the naming of a library in his honor would be the recognition preferred by many humanists.

Speaking of their association at the University of Chicago, where Dr. Wilt is dean of humanities and Dr. Strozier was formerly dean of students, the speaker said his friend was both a teacher and scholar but basically a humanist.

The library alone serves the whole community of scholars and faculty, he pointed out, and thus is the most important and most humane of all phases of the university.

The library lecture hall was filled with friends, faculty and students who witnessed the unveiling of a portrait of the late president.

PORTRAIT

The portrait of Dr. Strozier, painted by Frank Benning of New York City from a photograph, has been hung on the first floor of the library, near the main circulation desk.

The painting was the gift of the classes of 1957 and 1960.

Unveiling the portrait, J. J. Daniel, chairman of the Board of Control, described Dr. Strozier as a great man and a great humanist.

His influence, though short in period of service, will be everlasting, Daniel said.

"We shall forever be indebted to him for the tone he set for this University wherein greatness has been able to flourish and bring to fruition the innate talents of a great faculty and student body." he declared.

The library is a peculiarly appropriate memorial because it is there that the intellectual tone begins, he added.

SERVED AS PRESIDENT

Dr. Strozier served as president of FSU from September, 1957, until his death of a heart attack last April 30.

His successor, Gordon Blackwell, presiding at the dedication, said "Our task in this university is both easier and more difficult because of Robert Strozier."

It is easier because he pointed the way to achievements, more difficult because of his concept of greatness and the heights of his goals, Dr. Blackwell explained.

"We are here to do honor to a man whose impact upon this institution was profound and will be everlasting," the new president said.

RECOGNIZED ROLE

"Besides honoring his memory, the ceremony also recognized the central role of the library as a resource of the university and the humanities as a significant area of learning, he added.

Dr. Wilt in his dedicatory address protested against the type of library in which books seem chosen to prevent knowledge to confirm the student in uneducated prejudices.

Librarians should not eliminate all "inappropriate "books." he declared, but should permit students free access to many books.

Discussing library problems, Dr. Wilt said a library needs a system which protects its books but makes them cheerfully available to users.

Building a great research library could not be done hurridly even with unlimited funds, he pointed out. The needs of faculty members engaged in research help to develop the library in certain areas, he said.

Student Party To Hold Meet February 21

The Student Party Convention will be Feb. 21, at 7:30 p. m. in room 124 of the Science Bldg.

The purpose of the convention is to nominate candidates for the major student body offices and to elect new officers for the party, Bill Baker, party chairman, said.

The positions of president, vice president, secretary of senate, women's vice president, men's vice president, chairman of traffic court and chairman of unified court will be opened for Student Party nominations.

In accordance with the party constitution, no one will be nominated for the position of chief justice of honor court, he said.

The party offices to be filled are: chairman, vice chairman, recording secretary, corresponding secretary, treasuer, campaign manager and publicity chairman.

Nomination speeches for the major student body officers will be held to a maximum of five minutes, Baker said. Speeches for party officers will be less than two minutes, he added.

Each dormitory, and Greek organization will be represented by its selected delegates. The dormitories will have one representative for every 50 students, and each sorority and fraternity residence group will select one delegate.

Day students will choose 20 delegates. This year for the first time, married students living in Alumni Village, Dale Mabry Hights and the West Campus Trailer Park will be represented by their own delegates in addition to the regular day student delegation, according to Baker.

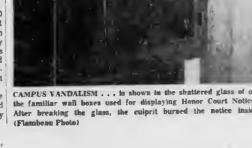
Each representative may have one alternate. The delegate and alternate together will cast only one vote.

Senate Will Discuss Honor System

Discussion and voting on the proposed revisions in the Honor System and Student Body President Carl Butler's State of the Campus address will constitute the major business of Student Senate tomorrow.

Senate will meet in Longmire Auditorium instead of the Senate room in anticipation of a large student attendance, said Student Body Vice President Bobby Byrd. The meeting will begin at 4:15 p.m.

The proposed revisions will probably be greatly debated, said Byrd. The bill's definition of academic dishonesty, its provisions for the enforcement of the new system, and its requirement prohibiting cheating on exams are the main points of the bill.



Also to be debated is the bill's requirement of an affirmative vote of 30 per cent of the students voting upon it, said Byrd.

The State of the Campus address will mainly be concerned with the Curriculum Evaluation Counsel and will include the organization and explanation of the counsel, said Butler.

The second main topic will concern the Student Government orientated corporation, which would be named Student Enterprises, Butler added. These will be among the most important new fields Student Government will enter this year, Butler said.

Senate will also vote on a bill pertaining to the appointment of the head cheerleader as an undersecretary of student events.

In anticipation of lengthly Senate debate on the honor bill a 30 minute recess is planned at 6 p.m. if the session runs over time. Senate is expected to conclude in time to avoid a conflict with the student Artist Series program, said Byrd.

Tradition Can Be Overdone

A strong, well-organized student senate could make the difference between a good student government and an impressive, key-wearing, student government club.

Too many student senators remain oblivious of the actual demands of their positions from the time they begin to campaign through the day they graduate from FSU. One of the basic causes of the apparent lackadaisical actions of the senators can be traced to just this point. There is no real delination of what is expected of senator Big Wheel. He wins the election and becomes a fanatic, contributing member of the club that meets weekly in 210 Longmire.

Another basic cause of senate's usual rambling is the fact that senate at FSU is a tradition; one that is crying out for a change; one that is suffocating with the illusion of its own importance.

There are occasions when the senate does something praiseworthy, but the majority of the time it spends in appointing committees who consistently meet, discuss, investigate and for four weeks turn in "no report" at the senate meeting.

IT HAS APPOINTED a faculty-student committee to study the existing honor system and recommend necessary revisions to make it an acceptable working code. The committee has met and after a semester of work presented its report. As yet, senate has not taken the action necessary to accept, reject, study, or—and this is most important—understand the report, the reasons behind it, its practicality, or its implications. Yet, it has called an open meeting to discuss the proposed system with the student body before it is even able to answer the questions raised; before it knows its own stand on the subject.

Senate has a habit of letting such "investigations" trail into nothingness only to be brought up annually and never decided positively—one way or another. The senators tend to consider several proposals during the year made by different people with only the spelling of a word or phrasing of a sentence difference in either significance or importance. The senators go over such things as infirmary, food services, court and publications investigations and never completes the job enough to make a single workable suggestion or solution. While investigating, they do not bother to go to those in positions to answer questions, those in charge of the institutions being investigated, but ferret out information from the occasional student who has an opinion to offer, from a hurried look at a few records in a field with which the senator is completely unfamiliar, and then make the traditional report that everything is fine, or that something is rotten. The follow-up? There's no time since it's May by now.

THIS IS NOT directly the fault of the senators. It is more a fault of the few who will not consider revision. It is the fault of those who don't have the time, or are not willing to take the time, to make an overall evaluation of the senate, its functions, and its results, because "this is the way Senate has always been." And these "traditionalists" have the power to do something about senate. Senators may make an effort, but until they are better oriented, better organized, and made to realize the extent of their responsibilities, their efforts will merely form the basis for a study made the following year after that and which will most likely be antiquated by the year after that.

A strong senate is a prerequisite for a strong student government, and it is for senate to make itself strong—not the power-crazy way, but in a positive progressive way, showing results from its legislation that cannot be tainted with the taunt of Mickey Mouse, that will make it a definite contribution to student government, the student body and the campus. This is the type of senate that will be respected for its efforts, for its farsight, for its own deserved importance.

Old Law Binds Until Changed

Changes in every phase of life are to be expected and are not necessarily voluntary. But where change is voluntary and has sound logic behind it, it is good for the individual or the nation for it may save them from becoming creatures of habit caught in a self-destructive rut.

What goes on in the minds of men and women who constantly cry for change at any price? These people apparently would be willing to institute legal anarchy in order to achieve their aims, yet are most vocal in the distress of seeing present laws enforced.

THIS WORLD we live in is made up, aside from the physical, largely of laws. We are surrounded by innumerable laws; some of long standing and others that have changed again and again. Many old laws are no longer very applicable to a mobile, industrialized society. Yet, until such times as they are repealed or reworked to suit the needs of the present era, they are laws and must be given the respect that the legal bond requires.

Too many people it appears are willing to hamper and cripple the courts of this country, to swap votes for new laws as envisioned by minorities with little regard to the future. And for the sincere fraction, one can only have sympathy for their dedication and high ideals, but when they align themselves with professional curiosity seekers and ideological subversives, then they undermine all that they have accomplished or may in the future achieve.

THE CONSTITUTION comes under fire at all times. And forever someone is questioning the "constitutionality" of this or that. Certainly human rights are, if not broken, then bent double, but it has become a case of the pot calling the kettle black to use a timeless cliche.

Martyrs come and go, and if you need remanding, generally of their own choosing That is one of the vaunted freedoms that nobody mentions. And if they are right, history will remember them as having been "pilloried, crucified," and totally mistreated in every manner. But if they are wrong, they will be forgotten just as quickly as they reap their last line of type.

This is still a big country and capable of being much larger in the spiritual sense. But all the goodness and truth and beauty, ad nauseam, can't come from the capitulation of one group with no reflection from all others.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Writers Asks Real Reason Behind Poland's Expulsion

TO THE EDITOR:

I hear that Jeff Poland left for California about Monday night. I hear that he went on it with a bang too. Staged a private sit-in at the bus station in the colored waiting room. Police were there, pictures were taken, etc. Seems there is a law about no segregation in inter-state travel depots, and he took advantage of it.

Now many of us are apt to think that this is quite stupid or childish. Is it?

THIS PERSON has protested again and again against all forms of segregation. Many are apt to think him radical. I do. Many think him a fanatic. I don't. The dictionary describes fanaticism as "extreme and unreasoning enthusiasm or zeal", while a radical is just "thorough-going and extreme in change."

Jeff has impressed me. I've met him several times and while I almost never agree with anyone's views complete-ly, I believe that almost everything of his that I have read states my views admirably.

IF THE SUSPENSION of Jeff was carried out in the highhanded arbitrary manner which he charges, we cannot say that it violates any written law and the only charge of injustice we can make is with-in our individual moral codes.

While we are on the subject of laws, let us ask ourselves who has upheld the spirit of the law? Jeff and those like him—or those minions hiding behind the letters of the law to foment hatred, caste systems, and a type of economic slavery upon another group with no logical reason? Many injustices are perpetrated upon negroes with no protest by them because many are ignorant. Thus we who feel this tyranny cutting at our own hearts must stand in defense of those who cannot defend themselves.

IF WE HATE bullying, we should certainly hate more those actions which not only injure the body, but the spirit of freedoms which we take for granted. While due process of law is to our advantage at times, it may in the hands of some become a terrible weapon Our founding fathers knew that written laws are made by man and must, at times, be broken by man. We shrink from the thought of lawless hordes and evil war, but in actuality there is a war being fought now for the elevation of all men to a higher status or their continued subjection.

Jesus Christ said, "Love thy neighbor." Is this what Jeff fought for" I think it was. Was he unwise in his methods. Possibly, and probably not. He has brought this issue into the eyes of the educated and those becoming educated those with the ability to change things. He really stood quite alone and now that he is gone I'm rather ashamed of not actively supporting his views in this direction.

NOW AS TO THE charge put forth that he was "disrespectful" to an administrator. The dictionary defines disrespect as "lack of respect disesteem; rudeness." Knowing Jeff, I don't believe that he was boorish. I think he may have indicated that he did not esteem certain administrators and I must say that I don't either. However, I'm sure the real issue was that he stated his disrespect and disesteem honestly, rather than hiding it. There seems to be a custom, probably started by the administrators themselves, that "you be careful what you say to me or you will go out on your ear." Thus we enter the realm of personality conflicts and these have no place at all in reasons for suspension.

IF JEFF WAS suspended, ejected, dismissed, thrown out, etc., because of pressure from racial minded legislators, and or officials, it makes those injecting him moral cowards. If they suspended Jeff because of their own racial beliefs they are again cowards and worse, liars, because they gave other reasons. If the administration, and in particular Deans Oglesby and Day, had better reasons for the suspension of Jeff than we have heard, I for one ask them to state these reasons, explicitly, if they will add anything to this controversy or, rather, dissolve it.

ROBERT A. WHALEY

Student Assistant Explains Late Grades

TO THE EDITOR:

As a student assistant working in the registrar's office I have been waiting for a column such as yours of February 10, regarding late grade reports, in order to try to answer some of the questions of the student body.

Your questions is, "What happened to the registrar's office?" I am prepared to tell you.

AS YOU MUST know the grading begins with the instructor, and ultimately, he must turn in his grades to the registrar's office. The first problem has now arisen. Punctuality seems to be a missing trait in many of the instructors present on this campus. As a result of this, many phone calls must be made before grades are obtained. Many of these are in vain as students will testify when they receive their grades sheets with "grade not turned in" in the place of their grade on a particular subject.

I don't believe that the students of this university are aware of the process ending in their grades sheets which they receive. Following is a brief summary of the procedure.

A GRADE IS turned in by the instructor on a roll which must be matched with the IBM class cards. Each of these cards must be hand-marked and rechecked. Have you ever stopped to think how many class cards are hand-marked? An average student is enrolled in five classes and thus has five class cards. In the Fall semester of this year there were 9,004 students enrolled. That amounts to 45,004 class cards! That may sound easy, but do you know that many students have been attending the wrong section of a course all semester? This is one of the many problems which must be solved. It is our job to try and outguess the student in order to find his grade.

When these problems are finally ironed out, the cards are ready for the IBM machine. Each class card must be run through the machine fifteen times. A mechanical difficulty was also experienced this semester and exemplified that even a machine may be fallible After this is done, the sheets must be folded, the envelopes hand-stuffed and the grades are ready for the student. This process has been completed in one week from the time the grades were due in, because of much overtime work by the staff.

THE NEXT problem is now in view. The careless student at registration has forgotten to, or just couldn't bother to fill in the address line on the registration cards and thus the grade sheet is returned unclaimed to the registrar's office.

As for the automatic "F's" received by many irate students, now you are sorry that you ignored the request to come to the registrar's office earlier in the semester. Incidentally, if you will take the time to look on page 26 in the Florida State University catalog, you will note that "it is the responsibility of the student to officially drop a course in the registrar's office or he will receive an automatic "F." This rule was NOT made to be broken!

PERTAINING TO the editor's question of the brief "semester break." I suggest that you direct your comments to the Schedule Planning Committee and not to the registrar. It is evident that the short break was of no advantage to him.

In this letter, I have endeavored to explain some of the procedures involved in the receiving of grades. I hope that it will be helpful along that line. As in many departments of its kind, the registrar's office has its faults, but with the cooperation of the faculty and student body the "efficiency" of this office will be greatly improved.

Reflections

Monday Morning... And It's Just Coma

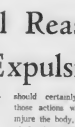
By LESLIE POWELL

Monday morning and Coma. She looked just terrible. Her hair was stringy and lank. Her tennis shoes muddied and her muddy blouse just wouldn't stay put. It kept swveling, but that could have been Coma moving around in there somewhere.

"Where'd you get the hair-style, Coma, and the sharp soogee type ensemble?"

"Courtesy of my eight o'clock swim class, buster. The hair gets wet, the shoes are for ballast and the furshlinger drapery comes courtesy of the last bastion bent on repealing Woman's suffrage."

"FURTHER, THE blue tint in my face is from Saturday night. Mr. Graham was right . . . everybody out there was searching for something. He could have gone a step further and said what, since it was pretty plain in that weather that those people were searching for each other.



"Say," she continued, "Did you by chance happen to read Friday's Flambeau? Funniest pictures in years . . . especially that one of Mr. Butler and Mr. Bryant. Why they looked handcuffed together. And that brings to mind the farce revolving around the numbers 12 and 21. I wonder if Gainesville knows just how madeans it has? They prob could give a more accurate count of legislators and pol officials.

"SAY, WHY don't we up to the publications lab offer congratulations to Toler . . . It ain't every you father that waits an extra weeks for a tee pound boy think he's borne up well haven't noticed a single t appearing to bug the poor

"Nope, on second thou I'll have to make it later. I have to run up to the c police and register my license tag number.

"But Coma," I said, don't own a car, or drive car, or even get picked up a car (squad). What are going to register for?"

"Man, I got me one of fancy tags they're putting now for non-car owners for added revenue. You still have to register it, because you put it on the chain with crucifix and drop the v hanic down your neck sound like a Mack truck dire need," and she was clanking every step she beep-beep.

All Aren't Searching

By JIM SCAGGS

When Billy Graham spoke Saturday night at Campbell Stadium, he made a mistake in assuming that all present "were searching for something." In direct contradiction to this many students attended out of "intellectual curiosity" as to what would go on. They have their answer now.

BEFORE ONE judges Graham's effect, these facts should be borne in mind:

(1) He had poor introductions. There was too much bally hoo about "saving souls" and "thanking God" for the "great opportunity to contribute to this great crusade." It was done in poor English and in a seemingly befuddled manner. The surest way to alienate a literate or semi-literate audience is to mix your tenses and mistreat your subject.

(2) The usual group of social climbing dignitaries (both religious and political) were crowded upon the stage instead of giving Graham and his co freedom of movement space.

(3) IT WAS cold.

(4) An extremely d crowd was present and sc distributed.

(5) In spite of reque the audience remain immobile, there was a movement due to bein comfort and discomfort.

CONSIDERING these Graham did a remarkabl

True, many students feel that the person moved "down front" at time that "the call" was sued were the trade "intellectually inferior" persons feeling that way these same sneering are very few tolerance and all men Graham preached the worst "sins" is that hypocrisy. Perhaps the "intellectual sin" is the same that plagues this campus country and this planet most.

Find The Answer Now

By GERRY DOBSON

The new Hall of Merit has been passed by the Senate, but there are a few questions that still should have been answered before debate was cut off.

What is the real purpose of this new honor? Is it really designed to honor those outstanding persons, or at this untenable purpose merely a cover-up for the primary objective: to garner more publicity for FSU. If, as some suspect, the latter reason is paramount in importance, then it will an honor at all, but merely a bald attempt to "use" those we "honor" for our own selfish ends.

WHO WILL select these outstanding individuals? The students? The faculty? Both? Will the selection committee really be qualified to decide, for example, the relative significance of outstanding research? It is unlikely, for experts in the research field in question sometimes do not agree on such things. It surely would not be much of an award to have a motley crew of undergraduates problem with world that a particular sch or's work has brought to our alma mater. More likely, the award will be m on a superficial basis the amount the contributor the person has already b publicized, and the popu Perhaps value of the awa to FSU. If this is to be case, perhaps it would be ter not to have a Hall Merit.

WHAT SORT OF a prog will be used to honor these dividuals? Will they revo mechals? Who will pay for this? Will the senate simply gone into the formulat of this "highest of all sins," or has the Senate put off half-cocked"

And finally, how will "honor" compare in prest with the many awards a pective "Hall of Merit" ca date would undoubtedly rec elsewhere? If this award not to be made a laugh stock, we had better find answers to some of these q tions now.

Tankers Topple Tide, Sewanee

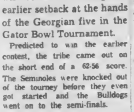
By BILL VERIGAN

Assistant Sports Editor

Florida State's swimming team continued its winning ways last week by ambushing Alabama 67-27 and swamping Sewannee 54-41 for a 4-1 season so far.

Coach Bim Stults' tankmen eased by the Crimson Tide. Three leading FSU performers, Buck Hiles, Rusty Pyykko, and Paul Thompson, did not even get a chance to exhibit their talents.

The Seminoles smashed for nine wins out of a possible 11 to completely overwhelm the Tide. They also copped five seconds and three third places while the Alabamans got six seconds and five thirds.



Bruno Briley took two individual victories for the Tribe when he won the 220 freestyle and the 100-yard freestyle.

Other individual winners were Pete Davis, Bill Richardson, Curt Genders, Pete Combes and George Moore.

George Moore, Bob DeHaney, Pete Combes and Carl Butler combined to take the 400 medley relay while John Ray, Bob Bowen, George Moore and Pete Davis conquered the Tide in the 400 freestyle relay.

Most of the excitement of the meet came during a tight freshman contest which wasn't won until the last event.

Going into the last event, the 220-yard freestyle relay, Florida State's Baby Tankers were trailing 46-42. Knowing that they had to win the event to take the meet, the FSU frosh raced down the pool to smash the existing

Seminoles Defeat Valdosta State

FSU To Meet Georgia

By MARK HILLIS

Flambeau Sports Writer

Thursday night the Florida State Seminoles will meet the Georgia Bulldogs in their first game of a two game road trip. The tribe will be out to revenge an earlier setback at the hands of the Georgian five in the Gator Bowl Tournament.

Predicted to win the earlier contest, the tribe came out on the short end of a 62-56 score. The Seminoles were knocked out of the tourney before they even got started and the Bulldogs went on to the semi-finals.

Again the Bulldogs will be led by the Johnson brothers who put down the tribe in the tourney. Allan Johnson and John Johnson, whose combined talents make the Georgians a potent offensive and defensive squad, will probably be backed up by 6-8 Phil Sloppy and 6-4 Pat Casey at forward and by 6-4 Don Keiser at guard. John Johnson mans the center post and Allan handles a guard position.

FSU BEATS VALDOSTA

Saturday, FSU cracked Valdosta State's 10-game winning streak and coasted to a 86-66 basketball victory at Tully Gym before a crowd of 1,200 spectators.

Displaying some fine outside shooting, the Rebels of Valdosta State surprised the Seminoles in the initial 11 minutes of the game by taking the lead 22-17. After this the Seminoles were to trail no more. Ray Swain, Dave Fedor, and Faurest Coogle provided the points that put FSU ahead to stay.

Swain hit on a try at the free-throw line. Fedor tapped in a two-pointer, and Coogle drove for a layup, tying the score at 22-22. Swain made the 24th point to put the tribe ahead.

When the buzzer rang at half-time, the Seminoles held a commanding lead of 34-38. Their largest lead was 20 points when the score was 64-42 with 9:54 to go.

Dave Fedor, nursing an upset stomach, came off the bench to spark the Seminoles on to their tenth victory in 17 games. After taking a dose of medicine just before game time, Fedor responded with 22 points and 18 rebounds.

The lanky forward left the game with nine minutes of playing time left. For the 42 time, the Zephyrhills lad has hit in the double figure bracket. His scoring average now stands at 18.8 points per game and rebounding average at 14.1.

Swain was runner-up for scoring honors with 16 points. Following him was Faurest Coogle with 12 points and Charlie Long with 9. Jerry Smith, who came into the game with 14 minutes left hit for 9 points, his season's high.

The Rebels hit on 40 per cent of their first half shots but couldn't keep up the furious pace during the second stanza. It was almost seven minutes before guard Doug Winters put the Rebels back on the scoreboard with their first field goal of the second half. From the field they wound up hitting 40 per cent of their attempts.

The tribe hit 53.2 per cent of their shots. This was the Seminoles' most accurate night of the season. FSU garnered 44 rebounds to the shorter Valdosta team's 32.

The game was played early in the evening because it was Valdosta's homecoming game. There were many fans on hand from Valdosta to cheer their team on.

The Seminoles have now won four straight games and six in their last seven.

Intramurals Slate Football, Badminton

Intramural athletics is presently in the middle of flag football and badminton season, and bowling will be starting this week.

In the dorm-independent league's garnet division Kellum I is ahead with five wins and no losses. The Aardvarks are in second place with four wins and one loss, while Kellum III has a 2-3 record for third place.

The gold division finds a tie for the top position between BSU and the Major Club. Both of these teams have a 4-1 record. Close behind them are CLO with a 3-2 record.

In the fraternity league's gold division PDT is in command with four wins and no losses, and PKT has a 2-1 record.

The garnet division has AA in first place with a 2-0 record. SAE has a 2-0 mark, but DTD is breathing down their necks with a 2-1 record.

The finals of the badminton singles will be played between the Majors Club, which survived the winners' bracket, and the in '400' club which came out first in the losers' bracket. The two teams will play on February 17 to determine the winner.

The Majors Club has already won the doubles matches in the dorm-independent league.

Fraiternity badminton has not progressed far enough to determine any places.

The winner of the badminton will get 75 points and the winner of football will get 150 points toward total standings in the league.

The total point standings finds AA in first place, PDT in second position, and SN in the third spot for the frat league. These totals are based on all sports that have been played to date. Including swimming, horseshoes, golf, tennis and basketball.

In the dorm-independent league Kellum I leads the pack, with the Majors Club in second place, and BSU in third position

Frosh Cagers Meet Matches

Florida State's freshman eagers had to swallow a bitter dose of medicine last week when they dropped two games in a row. The losses were administered by the Albany Blues, 88-81, and Chipola Junior College, 73-61.

The frosh record now stands at 4-4 for the season, and they had been idle since January 17.

The yearlings were led in both games by the shooting of Bobby Lovell, who is the team's number one scorer. Against the Albany Blues he bucketed 16 points, and he battered Chipola's Indians for 18 notches.

Albany is an independent team, consisting mainly of former college players. Taking an early lead, the Blues were never in trouble the remainder of the night.

Bob Oates, a forward who played his college basketball at Arizona State, paced his team with 21 points. His teammate Bob Fowler, an Indiana product now coaching at Albany High School, pushed 20 points through the hoop.

Hank Sytsmo and Sam Butler pushed through 11 and 10 points respectively for FSU.

FSU trailed by a 20-38 score going into the second half and took advantage of the situation by playing a total of ten men during the evening.

Chipola Junior College, trailing 37-22 at intermission, came roaring back to whip the Baby Seminoles.

Jerry Sullivan was high for the Indians with 27 markers. FSU's cause was aided by center, Harold Clark, who got 16 notches.

Chipola hit 40 per cent of their shots from the floor and snatched 32 rebounds. FSU racked up 38 per cent of its field goals and controlled the boards for 42 rebounds

Gymkana Retains Mardi Gras Championship Over Weekend

Florida State Gymkana successfully defended their championship Saturday night at the Mardi Gras Invitational Gymnastics Meet in Baton Rouge.

The squad, coached by Joe Gusic for two years, had a tough time in stopping the teams of Southwest Louisiana and the New Orleans Athletic Club, but the Seminoles triumphed with a score of 62 points. They were followed by the University of Southwest Louisiana with 55 points and the New Orleans Athletic Club with a total of 27 points.

Gusic is coaching the squad on a volunteer basis this season since the team was withdrawn from the department of intercollegiate athletics. Veteran members of the squad include Jack Ryder, Bill Beavers, Rick Miller and Jerome Edwards.

The FSU team placed in all but one event and gathered in three first place individual titles. Rick Miller and Bill Beavers paced the squad with Miller taking two first places and Beavers one.

Beavers, working under the handicap of a sprained ankle, lost his all-around title, but he was able to come in second in the event, while teammate, Yishiro Hatano, copped third. Beavers also grabbed two third places in the high bars and side horse.

Miller took firsts in the free exercises and in the high bar competition. He also came in third on the long horse and fifth in tumbling.

Other Florida State contestants who placed include Jack Ryder, fourth in the nation in tumbling last year, who finished second in the tumbling event. Fourth place in this event went to Joe Cortese.

Hatano, besides taking third in all-around competition, came in fourth in the rings, the parallel bars and still rings, and auth in two events, free exercises and side horse.

Joe Taylor took second on the parallel bars, third on the side horse, and fourth on the still rings, as his contribution.

In rope climbing Jerome Edwards finished third by scaling the 25-foot rope in 5.7 seconds.

Freshman Ray Schaefer came in fourth on the high bar and auth on the parallel bars.

The team was hampered by injuries and by the fact that they had to drive to Baton Rouge on the same day as the competition. However, the only event in which the team did not place was the trampoline competition.

Florida State Gymkana will sponsor the Florida AAU competitions here next month, and the team has numerous meets scheduled in North Florida and Georgia.

"A GUIDE FOR THE DATELESS"

With the cost of dating rising higher and higher it is no wonder that so many of us men are turning to discus throwing. Naturally, we would prefer guzzling warm colds to flinging cold discs, but who's got that kind of money? Prices being what they are, the average man today has a simple choice: dating or eating.

Unless the average man happens to be Finster Sigafoos.

Finster came to college with the normal ambition of any average man: he wanted to find the prettiest coed on campus and make her his. He looked long and carefully, and at last he found her—a tall job named Kretchma Inskip, with "...and his beaten gold.

He asked her for a date. She accepted. He appeared at her sorority house that night, smiling, eager, and carrying a bouquet of modestly priced flowers.

"Now then," said Kretchma, tossing the sleazy flora to a pledge, "where are we going tonight?"

Finster was a man short on cash, but long on ideas. He had prepared an attractive plan for this evening. "How would you like to go out to the Ag campus and see the milking machine?" he asked.

"Jerk," she replied.

"Well, what would you like to do?" he asked.

"Come," said she, "to a funny little place I know just outside of town."

And away they went.

The average man today has a simple choice:

The place was Millionaires Roost, a simple country inn made of solid ivory. It was filled with beautiful ladies in backless gowns, handsome men in dickeys. Original Rembrandts adorned the walls. Marlboro trays adorned the cigarette girls. Chained to each table was a gypsy violinist.

Finster and Kretchma were seated. "I," said Kretchma to the waiter, "will start with shrimps remoulade. Then I will have a lobster and capon in madeira sauce with asparagus spears. For dessert I will have melon stuffed with money."

"And you, Sir?" said the waiter to Finster.

"Just bring me a pack of Marlboros," replied Finster, "for if ever a man needed to settle back and enjoy the mild beneficence of choice tobacco and easy-drawing filtration, it is the shattered hulk you see before you now."

So, smoking the best of all possible cigarettes, Finster watched Kretchma ingest her meal and calculated that every time her fetching young Adam's apple rose and fell, he was out another 97¢. Then he took her home.

It was while saying goodnight that Finster got his brilliant idea. "Listen!" he cried excitedly. "I just had a wonderful notion. Next time we go out, let's go Dutch treat!"

By way of reply, Kretchma slashed him across the face with her housemother and stormed into the house.

"Well, the heck with her," said Finster to himself. "She is just a gold digger and I am well rid of her. I am sure there are many girls just as beautiful as Kretchma who will understand the justice of my position. For after all, girls get as much money from home as men, so what could be more fair than sharing expenses on a date?"

With good heart and high hopes, Finster began a search for a girl who would appreciate the equity of Dutch treat, and you will be pleased to hear that he soon found one—Mary Alice Hematoma, a lovely three-legged girl with adeboms.

William Randel Presents The Mark Twain Story

Thursday at 8 p.m., a white haired man with an equally white mustache will tell the audience in the University School Auditorium of his experiences in Honolulu, in the West during the Gold Rush and on the Mississippi River as a young boy.

The man will be Dr. William Randel of the English Dept. of Florida State University, portraying Mark Twain in his original sketch, "An Evening with Mark Twain."

Dr. Randel last presented his sketch for the English Coffee Hour in December, 1958.

This performance is presented for the benefit of the Foreign Students Loan Fund and is sponsored by the Newcomers of the University Wives Club.

Admission is $.35 for students and $1. for adults. Tickets are available at Bull's Bookstore

In the first part of the program Dr. Randel presents a series of quips, jokes and stories outlining the life of Mark Twain. Speaking in the first person, he explains that "I Mark Twain" was born in Florida." Of course he is referring to Florida, Mo.

The second half of the evening consists of readings from Mark Twain's books, Roughing It, Life On The Mississippi and Huckleberry Finn. To carry out the theme Dr. Randel is dressed entirely like Mark Twain including snow white mustache.

Dr. Randel first got the idea for the sketch when the English Coffee Hour was being formed in 1952. He gave the English Coffee Hour its start with his performance dressed as Mark Twain.

Butler Urges Two Bills Be Passed For Students

By GLENDA POWERS
Flambeau Staff Writer

Student Body President Carl Butler, in his State of the Campus address Wednesday, urged Senate to pass bills setting up a Curriculum Evaluating Council and a corporation named Student Enterprises.

Early in his address, Butler stated that rather than deal with the overall campus situation, he wanted to discuss the two bills so that Senate might have a fuller understanding of the proposals, which originated in large measure from the executive branch of Student Government.

According to the purpose, as stated by Butler and as incorporated into the bill, "the Curriculum Evaluation Council will serve as a means of discussion and expression of student opinions and views concerning the University-wide academic courses of study offered at FSU. The CEC will advise the President of the University, the faculty, and the administration of student suggestions for alteration of the academic curriculum."

The Council would be composed of 12 members, representing departments of humanities, social science, natural science, business, elementary and secondary education, home economics, music, nursing, and social welfare.

Non-voting faculty members of the committee will be the dean of faculties and chairman of the Faculty Senate committee on academic affairs.

Student members, representing the junior or senior classes in a system designed to allow experienced members to serve a second year, will be elected from a student Curriculum Committee with in each college or school represented.

The curriculum committees within each school or college will discuss, study, and present to the dean of that school student views concerning the respective curriculum. Less than five students, to be determined by the dean of the individual schools, will make up these committees (one of these students to be the CEC member).

STUDENT ENTERPRISES

"We must try new approaches and new means of advancing student welfare," said Butler in support of the corporation named Student Enterprises. To approve such a corporation would help Student Government to become more independent since it would be assuming new responsibility, according to Butler.

The purpose of the corporation is to provide services to the Student Body, and to promote the cultural, educational, athletic, recreational, and general welfare of the FSU student body, according to the provisions of the bill.

The services of the Corporation would be managed by a Board of Directors. Student Senate could fund the Student Enterprises through its annual budget legislation; the Surplus Funds Commission could release funds for use by Student Enterprises; and Student Enterprises could borrow funds.

OTHER REPORTS

In his address, Butler said the report on Flambeau expenditures would be completed soon, a discussion with the administration on voluntary ROTC has been scheduled, the budget on student activity is scheduled to come before Senate in the future, the bill to establish administration policies of the proposed student union is being drawn up.

Butler said he planned to discuss orally before Senate any bills that be vetoes. Many bills, he felt, needed more discussion with the persons or groups they involved prior to presentation before Senate in order to eliminate technical difficulties.

"If we fail to move in avenues open to us, then may we or the people we represent never realize how sadly we have failed," Butler concluded his address.

Senate passed a resolution that a committee be established to investigate the possibilities of creating either West or Kellum Hall as a freshmen residence, beginning in the Fall of 1961. According to Sen. Dick Hume, the committee would suggest changes approved by the administration as being beneficial to freshmen and upperclassmen in regard to housing.

Hume cited reports that freshmen rooming with freshmen made better grades on the whole than freshmen rooming with upperclassmen, and that upperclassmen rooming with upperclassmen make better average grades than upperclassmen rooming with freshmen.

Senate also passed a resolution that the Labor, Student Services and Education committees investigate the reasons for the difficulties in having incorrect grades of students changed.

Election Rules

Candidates for officers of the student body may begin filling Feb. 28 at 5 p.m. and all declarations must be turned in to the main desk of Longmire by 5 p.m. March 7.

Expense estimates are due March 10 since campaigns begin at 5 p.m. March 14, according to Secretary of Elections J. P. Jones.

Those wishing to withdraw must do so before noon of March 16. Elections will be held March 21 and run-offs will be March 28.

Candidates for class offices may file between April 11 and 18. Expense estimates for the May 2 elections are due April 21, and campaigning starts April 25, Jones said.

Candidates are warned by the student government to observe the campaign rules carefully since penalties will be given and candidates may be declared ineligible, he stressed.

COMPLAINTS MADE

Several complaints have been registered with the Secretary of Elections concerning prospective candidates engaging in active campaigning for the offices they will seek. Jones said. The statutes mention as "The Dissemination of literature of any type, the posting of signs, or any other tangible construction, all of which is to be displayed for the purpose of advocating or urging the election of any candidate or group of candidates," he pointed out.

Violations of this statute by the prospective candidates can result in fines and or disciplinary action. Such violations could effect the disqualification of a prospective candidate, Jones reminded.

Student Party Will Convene

Probable candidates for the Student Party nomination for president of the student body are Vice President Bobby Byrd and Sen. Jim Miller. Byrd reported he is "seeking nomination from the Student Party." Miller now president pro tem of Senate, affirmed he would accept a nomination from the Student Party.

The Student Party convention will meet in 124 Science at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday to nominate candidates for the major student body offices, and to elect new student party officers.

Each dorm will have one delegate for every 50 residents. Sororities

Bryant Is Invited To 'Judea' Premier

An invitation to attend the premiere performance of Assignment in Judea was extended to Gov. Farris Bryant yesterday.

Producer Eddie Dowling, Author-Director Richard Fallon called on the governor to present tickets to the opening night performance for the governor, cabinet members and their wives.

The University Theatre production will be the first time a Broadway producer has professionally produced a new play in a university theater before its New York opening.

Professional actors will take the leads with students in supporting roles.

Dowling, who has produced such Broadway successes as The Glass Menagerie and The Iceman Cometh, has invested $12,000 in the Florida State University production.

He told the governor he considers Assignment in Judea "the most significant of the many thought - provoking plays I have produced."

Non-professional rehearsals are underway already, along with casting and revision of the drama.

Professional actors Frederic Tozere, Kheigh Diegh and Louise Allbritton will play the roles of Pontius Pilate, Herod, and Pilate's wife Procula. Dowling will act the part of Judas Iscariot.

After six performances in Conrad Theatre March 6 and 6-7, the play will be presented in Jacksonville, Tampa, Valdosta, Ga. and several other cities.

The producer plans to take the play to Chicago or New York after the Florida performances.

JUDAS ISCARIOT . . . is one of the most intriguing characters in the play ASSIGNMENT IN JUDEA which Broadway producer Eddie Dowling, creator, will produce for the first time at Florida State University on March 1. Dowling will take part of Judas, and Stan De Hart, right, a graduate student, will be his understudy. Here they compare notes on the part of Judas with Col. Patrick Welch, left, of Palm Beach, the author of the the play. Dowling and Welch have arrived to work the play into shape for production by FSU's University Theatre.

Anthology To Appear Titled 'The Legend'

The third issue of the former Literary Anthology will be making its appearance about the first of March under the new name of The Legend '61, according to editor Leslie Lowell.

The staff chose The Legend as a better name because of its Indian (Seminole) connotations, lit-

The Education Industry

Higher education is an industry. It has its management and its labor. It turns out a product. Like any other industry, the quality of the product is always open to question.

Unlike other industries, when the education labor force gets a raise in pay, it does not get a corresponding cut in its work load: indeed, if we are to believe recent news reports, educators will be expected to take on greater work loads if they are to get a pay increase.

THIS INCREASE in the instructor's work can only be construed to mean that crowded classes will become more crowded. That this will happen anyway with the crush to get into college has been apparently overlooked.

And the college professor has enough outside the classroom to occupy his time. He has literally thousands of papers to be graded; he has term papers to read, classes to plan, research and lesson preparation for each class. He often is an unofficial counselor to any number of students, offering them a touch of personal guidance and encouragement so sadly lacking in so much of college and life.

SOME PROFESSORS are continuing the furtherance of their own education, working on toward educational goals that will be of benefit to themselves and the university.

They have families and lives away from FSU and its counterparts. Maybe their pay raise is compensation for inroads into their home lives?

Christmas Seal Propaganda

Good ole' humanist Castro. With the deft hand of the dictator, he is out to use every means, no matter how small that means be, to further his own political beliefs.

Rather than Christmas seals like those that are sold by institutions that use the funds for human relief in a number of ways, Castroites this past Yule season used a little stamp which bore the words: "Our Revolution is not Communist. Our Revolution is Humanist. The Cubans only want the right to an education, the right to work, the right to eat without fear, the right to PEACE. JUSTICE. FREEDOM.

AND AROUND THESE brave words, like the chant of massed Cubans at a Castro rally, goes the word. Cuba. Cuba. Cuba. Interspersed with the flag of that island dictatorship . . . which has changed only in terms of political alliance internationally.

"Not Communist." the stamp proclaims; yet exiles report almost daily that this is a lie. And there are Cuban actions that give the lie to every denial of Communist domination.

"Our Revolution is Humanist," the little stamp cries. Yet, the men and women who die at the hands of Castro's police and military are just as dead as those who died under Batista.

"THE RIGHT TO eat without fear?" What is this meant to say? Millions do not get enough to eat and live in the shadow of starvation. Cuba doesn't have a corner on misery in the world and never did. "Right to work?" It exists for those who work in support of the knappy faced puppet ruler. Any nation which tries a member of the civil population before a military tribunal has made a wind whistle of the word "Justice." And it makes no difference if that nation is in the eastern or western or neutral camp. Its shame wears a military uniform.

"Freedom?" Probably there has been no significant change in the Cuban's freedom. The police can turn his home inside out. On the slightest pretext the police can shoot to kill, although it must be preferable to the regime that "enemies" of the "people" be brought to trial and "justice."

IF THE FERMENT in Cuba is so humane, why have a number of nations decided to break off considerations from a foreign nation openly dedicated to the enslavement of all peoples. Batista may have lined his own pockets but he didn't sell Cuba's very being to Moscow.

It is not enough that populations be exposed to the fabrications of giant networks, mass publications and the "humanist" jabberwocky of Fair Players, but they must contend with stamps on their letters that bring propaganda through the mails.

Letters To The Editor

Writer Dislikes Cartoon

TO THE EDITOR:

How can a paper as widespread as yours place something upon the front page that contains more falsehoods than the rest of the paper combined?

I refer to Mr. Spence Guerin's cartoon of Billy Graham in Tuesday's Flambeau.

MR. GUERIN says Billy said "We are committing racial suicide." Unquote. He then expounds on how freedom of speech is suppressed at FSU.

I'll be'd bother to read the Flambeau or if he'd listened to the Graham sermon, he'd have known that the only suicide Mr. Graham referred to was "intellectual suicide" which was to be brought about by the acceptance of God and the Bible by faith alone. By faith alone, meaning no physical evidence or having a basic proof of the existance of a Higher Being.

As far as the freedom of speech and suspension from school coming of personal opinion, he is quite entirely wrong.

MR. POLAND, to whom he is no doubt implying, was removed from school for inciting a riot by physical action consisting of taking direct part in sit-ins.

Mr. Poland would seem to most psychologists and any educated person that understands America, and the racial problem today, an exhibitionist, a grandstander and trouble maker all rolled into one.

I hope Mr. Guerin is writing his own words and no one elses. (His own are bad enough, but to quote some one else is such a falsity is sheer suicide.) He draws exceptionally well. Let us hope he sticks to his natural talent as an artist instead of a religious and/or racial critic of which he evidently knows little.

This letter should also show that freedom of speech is not dead on campus as he implies and as Mr. Poland advocates.

EDITORS NOTE: Mr. Brown has drawn inferences from the cartoon in question which may not have been there. Other readers have received a different impression.

Columnist Questions Editorial Value

By MYGNON CHAMPION

The lead editorial in Tuesday's Flambeau concerning Student Senate was a paradox of thoughtful comments and of unfortunate misinformation. Certainly there is room for criticism of Student Senate; it is the privilege, even the duty, of a newspaper to point out government's defects, but it is also the responsibility of that paper to make certain that it has its facts straight.

Unfortunately, the editorial's statement regarding Senate's intention to the proposed Honor System revision were inaccurate. "Senate has not taken the action to accept, reject, study or . . . even understand the report," reflects a complete lack of knowledge on the subject.

IN JANUARY, Dr. Kellogg Hunt, chairman of the student-faculty committee to study the Honor System, presented that committee's report to Student Senate, and in a lengthy report explained the reasons for each section of the proposal.

On Feb. 8, Senators Perilta, Powers, Keene and Farnell presented the proposal in bill form to the Student Senate, and it was referred to the Judicial and Rules Committee for study. On Feb. 13 that committee met for more than four hours to hear student comments and amendments to the bill before returning it to Senate Wednesday.

Perhaps the editorial writer felt that Senate was not moving quickly enough in reaching a decision on the bill. Certainly there is no need to delay a bill unnecessarily, but rushing a bill through without sufficient study, and thought would be a greater evil.

THE EDITORIAL also asserted that Senate had "called an open meeting to discuss the proposed system with the Student Body before it is even able to answer the questions raised; before it knows its own stand on the subject."

ALL Senate meetings are open to the public (Student Senate meets every Wednesday at 4:15; Women's Senate every other Tuesday at 5 p.m.) The special open meeting to which the editorial referred is the regular weekly Senate meeting. In recognition of the great student interest in the proposed revision, publicity was given to the fact that the proposal would be debated at Wednesday's meeting.

As for the criticism of Senate calling this meeting before it has made its decision, let's not forget that Senate has a duty to seek student opinion before making that decision. For senators to meet behind closed doors, decide the issue and then announce to the people they represent, "Now that we've decided what to do, everyone is welcome to come in and tell us what you think" is a far cry from the democratic ideal.

THE EDITORIAL included some valid criticism about Senate committees. True, too many committees accomplish too little. However, the member or frequency of committee reports is not a valid measuring stick for the value of a committee. The value of the contents of that report must also be considered.

A weekly report of minute detail is hardly the mark of an excellent committee; a single report which contains complete and significant information and recommendations is far more valuable.

The editorial referred also to the unhealthy situation of having senators who are "oblivious to the actual demands of their positions." After three years of observing the actions and inactions of more than 100 different senators, this writer must agree that there are some senators who do fit into this category; some are frequently absent from committee meetings and some are too often absent from Student Senate and Women's Senate.

HOWEVER, THESE senators do not, as the editorial said, remain oblivious from the time of their election until the time of their graduation. Few of them even seek reelection for a second year.

A very valid comment was made about the coming of May; this is a perpetual problem. In Student Senate this year, less than 10 members have had previous experience; in Women's Senate only five have had experience. Yet even these figures are an improvement over last year.

The unfortunate situation is that these new senators need at least one semester to become familiar with Senate's functions and procedures. Then just as they have acquired enough confidence and knowledge to take an active part in Senate debate and to introduce legislation, it's May. Everyone goes home and, come September, a new group of senators begin the cycle all over again.

Senator Explains Latest Honor Code

By SEN. THURMAN TALLEY DeGraff Hall

EDITOR'S NOTE: In the current Honor System debate in Student Senate, a notable question has been which courts should handle honor system violations. Senator Talley has taken a vigorous part in that debate.

The honor system is being revised. The proposed system concerns only cases of academic dishonesty, since the old system was ill defined and often unclear.

MUCH OF the difficulty was due not to the honor code itself, but to a misunderstanding of the Honor Court.

The Honor Court as it exists has jurisdiction in cases which involve no violation of the honor code. Students may justifiably be confused, thinking that such cases involve the honor system. This has led to criticism of the old honor system and is one of the reasons why it was ineffective. If the new system is to be effective, some changes should be made.

Two obvious solutions for consideration are to: create an Honor Court to only academic dishonesty giving all other functions the present Honor Court to new Supreme Court, or the present Honor Court known as the Supreme Court and let it handle Honor violations in addition to other business.

OF THESE two solutions former would be superior though adding some bulk the student government. It would eliminate misunderstanding; academic dishonesty would far removed from other judicial affairs and could dealt with more effectively a special body; and the Honor Court could devote more of its time to the interests of students, thereby ensuring greater success of the honor system.

In judging any such change let the ideals of a workable Judiciary and an effective Honor System be the paramount goal.

Berman Is 'Nervous' Or, So They Say

By LESLIE POWELL

This column was originally intended to have been a review of the Shelly Berman thing. It is—but not exactly as planned.

Before I go any further, I want to say thank you to both Mrs. Kay Vernon, director of special events at FSU, and to Mr. Chris Christy, president of Kappa Sigma fraternity. They have been more than kind and obliging to the Flambeau in setting up coverage of the Berman show. Unfortunately Mr. Berman, pardon, Mr. Berman and entourage were not likewise inclined.

Three Flambeau staff members were assigned to cover the entertainment events. They were professionally ignored by professional people.

WOULD BERMAN allow the writers to observe and listen from the stage wings? He would not. Could the photographer shoot photos? No, not with a flash. Apparently Berman's glowing presence would be enough to expose the film.

The nearest any of the three staffers got to Berman was his manager who was not introduced to the lowlife press. I am inclined to doubt that he would have contributed one good quote anyway.

The only word that filtered out of the Westcott back country regarding Mr. Berman's reluctant behavior was that people on the stage make him nervous. Maybe Berman is used to performing on one-wing stages. Yet, he exhibits considerable aplomb on television, and I understand there are dozens of people about to man little old insignificant items like cameras, lights, nd infinitum.

IN ALL fairness, Berman was most cooperative after the show. He, according to people more informed along these lines, was the first performer in the history of the Artist series to say he would be available to autograph sessions following his performance. The later did attend a party given by the Kappa Sigma house and was entertained at the downtown Vienna Lounge. Evidently then, he does not abhor all from claustrophobia.

For the thousand plus fans on hand for the Berman show, he was probably a rising success. Frankly, I wished he had obeyed that impulse and gone to the basketball game instead. I gave up for naught. There would have been a lot of nervous people there, but not a monopolist in sight.

THE BERMAN enthusiasts could do the locals a courtesy and up them one by handing to the actor's personality quirks. With all his talking time in on that stage, the man must have figured out by now that as a man in the public ear, he makes enough jokes up to him. More than a sentence of confidence in Berman than his management. After the show would have been fine for autographing Berman and the Cumberland Trio would "pose" for the camera. Spontaneity does not a part of the Berman show.

The next time Berman puts up on my television, I will turn the screen to the wall and read a Huckleberry Finn comic book. Then I won't worry that the famous nervous ent phone is about to explode. If it ever does, Berman is in trouble. He'll be paid.

Student Requests Choice Of Auditorium Seating

TO THE EDITOR:

I would like to know why the University does not let its students and faculty have first choice of seats in Westcott when there is an interesting speaker on the program.

At a recent function, f and many other students and faculty were denied a seat because the local citizens (that are not associated with the school) occupied many of the seats. I am speaking particularly of Bennet Cerf's appearance on campus, although there have been other times when this has occurred.

IT SEEMS TO me that this practice is unfair in that the students that pay to attend FSU University are slighted because of some outsiders that contribute nothing to the University. The students are the ones that are paying for an education, and speakers such as Bennet Cerf and others are part of our education.

Why should we have to arriva at a function thirty minutes ahead of time to be assured of a place to sit to obtain a small but important part of our education? Why not let students and faculty have first choice seats, and any left over could be given to the townspeople?

HERBERT GALLOWAY

EDITOR'S NOTE: The Cerf appearance was sponsored by FSU. The show was free and open to the public. Townspeople attend such functions, and their appearance is good for the "Town-Gown" relationship. We pay to attend FSU. yes, but remember that we'd pay a great deal more if it weren't for "outsiders that contribute nothing to the university" but plenty to the State of Florida.

Party's Work Is Finished

TO THE EDITOR:

The All-Campus Party will not perform any function during the spring of this year. It was decided by the executive committee. The party was designed to help freshmen in the fall and achieved their purpose which they had set as party will cease to evolve any further and will consider that they have achieved the purpose which they had set as their goal. The main reason for the ending of the party is due to the fact that only freshmen are now members and since the campaigns in the spring involve upper classmen races it would not be feasible to continue at this time.

IT WAS DECIDED that the remaining money in the treasury would be turned over to Dr. Carr for the Dollars for Scholars Fund. In this way the members of the entire student body would reap the benefit from the party. The advisor for the party, who is not on this campus, James Fish, said, "I am very proud of Tom Hughes and his crew for the work which they have done. I could not have done the job better had I done it myself."

Tom Hughes admitted that the university was benefited by the interest shown in student government by the freshmen, and by any others helped by the All-Campus Party

Tidal Waves Collide

A pair of tidal waves collide in the Florida State University swimming pool tonight.

The University of Florida swimming team, many times champion of the Southeastern Conference, tangles in the tank with Florida State, one of the few mermen squades that is capable of skinning the aqua-Alligators.

The tussle will cause quite a splash.

Since 1956, the year Florida was pressured into scheduling their new institution, the rivalry has flourished.

In the first outing, the Seminoles crushed the scourge of the SEC 63-33 to take the lead in the series.

The Gators got their revenge soon after their humiliating welcome in Tallahassee and nudged FSU 43-41 in the Gator pool. This victory set a pattern that the two schools have been following more or less ever since. Usually the contests are close, barreling affairs with the natatmers fighting hard for the leads.

The pattern held true for 1957, as the tribe nipped the Gators 50-46 but the UF tankers belted FSU 52-25 in the return match.

1958 featured a pair of close duals. The Seminoles edged the Gators 45-41 in one meeting and the two squads knotted the second time 48-48.

1959's battles weren't even contests. The Seminoles racked up another win with the leadership of three All-Americans, Curt Geeders, Paul Hiles, and Bob Weber by the scores of 58½-30½ and 52-34.

These three All-Americans, along with sophomore Paul Thompson led the Seminoles to another pair of victories last year. The Florida tankers klashed the Gator hide 65-30 in their own waters but had to settle for a 50-45 victory in the Gator pool.

Trio Featured Tonight

Three of the four will be featured in tonight's renewal of the rivalry.

Buck Hiles, whose chief hobby is breaking swimming records, Curt Genders, and Paul Thompson will be the big guns as Coach Bob Stults prepares to level his heavy artillery against the Gators when he's got the home pool advantage.

Before the season opened Buck Hiles had his name on a total of 9 big school records and a host of pool and meet marks.

He's reset his mark in the 200 butterfly, a meet, school, and pool record in the Sewanee flash, set an Individual Medley pool record against Texas A&M, broke a school and pool record in the Individual Medley and a school record in the 100 freestyle against Georgia and broke a record in the Individual Medley against Georgia Tech in a meet, school, and pool mark

Paul Thompson has also picked up three records. The big junior broke the Texas A&M pool record in the 220 and the 440 freestyle and reset a 400 freestyle meet, school, and pool record against Georgia.

Genders has been an All-American diver for the past two years and looks like a good bet to make it three in a row.

And Sophomores Besides

Besides these proven performers, Stults sports a bevy of top notch sophomores. The best of these include Pete Davis, a backstroker, Jack Dunlap, a freestyler, and Bill Richardson, a breast stroke expert.

Stults thinks that he has the guns to win.

"If everyone swims the way I expect him to, we should take it," Stults commented. "But Florida's got a strong team."

Stults named a crop of Florida sophomores that he considered outstanding. Out of these, three had broken Florida records already.

"They've got some real good boys, but I think we can take them if we all swim like we should."

From any angle, the match shapes up to be hard fought battle to the first to the last. As if there was an FSU-Fla. contest that wasn't.

Seminoles Battle Citadel Bulldogs

Florida State's cagers, after a game with the Bulldogs of Georgia last night, are preparing to walk into a hornet's nest when they meet The Citadel tomorrow night at Charleston, S. C.

The Cadets will be after the Seminoles with a vengeance because of an earlier 83-77 defeat at the hands of FSU.

On Monday night the Seminoles will play Furman in Tully Gymnasium. Florida State leads in the series with Furman by a 3-1 margin.

The Tribe was sporting its best winning streak, with four games, since 1957 before last night's game, and the cagers have high hopes of approaching the 1955-56 slate of 16-0. Before last night's game the Seminoles had knocked off Rollins, Alabama, The Citadel, and Valdosta State and had a season mark of nine wins and seven losses.

There are seven events left for the cagers, including games with The Citadel, Furman, Florida, Tampa, Miami and Loyola. In previous games this year the Tribe has defeated four of these contestants. The Citadel, Tampa, Miami, and Loyola. However, all of these wins came at home. and this time Florida State must confront the enemy on their own courts.

Florida was victorious on the Seminole court, and this time the Florida State team must go against the Gators in their own territory. There has not been a previous meeting against Furman this season, but this is the only game that will be played in Seminole territory.

An earlier game was played against Georgia, last night's opponent, during the Gator Bowl Tournament. The contest resulted in a 62-56 loss for FSU. Before last night's game the Seminoles led in the series 9-6.

Seminoles Take 4-1 Record Into Meet

By BILL VERIGAN
Assistant Sports Editor

Florida State's swimming team, sporting a 4-1 record, clashes with cross-state rival, the University of Florida, tonight at the FSU pool at 8:15.

The feature attraction of the evening is expected to be the diving event in which All-American Curt Genders will be pitted against Steve McBride, a team-co-captain, and Pete Heone.

Neither Genders nor McBride have been defeated this season and a close match is expected. Genders has only beeo beaten once in three years of dual meet competition, and that was against former teammate and All-American Bob Weber.

McBride and Heoce have copped Southeastern Conference championships during their stay at Florida.

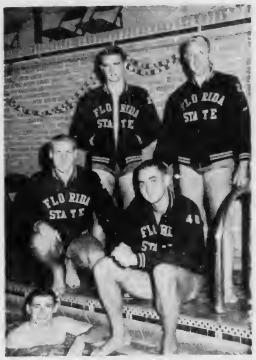
A group of sophomores carry the Gator's hopes into the sprinting competition. They will be led by Terry Green who established new records for his school in the 220 and 440-yard freestyle events.

Harry Wilder, another young star for the Gators, samshed the old mark in the 100-yard freestyle. Eddie Reese completes the sophomore trio, and he has erased the former University of Florida record in the 200-yard medley.

The Seminoles also have two outstanding sophomores in Pete Davis and Risto Pyykko. Both Pyykko and Davis have demonstrated their abilities by winning several events this season. They each hold freshman records also.

Buck Hiles, an All-American senior, will lead the tribe. This year he has set records in the 100-yard freestyle, 200-yard butterfly, and 200-yard medley.

Besides Davis and Pyykko, he will be backed up by Paul Thompson. Thompson, a junior All-American candidate, is the owner of the 440 and 220-yard freestyle title.



The University of Florida will carry a 4-2 record into the meet. The Gators have grabbed the SEC swimming five times in a row and are looking forward to winning it this year too.

The U of F victories were over Georgia, East Carolina, Alabama and Sewanee. Their defeats came at the hands of North Carolina and North Carolina State.

Florida State is presently working on a three meet winning streak after having an impressive 17-win skein snapped by Southern Methodist. Victories were notched over Georgia, Texas A & M, Alabama, and Sewanee.

The FSU-U of F series now stands at 7-2-1 in favor of the Seminoles. Florida State has won the last five meets, however.

A preliminary meet will be held between the two schools' freshman teams at 7 p.m.. The tribe's frosh have a 1-0 record for the season by a close victory over Alabama's freshmen.

THESE FIVE SWIMMERS WILL SWIM AGAINST FLORIDA . . . Pete Davis (in pool), Risto Pyykko and Paul Thompson (first row), and Buck Hiles and Carl Butler.

Baseball Team Holds Drills

Florida State's baseball team has been rehearsing for its first game since the beginning of second semester.

A group of veterans and a lot of new faces have been present for the practice sessions. Recently much of the time has been donated to intrasquad scrimmages.

A new batting cage adorns the left field line which will accomodate six batters at once. Several major league teams are very interested in installing cakes of a similar type, and some teams have asked Coach Litwhiler, the originator of the cage, for plans.

The freshman ball club has also had some pitchers working out with the varsity candidates, and the rest of the squad will come out shortly under the guidance of Phil Hunt, freshman coach and a former FSU player.

Miles, Sore Feet And A Good Time

By BONNIE PERRY
Flambeau Feature Editor

Six miles and sore feet, and a "good time was had by all" the Seminole Sentries on their second invitational march in the Krewe of Venus Parade at this year's Mardi Gras festival.

The Sentries, a precision drill team of the National Honorary Military Society of Pershing Rifles, is made up of 28 freshmen and sophomore cadets of the Army ROTC.

NEW NAME

Known as the Pershing Rifles Precision Drill Team from its debut on the Florida State University campus, in 1955, the drill team was christened Seminole Sentries this year at their first public performance, Houston football game, at FSU.

To perfect the Sentries, members must work approximately five hours a week on drill alone. Strict discipline is required to master routines, which are used during performances about a dozen times yearly throughout the Southeast area.

PERSHING RIFLES

Sentries are a special organization within the Pershing Rifles, an organization made up of 52 freshmen and sophomore Army and Air Force ROTC cadets. Members of the organization are rushed and pledged as in a social fraternity.

The purpose of the Pershing Rifles Society is to foster greater interest in the military profession, to instill military discipline and military courtesy, and to maintain a precision drill team.

FOUNDED IN 1894

Pershing Rifles was founded in 1894 by Gen. John J. Pershing at Nebraska State University, at which he was the Professor of Military Science and Tactics.

The organization at FSU is Company M of the 6th Regiment, known as the "Dixie 6th." The Company comprises Stetson U., Miami U., Florida Southern, Spring Hill College, and Puerto Rico, among others.

Rushing for this semester begins Feb. 21. All ROTC Cadets, both Army and Air Force, are eligible. Meetings are held first and third Tuesdays for each month at 7 p.m. in the ROTC military Bldg.

Sponsors are Misses Joy David and Celeste Lawrence. Advisors are Major Robert E. David and Sgt. Leonard R. Harris, both Army ROTC instructors.

AT MARDI GRAS

Last year, the Sentries were invited to march in a Mardi Gras parade. And as any FSU student knows who has seen the drill team in action, they wowed the crowd of approximately 750,000. They were invited back for this year's festival.

The Sentries left last Saturday morning before dawn for New Orleans. They bunked at Camp LeRoy Johnson, six miles out of the festival city. Making hurried respects to the Camp, soon after arrival the Sentries loaded back on their chartered bus and headed for Bourbon Street!

THE MORNING AFTER

Bright and early the morning after the Sentries managed to get in a half hour practice before the parade Sunday afternoon. Then came the six miles, one million observers and sore feet!

Reconnaissance reports have it that the crew will go again next year and participate in the 11-mile Mardi Gras parade!

Yzarc People Live Here

By MARY ELLEN HARRIS
Assistant Feature Editor

The Yzare People live in the Seminole Dining Hall!

More accurately, the Yzarc People live in a room within a room within the dining hall; the University museum.

The present display, which opened this week, concerns the Yzarc, or "Crray," people and points out several inconsistencies in the culture of the United States.

The exhibition is done in college technique by George Milton, curator of the museum.

NEW EXHIBITION

A new exhibition is presented every few months. There have been about 40 different shows in the last 10 years, said museum director Dr. Hale G. Smith.

Housed in the converted university dining hall, the museum consists of a long hall, in which temporary exhibitions are placed, and a main exhibition room with semi-permanent displays.

A windowless, low - ceilinged structure was built inside the original room for more effective display purposes. The museum is under the direction of the Anthropology Dept. and Archaeology.

OUTSTANDING EXHIBITIONS

The policy of the museum is the presentation of outstanding exhibitions by the best available and most effective means. Dr. Smith described the museum as "experimental" and explained that ideas are stressed more than artifacts.

Through the display techniques of lighting, color, design, and construction materials, each exhibit fits the mood of the material to be presented.

The museum is constantly testing new display techniques and technological advances for more effective displays. As an example, many of the materials on display are not placed behind glass, but arranged in such a manner as to discourage handling.

The exhibition is planned as a whole, stressing continuity and harmony. The entire area is considered in designing a display, and the subject matter and desired interpretation dictates the overall design.

Six Florida State Coeds To Be On Magazine Board

Six Florida State University coeds have been appointed to Mademoiselle Magazine's College Board for 1961.

Dana Ball, Claire Freiburger, April Lee, Kay Powers, Serenda Ralli and Linda Wahl are among 842 students at 230 colleges, who will report to the magazine this year on college life.

As a Board member, each girl must complete an assignment that will help her explore her interests and abilities in writing, editing, fashion, advertising or art, in competition for the 20 Guest Editorships to be awarded at the end of May.

TO NEW YORK

Guest editors are flown to New York for four weeks in June to help write, edit and illustrate Mademoiselle's August College Issue. They receive a regular salary for their work.

In addition to their work on the magazine, guest editors interview outstanding men and women in their chosen fields, visit fashion showrooms, publishing houses and advertising agencies and take in parties planned for them.

Anthology . . .

approximately 30 short stories were received.

Four additional short stories, several other poems and an essay were selected to complete the format of The Legend, '61. The essay, "Limited War Reassessed: An Indictment," by Gerry Ringer, marks the first appearance of this type of writing in the three-year-old student publication.

The short stories are "And The Elders Wept" by Toni Perry, "A Wrong Time To Die" by Stan Sirmans, "The Lavender Pillow" by Sharon Downing and "The Walkin' Jesus" by Dorothy Reedy. Four of the six stories are illustrated.

The size of this year's Legend reverts back to that of the smaller 1959 Literary Anthology, the first to be published, Miss Lowell said. Copies will be distributed in at least two places on campus and may be obtained by presenting an ID card or 25 cents.

Dylan Thomas: Coffee Topic

Dr. Allan Thomson, assistant professor of English, will present a program of selected poems from the works of Dylan Thomas at the English Coffee Hour at 4 p.m. today in Westminster House.

Among the poems Thomson will read are "Fern Hill," "Poem in October," and "The Refusal to Mourn the Death by Fire." He will discuss the poetry and the techniques used by the poet in his writings.

"Dylan Thomas concerned himself with the individual and with such things as life and death, sin, and the condition of man's lot in the vaster ideas of space and time. In a sense, he was not unlike the religious prophet in his vision of man's relations to the universe and to destiny," Thomson said.

"His work is dominated by an overpowering quality of rhythm and although some readers have called his meanings 'obscure,' Thomas himself has maintained that he was writing directly and clearly and that he simply meant what he said."

The poet, a native of Wales, became widely known because of his American tours and his excellent powers as a reader, according to Dr. Thomson.

Anyone interested in photography who has had past experience in taking or processing pictures is invited to join the FLAMBEAU staff, Photography Editor Lloyd Hines announced. He may be contacted at the FLAMBEAU Office, 2128 or 3052.

Honor Studies Open To Frosh

Freshmen who achieved high grade averages last semester may be eligible for admission to the Basic Studies Honors Program this term, Director Laurence Chalmers has announced.

Any freshman already in the program who had a 3.5 grade average may enter the program now without further consideration, he said.

Others who had a 3.0 overall the first semester and either had a 2.5 grade average in high school or scored at least 470 on senior placement tests or 170 on college board exams, may also enter.

Dr. Chalmers asked that these students, if interested, contact him at his office in the Psychology Bldg.

Formal admission to the honors program gives the student a special honors advisor, special honors sections and courses on the freshman and sophomore level, and participation in bimonthly non-credit meetings.

Effective Saturday, February 19, 1961, the Suwannee Dining Room will close on Saturdays. The Seminole Dining Hall and Student Center will remain open for all meals.

Shall We All Sing?

A variety of organizations, singing a variety of songs, will compete in Campus Sing, March 4 and 5 in Westcott Auditorium.

Campus Sing is an annual project of music honoraries Sigma Alpha Iota and Phi Mu Alpha.

Sororities, fraternities, dormitories, noo-coed groups, and any coed organization which can draw from its membership a male or female chorus are eligible to enter the Sing.

First place winner will receive a loving cup and photograph, while second and third place winners receive plaques and photographs, according to the Campus Sing committee.

All performing groups must have a minimum of 24 members in the chorus and must sing two numbers. Selection of music is left entirely to the individual groups; however, it is suggested that one number be serious and one light. No number will be sung by more thao one group.

TIME LIMITED

Performing time for each organization is limited to eight minutes, which includes time spent getting on and off the stage.

If a piano serves as the only instrument of accompaniment, the chorus may use an undergraduate from outside the group. Any other accompaniment must come from within the organization.

All directors must be undergraduates who are members of their respective organizations. No help may be received from graduates or faculty members of any school during rehearsals.

Judging will be on a percentage basis on the following criteria: quality and production of tone; pitch, rhythm, and overall musicality; understanding of text, projection of text, and diction, in relatioo to interpretation; and presence, personality, and appearance of the group.

Campus Sing committee members Evelyn Kelly, Barbara Youmans, Nancy Cash, Frank Knight, Herb Galloway, Nat Smith, and Hugh Jones.

Court to avoid the confusion of associating that court with the trial of honor offenses only.

Senate also struck from the bill by a vote of 24 to 12 the provision that the Academic Honor System, in order to be passed, would have to be approved by more than 90 per cent of the students voting on the amendment of the system.

This provision for adoption had been specifically requested by the student-faculty committee which studied revisioo of the honor system.

However, the student body Constitution, which contains the legal basis for the system, may be amended only upon recommendatioo by a two-thirds vote of Senate and ratificatioo by a vote of 25 per cent of the studeot body, with a majority tone more than half approving.

MATHIS' STATEMENT

According to ao opinon of Attorney General Roy Mathis, which was read in Senate, even if this clause remained to the amendment, the system would have been of the student body approved it, in effect if only a simple majority

Student Body President Carl Butler outlined possible ways of making the approval of 90 per cent of the students voting effective but said that if the machinery was set up to do this alternative approval methods might be mused in the future. "That amending process is hard because it protects all of us," he added. He suggested a "straw vote" might achieve the same purpose.

The student committee had maintained that this measure was necessary as an indication of student support of the Academic Honor System.

Just because someone votes for it doesn't mean he'll abide by it," Sen. Gerry Dobson countered.

Central provisions of the revision bill include the removal of lying and cheating as Honor Code offenses and converting the system to an academic honor system only.

It also defines academic dishonesty and prohibits proctoring, as well as setting forth minimum punishments.

The two new telephones in the bassinet are the result of a perfect marriage of research and design. They illustrate the way Gen Tel constantly strives to make the telephone en ever more convenient and helpful service of modern life.

The Starlite* phone in the foreground is a new "compact"—only half the size of a standard desk phone. Its PANELESCENT® (electroluminescent) dial glows in the dark for easy dialing, and can be turned up to serve as a night light.

ELIMED ORGANIZATION

the dean of faculties in rmed organization are the of the various schools, the director of libraries and the director of the summer session.

The many small details of the position may be grouped into four areas, Baum said. In considering curriculum changes the dean must view the institution as a whole and see that the educational needs of the students are met in the best possible way without dissipation of resources.

Certain budgetary responsibilities also enter into the picture as the dean must see that there is equity of treatment among the various schools in the allocation of resources and must handle details arising in connection with the allocations.

The dean of faculties also oversees faculty promotions, making certain that the promotions are on a reasonably equal basis institutionally-wise. There is not enough contact with the students, said Baum, but the dean of faculties does handle changes of recorded grades and many other problems which may be brought to him.

PRESIDENT'S DEPUTY

In essence the dean of faculties acts as the president's deputy in the area of academic affairs and provides leadership in that area, said Baum.

Born in Germany, the present dean of faculties was raised in Chicago. He earned a B.A. in math and a master's and doctorate in meteorology at the University of Chicago. During the latter part of World War II he served in the Navy Weather and Irteligence Services.

Besides his duties as dean of sociate professor and research assistant at the University of Maryland until the time he left FSU to develop the Meteorology Dept. He served as the head of that department until 1951 when he became the director of university research.

In 1958 he became dean of the graduate school and director of university research, and in 1960 he became acting dean of faculties replacing Dr. Charles Davis, who resigned to become president of Winthrop College. Two weeks ago the position and appointment was approved by the Board of Control and Gov. Farris Bryant.

Another feature of the Week according to Student Chairman Jan Pearce will be daily panel discussion with members of the faculty and guest speakers taking part.

The discussions will be held at 4 p.m. Monday through Wednesday in the Club Room of Longmire. The discussion Monday will be "Christian Ethics and American Foreign Policy."

Student Party Convention Held Tonight

The Student Party Convention, in which major Student Government officers will be nominated, is tonight at 7:30 in room 124 of the Science Bldg.

Although authorized campaigning is not yet allowed, candidates have been working to line up support in the convention. Probable nominees for student body president are Vice President Bobby Byrd and Sen. Jim Miller.

Duncan Moore, secretary of welfare, and Ken Vanden Berg, chairman of the lobby committee, are mentioning the vice-presidential nomination.

Two positions appear today to be unchallenged, but last minute opposition is possible. Myggen Champion will run for women's vice president and Carl Kuttler for men's vice president.

Kitty Miller, Sophomore Class secretary, and Sen. Jeanne Ferlita are seeking the party nomination for secretary of state.

Other officers to be nominated tonight are chairman of the University Court, chairman of Traffic Court and members of the Board of Publications.

Five minute campaign speeches will be given by the individuals nominating the candidates.

A convention fee of $.25 per delegate is to be paid at the door before delegates enter the convention. This fee entitles each delegate to voting rights. Delegations should be seated by 7:15, party officials said.

Student Party officers will be elected shortly after the nominations for government offices.

Mid-Break, Grade Error Under Study

Steps are underway to prevent the difficulty that ensued as a result of this year's short semester break and late grade distribution from happening again.

In a letter to Registrar Murray Kenna, Student Body President Carl Butler requested that something be done to alleviate this situation next year.

Use of clerks instead of faculty members for the distribution of class cards would relieve the faculty of these clerical tasks, but

Here is the text of Butler's letter:

Dear Dr. Kenna,

The Student Body President's Cabinet discussed the problem of the length of semester break which has students relatively late in receiving their first semester grades.

Many students returned to the university as registered students only to find out that they are suspended or that courses for which they are registered must now be changed due to the delay in receiving grades. We recommend that the period allowed for dropping and adding courses be extended throughout the remainder of this week, if at all possible. We further recommend that serious consideration be given before a semester break of this length is used again. It would seem to us that a longer period between semesters would benefit the students, the registrar's office, and the overall university.

We realize of course that our knowledge may be incomplete, and make these recommendations as it appears to the students concerning the over spread. I would appreciate your own views concerning this matter.

Sincerely,
Carl Butler
Student Body President

Along with a suggestion for a longer semester break, a slate of recommendations for changes in registration procedures and methods of changing schedules after registration is being submitted to the Council of Deans by Dr. Murray Kenna, registrar.

Some of the changes will take 12 months to be effective if approved while others may be put into effect next year.

LESS CARDS

One of the suggestions is to reduce the number of cards by mechanized reproduction of one card containing certain basic information. At the most, three cards would be used.

A class admission card would be issued for the student to present to the instructor on the first day of class. A photographic identification Card is also suggested.

Another item in the proposal is substituting a pre-registration counseling period for the actual pre-registration, since so many students find it necessary to change their schedules after semester break.

Actual registration would then be by appointment and only three days would be needed for registering.

the department head would supervise the clerks, the Registrar said.

Dr. Kenna also suggested a one-way traffic system during registration so that students wouldn't spend more than 30 seconds at any section except the class card tables.

SENIORS FIRST

Graduating seniors would receive first priority in obtaining classes, and other students would be served in order of actual need for the class.

Kenna also hopes for a new system of issuing transcripts in which students would be able to obtain transcripts on an hour's notice. This would require additional IBM equipment, he would some of the other proposals.

Kenna wants to mechanize the registration and transcript processes as much as possible.

Splash, Splash Goes The Water

By BONNIE PERRY
Flambeau Feature Editor

There are three words which one doesn't mention around Florida State University Tarpon Club members: "swimming, pool and water."

The women's aquatic organization has been doing intensive practice for the last month, even giving up their semester break, in preparation for their annual show tomorrow through Saturday.

Tickets for the show are on sale at the Westcott Ticket Office; $1. for non-students, and $.50 and activity coupon No. 5 for students.

Beginning at 8:15 nightly in Montgomery (Women's) Gym, "Spotlight on the News" is an hour-long show with about 30 swimmers taking part.

Under the direction of Miss Glynnie Smith of the Physical Education Dept., "News" will feature scenes from the pages of the daily newspaper.

There will be a floating water composition from the pool, hearts column, complete with arrow; a weather report entitled "Storm Warning"; a comic strip number; a sports scene; a mini-ballet; and a water ballet representative of the society page.

ON TELEVISION

The comic strip number, "Lil' Abner," will be shown tomorrow on the Wilson Sheehan Lanes, Inc." an hour-long, beginning at 6:30 p.m. The Tarpon Club will do a special run-through of the number for taping tomorrow afternoon at 3:30.

During the one number for television will be relaxed compared to the timing necessary for the complete show. Timing of all strokes and motions is necessary, not only for the visual beauty of the act, but for audible and movement coordination.

SECONDS FOR CHANGE

Timing is important, too, for costume changes between numbers. "Sometimes there are only seconds to change," said Bridge Presnell, co-director of "Gridiron Clash."

Miss Presnell went on to tell of past experiences when swimmers put their costumes on backwards, or had to make a hurried change and got into a wrong costume.

Other problems arose when a swimmer wears contact lenses. Due to a great deal of underwater swimming, lenses are not worn during a performance. This can put an added strain on other swimmers to keep to the strict timing, while making sure their glasses-less teammate is in the proper position.

UNDERWATER SPEAKERS

So that the "beat" can be kept while swimmers are underwater, underwater speakers are used, pointed out Miss Presnell. The speakers are grounded so there is no danger to the swimmers should a speaker short out, she said.

Music for each number is taped.

Miss Presnell related that Saturday was a bad day for practice. Somehow the wiring wasn't right, so that the aquatic group had to practice with no flood lights, no speakers or sound by which to base their motions. Besides all that they were doing the show in costume for the first time.

EVERY NIGHT PRACTICE

Tarpons and Minnows, pledges to the club, have been practicing every night from 7:30 to 10:30, except Saturday, since semester break to get the show in shape. And with them at every practice is their sponsor, Miss Smith, whom the girls term "their inspiration." Miss Smith swims every composition to get the feel of the number and to give a possible change could be made.

Tarpons are given $100 annum on which to operate. This plus receipts is used for suits, caps, decorating materials, props, lighting and any trips the Club wishes to make.

EXPERT SCRIMPERS

Everything the club uses is carefully stored for possible use in the future. Even worn out suits can be used as a foundation for making over a costume. The girls in the Club can be described as expert scrimpers, as they make many of the suits, design and make props and backdrops.

"Lil' Abner" and "Cadets in Review" are the most rigorous numbers in the show. They have nearly continuous motion and stroking.

FIRST TIME

Body-lights will be used by the group for the first time in "Gridiron Clash." The girls will have lighted hats with batteries around their necks. The group will form the letters FSU.

Meeting Of Students And Lobby Group Set Thursday

Members of the Lobby Committee and students chosen by the committee to act as official go-between for the university and state legislators will meet with President Gordon W. Blackwell at 4 p.m. Thursday in 120 Geology Bldg.

As part of the overall plan to inform legislators of the needs of the university, 202 students, from the various counties, have been chosen to contact the legislators, said Ken Van Assendelft, chairman of the Lobby committee.

These students, picked from lists of Florida students and approved by the dean of students, were sent letters last week explaining their selection and the purpose of the committee.

Following a talk by Blackwell,

Traffic Court will not meet tonight because of the Student Party convention. The next meeting will be at 7 p.m. Feb. 28.

who is the coordinator of all plans to contact the legislators, the students will meet in groups to make plans for talking with the legislators.

The 38 groups represent senatorial districts and the students have been placed in groups according to their home town.

Among the items to be discussed with the legislators are the need of increases in teachers salaries, allocations for buildings, and the hope for a new swimming pool.

At the meeting Thursday the needs and desires of the university will be fully explained to the students so they may contact the legislators effectively, said Van Assendelft.

Van Assendelft has asked that all Florida students write home or to the editors of home town newspapers about the aims and needs of the university so the legislators will know that the students are interested in the betterment of the university.

A University's Needs

Residents May Be Denied Education

By JOAN ABBOTT
Assistant News Editor

Editor's note: This is the first of a series of stories exploring the needs of Florida State University. The article deals with the overall needs of the state system and the role of the Board of Control.

Qualified Florida students may be denied higher education in their own state in the near future unless additional college facilities are provided.

Total enrollment in state and local colleges and universities in community junior colleges in Florida will skyrocket to 158,000 by 1970, a figure more than the 68,000 enrolled in Fall, 1960, the State Board of Control reports.

These board estimates, based on sets of enrollment and graduation patterns in public schools, have exceedingly accurate record, these figures darken prospect of future high school graduates getting into college unless expansions are made.

Part of this development is the responsibility," said Dr. J. Edward Culpepper, executive secretary of the state Board of Control, governing body of the university system.

A forum of the upsurge in enrollments should be met by community junior colleges, although at the present time construction of these facilities is lagging, he explained. Still a large share of the burden of the expected influx will fall to the state university system.

"We can't take every student that comes," Dr. Culpepper said. These numbers must be accommodated: qualified students will have to be turned away, unless there are increases made in university facilities and faculties, according to Dr. Culpepper.

There are three possible solutions to the problems posed by the projected enrollments, the director said: (1) expand present facilities; (2) to build new institutions; and (3) which would probably be the last resort, to raise admission requirements.

In meeting the present needs for state supported higher education and in anticipation of the rising enrollment, the University of South Florida at Tampa was opened this year.

Plans for a fifth state university near Boca Raton are also being made, pending an initial grant from the State Legislature this session, Dr. Culpepper said.

Even with these new institutions, expansion of the present universities will be needed. Enrollment at Florida State University which was 9,019 last Fall will hit 15,000 in 1970 if expansion keeps up with the needs of the state as determined by the Board of Control.

Increased space utilization and larger numbers of students per class may absorb some of the enrollment jump, but more classroom buildings, laboratories and library space will still be required. The trimester plan which the Board is studying is another possible way of meeting at least part of the enrollment rise.

The State University system is at the same time plagued with the problem of the lag in faculty salaries as compared with other similar institutions. In the meantime, increasing numbers of faculty personnel will have to be added.

These needs must be anticipated by the board, acting as a coordinating agent between each university and the State Legislature, which controls appropriation of funds for operation of the system.

The board analyzes studies, surveys and reports of the university presidents to determine the needs of the system in relation to the needs of the state in general, conveying this information to the Legislature.

These liaison duties are part of the duties of the board as the governing body of the entire university system, with powers of policy making, personnel appointment, budgetary approval, and maintainance and construction of state university facilities.

But in the process of expanding present facilities, "the board is interested that the institutions be of a size that will allow them to provide services most efficiently," Dr. Culpepper said.

"It's imperative that we maintain quality—we must not give away quality at any time," he emphasized.

The board has an obligation to the state to meet its needs for college trained personnel. It also has a duty to the student to furnish him with the desirable quality of education.

The Florida Statutes outline this duty of the board to the student as to "seek out, among all the schools of Florida, every student who may, by nature, have a special aptitude and genius for some one branch of learning, and encourage him in the prosecution of the study of that branch, to the end that he may become an expert and a leader in that subject."

It is to this end that FSU joins in the "pursuit of excellence."

French Movie Shown Here

A French Italian view of love in five episodes will be presented by the Florida State University Film Club at 7:30 tonight in Westcott Auditorium.

It happened in the Park, spoken in French but not in Italy, stars the French Francois Perier, Micheline Presle, and Gerald Philipe, and the Italian Vittoria de Sica and Eduardo de Filippo.

Directed by Gianni Franciolini, the five episodes touch different aspects of love, some touching, some funny.

The dramas show a debonair lawyer caught in a trap of fighting lovers, parents and a young couple involved in a married conference, a teacher blackmailed by students and a young lover in an illicit romance with a young wife.

Tryouts for the children's play, King Midas and the Golden Touch, will be held at 7 p.m. tomorrow in 304 Graduate Bldg.

The play is an annual event performed by the University Theatre and sponsored by the Tallahassee Junior League.

Parents must take up the cast of the play which is presented before Tallahassee school children.

We Have A No-Party System

And now we have a "no-party" system on the Florida State University campus.

In a recent letter to the editor, the former All-Campus Party chairman stated that his party had achieved its goal, and that it has therefore ceased to function any further. This announcement comes as a shock after the former violent expression of sentiment and attempts at organization which heads of the party proclaimed would make this, if not the top party on the campus, then at least a competent rival to the existing party. The party has not fulfilled either of these boasts.

IN ITS BEGINNINGS, the All-Campus Party was hailed by its supporters as the latest in a succession of opponents to the Student Party. It went into the fall freshman class officer and senator elections with a will and had several victories to chalk up—that is, until the victorious candidates became disenchanted with its platform of misconceptions and pulled away from its ranks. The party pretended to develop the latent leadership on campus and also to build a healthy rivalry between the two existing parties.

It now seems to have forgotten all of its promises and instead of supporting any sort of rivalry or leadership, has turned tail and is running. The fact that "a good job was done by all," is greatly to be questioned. The job was so good that there are no visible results or material contributions in evidence. The "good job" must remain the opinion of the chairman of the former party.

AS FAR AS ANY rivalry with the Student Party is concerned, we question the fact that the Student Party is considered a party and not a popularity poll. Its ballots read more like a grouping of the popularity kids presented to the campus with the magic tag "student party nominee."

Part of the reason behind the overpopular and not the capable student usually receiving the nomination is not actually governed by the party statutes. Instead, the election of delegates is left up to the integrity of the individual presidents of dormitories, sororities and fraternities. In this way, several presidents have a remarkable control over the vote, since they appoint the delegates.

We have no two-party system at FSU because we lack the leadership potential to build two strongly organized parties. We don't even have one party because we lack the unity and spirit of adherence to regulations that will make it more than a mickey mouse-bleu cheese group of rah-rah youngsters.

Therefore, we have a no-party system at FSU.

Famine Drives Men To War

The word, according to persons recently coming out of Red China's "people's paradise", is famine.

And news reports are that Communist small fry are being sacrificed, literally, to appease the hungry Chinese. Small time wheels such as commune managers and planners are finding themselves shot. But the explosion of guns never drowned out the growling of hungry stomachs. Hungry men will riot and fight in the face of sickeningly overpowering odds. And when they do, many people will be shot because they want to survive.

NOBODY IS saying there will be a revolt of the Chinese masses. Far from it. The Chinese are too laced into their Red strait jacket now for one famine to free them. But the word of famine leaking into the outside world may make many overseas Chinese, a group to whom the Reds appeal to "come home to the home land," stop and think before they risk life and possessions by returning to the mainland cauldron.

World In Turmoil

Once There Were Elephants

By JIM MILLER

The elephant once was a glorious and independent creature. However he was taken to a magnificent zoo in which other elephants lived. Now our elephant was used to doing what he pleased. The elephants in the zoo were different. He noticed that they walked in circles, trunk to tail.

Thinking this was some new game, our elephant said, "Let me into the circle." Once around, trunk to tail, and our elephant could walk with his eyes closed.

THERE ARE elephants and there are pigs. Pigs are by nature friendly animals. Now the barnyard was crowded with pigs. There was pushing and shoving at meal times, and some pigs did not eat. The fence separating the barnyard was in need of repair. The pigs being civilized animals, they decided to establish a government to solve these ills.

There was great excitement. In every mud hole there was oinking and grunting and other pig language as the pigs discussed back and forth the selection of their government. There was great surprise when few pigs turned up to choose the government. The pigs said to one another. This hole is too comfortable to leave.

THE NEW GOVERNMENT pigs chose the biggest mud hole for their own. The mud hole being only so big, the government pigs lay down in a circle with an inner circle, counterclockwise. This mud hole was a comfortable place. The government pigs soliloquized. They were pleased with themselves.

There are pigs and there are chickens. A farmer bought some hens and put them in his new shiny henhouse. The hens knew they were there to lay eggs. The farmer was nice to the hens. He gave them corn and oats to eat. Some hens stood at the trough all day and ate. They ate what belonged to the other hens too.

The hens who were doing what was intended — laying eggs — had little left to eat. The hens who stood and ate had little time to lay.

ANOTHER FARMER came and built his new shiny hen house nearby. His hens ate and laid eggs. The fat hens without time to lay disappeared from his new hen house.

At the first farmer's hen house many hens were very disturbed seeing what was happening. They warned the fat hens, but the fat hens would not listen.

There are animals and there are students. Students are very active; their grades are very low. People said, "But they don't have time to make good grades." Once there was a student government. A vast majority of students never voted for it. The people in it were pleased with themselves.

Once there were people seeking comfortable mud holes, for their minds and bodies. Once there were people who wanted into the circles Once there were people who did not know why they were in the "hen house" — the university. These people cheat themselves and cheat everyone.

Letters To The Editor

Writer Just Has To Protest

TO THE EDITOR:

It is my usual policy to take editorials in the Flambeau with a shakerful of salt, but finally, after three semesters of silence, I feel compelled to rectify what I consider a gross injustice to Mr. Shelley Berman.

It was my pleasure, along with Miss Barbara Yeomans and other members of the Student Artist Series Committee, to greet Mr. Berman at Tallahassee's airport and drive him to his hotel suite and later to be with those picking him up for his performance on campus. At no time during the hour or so we visited with Mr. Berman did he show any sign of being anything but cordial and friendly. As to the insinuation that Mr. Berman was discourteous to the student press I would like to remind your staff that I personally informed the Flambeau of his arrival and asked if a reporter could be on hand for pictures and comments. As Barbara and I escorted Mr. Berman to the car, he asked us if there were any newspeople from the University that would like to photograph or speak to him. The only student publication present was the Smoke Signals whose reporter met and talked with Mr. Berman along with a gathered group of more than fifty student admirers. He quipped and posed for pictures for more than fifteen minutes before being driven to his hotel where he again posed for pictures with a gathered group of students.

EVEN THOUGH HE was busy with his manager and "entourage" Mr. Berman invited the students who accompanied him to the hotel to his suite where he autographed photographs and chatted for more than a quarter of an hour.

The Flambeau suggests that they should be permitted to approach entertainers at the Flambeau's convenience and this does not take into consideration the fact that back stage is any kind of performance is the last place for a camera-laden reporter. Our student newspaper will have to some day realize that they are still quite a few notches below the New York Times.

My final observation is that Mr. Shelley Berman can now number more friends on this campus than can the Florida Phelgmbeau.

Sincerely,
Roger Carlos Sherman

EDITOR'S NOTE: Mr. Sherman's message was received at the Flambeau at or after 2 pm. This would have to be the case since the staffer who took the call is not in the office prior to that hour. Mr. Berman arrived at 2 pm. Our photographers and writers have classes to attend. Therefore they tend to schedule interviews, etcetera.

Further, the Flambeau was not previously made aware that Mr. Sherman handled such affairs as visiting celebrities. In the future the Flambeau will endeavor to contact Mr. Sherman.

Frankly, the Flambeau likes shooting the entertainer at work. We get enough "posed" photos from the Public Relations Office because they are set up to handle news releases and photos of a "posed" nature.

Backstage is a fine place for a camera-laden photographer or a pencil-laden reporter, it becomes more so when we learn that the "student admirers" so solicitous of Berman a well being were not so solicitous that they forebore to see the performance from backstage. Apparently Berman didn't bring much of his "entourage", instead a large portion attached itself to him here.

What Is The Party's Role In Student Government?

TO THE EDITOR:

Along with a majority of students, I am an insignificant part of this vast mass of intellectual endeavor. I am known by perhaps a few dozen friends, who in turn are in the same position. There is one difference between my friends and myself however; mainly that I have become aware of the strange situation that apparently exists in our student government.

SINCE MY freshman year, I have observed, at a distance and with extreme distaste, the political maneuvering of a few chosen individuals. I have seen three political parties try and fail to survive in our "democratic" atmosphere. I have watched delegates traded, bartered and exchanged. I have seen student offices filled four years in advance by crafty maneuvering. Especially have I seen the executive office swapped back and forth as some have exchanged grace turn by turn.

On the eve of the pending convention, I ponder the situation and wonder. What will be the outcome of the build-up in the convention? Let all of the delegates look over the situation. Let us ask nothing but complete honesty of them and a free, open look at the situation. Let the students, for once in their feeble existence, get interested in their government and do something to improve it. Take a look at yourself, FSU. Take a long, lasting look and then work to weed out ideals.

Adair Drops Race For Veep

DEAR FRIENDS AND SUPPORTERS:

Concerning my candidacy for the women's vice-presidency, I have withdrawn my name from consideration.

To those of you who have joined my organization or who were planning to support me, I express my humble regrets. I feel that I have let you down.

My reasons have not been whimsical. I am in debt now and cannot afford the expense of a long, hard campaign. When I checked my grades for last semester, I found them to be lower than they should have been. If I am to remain in school next year, I will have to make up the difference this semester.

I am working part time now, and hope to be working all but full time by the latter part of this semester.

Although I shall not be a candidate myself, what time and money I have I will put wholeheartedly behind one in whom I have complete faith.

Let's Get Serious

Respectable To Chea Need Proctoring

By GERRY DOBSON

Our honor system as it is now constituted is a colossal flop. A survey has shown that approximately two-thirds of the student body does not adhere to its requirements to one degree or another. It therefore is well that the faculty, senate, and other interested persons study the question of what is to be done to correct the situation.

The reasons which are now being debated by the senate were the result of a careful consideration of the faults of the present honor system, and there can be little doubt that the new system, if enacted, would work better than the old one. But will it work well enough?

THE ANSWER, I believe, is no. One senator has suggested that the major fault of the present honor system is that the Student Body is confused as to which differences are actually violations of the Honor Code. And because the students feel that some offenses are of a trivial nature, they are willing to overlook violations by rationalizing that these "trivial" offenses shouldn't be under the Honor Code, and therefore the infractions could be ignored.

Advocates of the new Honor Code claim that the misunderstandings of the scope of the Honor Code will be eliminated because the new code covers only academic dishonesty, e.g. cheating on tests, plagiarism, etc. This is debatable. For if the scope of the old Honor system was set down clearly in the statutes and had misunderstanding arose, so might they under the new setup, even though the list of offenses is much more limited.

BUT IT IS the fact that two-thirds of the members of the student body can rationalize away the violations that are being committed that is important. Obviously the full meaning of the Honor has not been driven home to the students. Violations frequent, and convictions tively infrequent. there are few persons on pus who care to be ers." Just Three More Weeks Before Poster Plastering

In just about three weeks from today this campus will be most thoroughly plastered with election posters. It's the same thing every spring at FSU . . . biology shills into "race" . . . and the campus bloom with more zest than them there shy magnolias around Westcott can ever manage.

And if there are two topical topics favor more topical, it must be sex and politics. Hollywood will tackle campus sex on rare occasion but burlesque forever got in the way. However, even that west coast industry is afraid to tackle student politics, doubtedly the uppermost question in a screen writers mind would be where do we stand?

I WON'T ATTEMPT to explain campus politics here or anywhere else because I never quite manage to make heads and tails of what's going on. Once I thought a tape-bearing cow was the candidate I found I couldn't even find enough surprise to lift an eyebrow. Like most of my fellow students, if I had found the cow to have a pleasing smile, doubtless I'd have voted for her.

And pleasing smiles are most abundant in spring. Take heed of the season, and don't stand in the polling booth before you be plastered bead to foot with campaign posters. And don't be hesitant about shouting the merits of your particular choices in the many races. To my mind there are several candidates of vigor and interest. I just hope that the student powers-that-be don't attempt a belated St. Valentine's day massacre in the political department. It will not be warranted.

Yankee Asks Y'All's Help

TO THE EDITOR:

I am a northern college student writing a research paper on the topic: "The Feelings of the Southern College Students About Forced Integration."

There is very little documentation on this subject. The only way of obtaining this information is from the students themselves.

SINCE THERE is no way for me to obtain this information I am writing to you for assistance. I would appreciate it very much if you would publish in your school paper the following request.

I would like to have the students write me, at the given address, telling me their feelings about forced integration and why they feel the way they do. I would like to know if they dislike Negroes and the reasons why or why not. I would also like to know the age and state of residence of each student.

THE SUCCESS of my paper depends on my obtaining an answer from as many students as soon as possible. It also depends on my receiving the answers as soon as possible.

Thanks to you and all the students who help me in writing my paper.

Warrior On The Brink

A half nude male stood poised overlooking the brink. He stared intently ahead, his eyes oblivious to the spectators surrounding him.

Here was a throwback to the age of the Grecian games when spectator warriors competed before a mass of adoring spectators who marveled at the beauty and majesty of human flesh in action. He was such a warrior.

The background framed his head grotesquely. A heating pipe was the portrait at the neck, another pipe formed the upper-portion of the frame, a worn, slightly battered heater on the floor and a soggy towel slung casually over the pipe to the right completed the frame.

The youthful warrior, clad only in a white slash of material, stood small next to his giant competitor in blue. But he stood erect in a manner which denounced his smallness as a useless scale of measuring the two.

A hush began to settle over the crowd like fog on a winter night. Conversations died in the throats of the crowd and only the whirring of the chair of a spectator craning for a better view broke the rising quiet.

All was silent.

The hands of the warrior moved away from his thighs slowly like a bird checking his wings before a long flight. They settled there slowly and the drama of the movement thickened the atmosphere.

Suddenly, he was spontaneous action. His arms arced over his head; he took three quick steps to the very edge of the brink and propelled himself upward in a seeming effort to break the hold of earth's gravity.

At the top of his flight, he turned and broke into a mass of contortions as he plummeted downward. The warrior straightened his body just before hitting the water and left only a slight splash and a wealth of bubbles to testify to the perfection of the act.

The throng broke into wild applause interspersed with an unidentified yell. They were hailing their warrior, Curt Genders.

Setting, Action, and Character

This was the setting, the action, the characters, and the mood of the diving events at the Florida State-Florida swimming which was won in fine style.

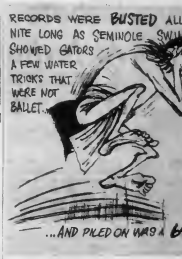
Pat Hogan's solemn voice provided the denoument when he announced "Curtis Genders wins the diving events with a point total of 312.1" which incidentally is the highest total he has scored in any meet competition.

More applause followed and everyone in the cramped confines of the fieldhouse the Florida State pool knew why Curt Genders is an All-American diver, and has been since his sophomore year at FSU.

The blond diver, who stands but 5-7 and weighs but 145 pounds, did six times with near-spectacular results.

His first effort was a front dive, with a 1.3 degree of difficulty. He followed it by collecting 31.2 total points. His second, a forward position and one half somersault with a 2.4 degree of difficulty, netted him 34 more points.

His third effort was a back one and one half somersault with degree of difficulty of 2.2, and it got him 45.1 points. The third of fourth dives were a pair of somersaults, the reverse one and one half and the inward with degrees of difficulty of 2.2 and 2.4 respectively. These netted him 47.3 and 57.6 apiece



Genders' climactic effort was a forward position double twisting and one half somersault with a degree of difficulty of 2.7 which netted 67.5 points to his tabulation.

To get the unrotated, a point total is figured by multiplying the total by the degree of difficulty. The point total is figured on five scores by dropping the highest and the lowest tabulation.)

"I think that's the greatest performance we've ever seen," commented Genders' coach, Bim Stultz. "Yes, siree that's the greatest performance of fancy diving that's ever been done in this pool here."

Perhaps he did as well out in Texas against SMU, but that's the best ever done here. And probably the best that will ever be done here."

The 800 plus fans who witnessed the warrior's feats agreed.

FSU Sinks Gators As Records Topple

By MARK HILLIS
Flambeau Sports Writer

"No question about it," said soaking wet Bim Stultz as he climbed out of the FSU pool where the Seminole mermen had just tossed him following their resounding 64-31 defeat of the University of Florida Gators.

"It was the best night we ever had. There were some very close races. We knew it would be a tough meet and the boys got themselves ready."

Before a crowd of 600 cheering fans the Seminoles doused the Gator squad. Led by junior Paul Thompson, who erased four previous marks from the record books and played a major part in three others, the Seminoles combined their efforts to rewrite 16 previous marks.

Sophomore Pete Davis and All-American senior Buck Hiles each set three individual records and joined in on building new relay standards.

The Florida State mermen copped eight of the scheduled eleven events on their trail to victory. Thirteen Seminoles entered the scoring column with eight of them having a hand in the record-breaking.

Out of the eleven events the tribe established four school records, five FSU pool records, and seven FSU-Florida meet records.

Curt Genders, the tribe's diving sensation and two-time All-American, turned in the top dual meet performance of his college career. From the one-meter board the Sarasota lad dove for a total of 312.7 points in defeating Florida's All-Southeastern Conference star Steve McBride.

Blazing to a 3:36.0 clocking in the opening event, FSU's 400-yard medley team swam the Seminoles to victory and set the pace for the remainder of the night.

Following up was Thompson with meet, pool, and school records in the 220-yard freestyle (2:07.3), and later on he set a meet record in the 440 freestyle with a timing of 4:41.6.

In the 200-yard backstroke Davis swam to his fastest clocking ever with 2:13.2. Hiles set his records in the 200 individual medley and 100 freestyle. In the former Hiles swam to a 2:09.3 clocking for meet and pool records. In the freestyle events he set a meet record of :51.4.

The victory was Florida State's sixth straight win over its bitter rival Florida. The competition between the two schools now stands at 8-2-1 with FSU taking a commanding lead in the series. The tribe's season record now is 5-1.

The Seminoles will face the Gators in Gainesville, March 11.

In preliminary competition, the Florida State freshman team turned in the first victory of the night by defeating the Baby Gators 58-37.

The frosh tore up six previous freshman marks and tied a seventh.

Lee Bransford, a Jacksonville product, led the Baby Seminoles with record-breaking performances in both the 100 and 200-yard events.

Florida State Renews Bitter Gator Rivalry

Seminoles Seek To Avenge Earlier Setback; Fedor, Swain Lead Tribe Into Cage Contest

By BILL VERIGAN
Assistant Sports Editor

Florida State renews its bitterest cage rivalry on Wednesday night when the Seminoles travel to meet the University of Florida's Gators to avenge an early season loss.

In the sixth contest of the season the Gators beat the tribe by a score of 74-67.

At this point in the season Florida State had a 3-3 record. Since that time there have been some changes made, and FSU has put on a burst that has netted them an 11-8 season, mark. The Gators, on the other hand, started the season with a bang and are on the going strong enough to be in second place in the Southeastern Conference race.

The Gators, carrying a 12-9 record into the match, will be led by Jack Merchant.

Others who may start for UofF include Bobby Shiver at the other guard post, sophomore Joe Metzger and Carlos Morrison at forward, and Cliff Luyk at pivot.

Florida State's deadly duo, Dave Fedor and Ray Swain, will be relied upon to supply the Seminoles' scoring punch. Fedor was averaging 18.9 points per game and Swain had 16.5 points before last night's game.

Fedor has grabbed more rebounds than anyone else on the FSU squad. He is currently ranked among the top ten rebounders in the country, and he protected his average by pulling the ball off the backboards 37 times against the Citadel and Georgia.

The series with the University of Florida stands at 6-1 in favor of the Gators at the present time, and the Seminoles will be out to put a dent in this lead.

In the last road trip FSU split two games by defeating the Georgia Bulldogs and losing to the Citadel Cadets.

The Bulldogs had won a previous Gator Bowl Tournament contest with Florida State by the score of 62-56, but the tribe was able to raise the lost somewhat by coming back to whip the Georgia team 77-68 on the losers' own court.

Ray Swain pushed on a total of 37 points to pace his teammates for one of the best performances of his college career. He corrected on a sizzling 78.6 per cent of his shots from the floor and canned five of six free throw tries.

He was followed by Charlie Long who bucketed 19 points and Fedor with 18 notches.

The Citadel game was almost a complete reverse of the game that was played here only twelve days before Saturday night's game.

The Seminoles led much of the first half and retired at halftime with a one-point lead, but the Cadets flashed back to smash a five-game FSU winning streak by triumphing 79-66.

Swain again led the tribe with 24 points. He was followed this time by Tim Edney and Fedor, both of whom had twelve marks.

Last night FSU met Furman in Tully Gymnasium. Previous to the contest Florida State had won three and lost against the Paladins. Before the game Furman had a 15-8 raung for the season.

D-I Grid Finals Set Wed., Badminton Nears Finish

Flag football and badminton competition are both nearing completion on the intramural slate.

The date for the tourney to determine the football champion of the Fraternity League was still in doubt yesterday. A meeting of the various fraternities had been called, however, to determine the final date.

In the Dorm - Independent League, flag football championships will start tomorrow if weather permits. The two top teams in each division will play a double elimination tournament.

The winners of these tournaments will then meet in another double elimination playoff to decide the overall champ.

At the present time there is a tie for first place in the Garnet division between Kellum I and the Aardvarks. Kellum III has clinched third.

BSU is ahead in the Gold division of the Dorm-Independent League, and trailing behind them are the PE Majors in second place and the Wesley Foundation in third position.

The Fraternity badminton singles find four teams in the running for the championship. These include: PDT, DTD, KA, and SC.

LCA, ATO, SAE, and KA all have a chance of winning in the badminton competition.

Kellum I has clinched the number three position in badminton singles; however, first place is still in doubt with the PE Majors contention for the title, and the "400" Club both in bot. The doubles title was won by the PE Majors, and Kellum I came in second.

Dorm-Independent bowling was completed last week with Kellum I taking first place, Newman

Frosh Tryouts Slated Friday

Tryouts for positions on the Florida State freshman baseball team will be held at 4:30 p.m. Friday, according to Phil Hunt, coach of the squad.

All positions will be open on the team, which was beaten only once, 3-2 by the University of Florida Baby Gators, last year.

Netters Prepare For Season Ahead

Paced by four returning lettermen and under the direction of a new coach, the Florida State varsity tennis squad is preparing for the coming season.

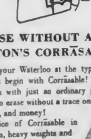
During an intrasquad practice tourney Saturday, Gordy Smith took first place, unseating Rebel Bellamy who placed second.

This week an intrasquad round-robin tournament is being held to determine the doubles pairs, and next week intrasquad challenges for position will pit the evens against the odds immediately above them.

This will determine position for the squad's first game here on March 18 against Georgia.

Returning netters include Bellamy, last year's number one man, Smith and Ed Fasula, juniors who held down the second and third positions last season, and Buddy McClain.

Rounding out the team are Paul Scarpa, a transfer student, Don Loop, Bill Warwick, and Jamie Jamison.



The Seminoles are coached this year by Danny Holcomb, a graduate assistant in the physical Education Department. Holcomb steps into the shoes of John Powless who coached the team to a 16-4 record year.

Debate Team Was Second At Invitational Tournamen

The Florida State University debate team took second place in the Sweepstakes with 41 points at the 12th Annual FSU Invitational Debate Tournament here last weekend.

Howard College was first with 71 points and Georgia Tech third with 40 points.

Twenty-two colleges and universities from six southeastern states participated in the tournament Friday and Saturday. This was the largest tournament ever held on the FSU campus, with 120 students participating, officials said.

The events had two divisions of competition: the senior tournament, in its 12th year, and the junior division, in its second year.

Dr. Gregg Phifer, assistant professor of speech and debate adviser, said the Junior Division was developed to provide more in close contact with junior colleges.

Participants debated the question that has been used in all tournaments this year: "Resolved that the United States should adopt a program of compulsory health insurance for all citizens."

In the senior division, FSU tied with Georgia Tech for first place, with Spring Hill second and Howard and LSU tied for third. In this division Superior Certificates for undefeated teams were given to University of Florida, Georgia Tech and FSU.

SUPERIOR DEBATERS

Betty McIntosh and Mike Odum from FSU were awarded for being superior debaters in the senior division.

St. Petersburg Junior College took first place in the junior division, with McNeese College second and a three-way tie for third between Birmingham - Southern College, Pensacola Junior College and FSU.

For the affirmative in the Junior division St. Petersburg Junior College and FSU were both undefeated, with six wins and no losses.

Superior debaters for FSU in the Junior Division were Linda Dix and Richard Root.

In the after dinner speaking event St. Petersburg placed first, third. Howard College placed with McNeese second and Howard first and third in persuasive speaking, with McNeese second.

IMPROMPTU TALKS

Current events was the topic in the impromptu speaking contests. In the senior division Howard College placed first and second and Ga. Tech came in third. Howard College won in the junior division, with Birmingham Southern second and St. Petersburg third.

Mike Odum, from FSU, received a certificate as a finalist in junior division for impromptu speaking.

This is the second trophy this year by the FSU Debate Team. The first one was for first place in the Spring Hill College Debate Tournament last fall. The debaters have participated in eight tournaments this year and have several more coming up according to Dr. Phifer.

University of Florida, University of Miami and Georgia Tech have participated in the FSU invitational since the first tournament.

Will the Soviet threat come true? Will your grandchildren live under Communism? Forget God? Salute the Soviet flag?

"Never!" you say. But are you sure? How can you oppose Communism? One sure way is to help Radio Free Europe.

The voice is that of Nikita Khrushchev.
The audience is American.
"Your grandchildren will grow up under Communism!" he shouts.
Do you believe that?
Will your grandchildren live in barracks with their hair shaved? Forget God? Salute the Soviet flag? "Never!" you say. But are you sure?
What can you do to oppose Communism?
Help Radio Free Europe.
What does it do?
Every day, to 79 million captive people behind the Iron Curtain, it broadcasts the plain truth . . . religious services . . . folk songs they love . . . the real news of the outside world.

It helps keep these 79 million people from turning to Communism. The Poles, Czechoslovakians, Bulgarians, Rumanians and Hungarians.
It keeps alive their friendship for America.
Broadcasting from 28 transmitters . . . manned by escapees from Communism . . . it reaches over 90% of these people, despite Communist jamming.
Thousands of smuggled letters echo the same plea: "God Bless You! Please keep Radio Free Europe on the air!"
These 79 million people are vital to the cause of freedom.

They help tie up 30 Russian divisions, stationed to prevent uprisings.

They pose a major obstacle to the Russians starting any war.
And they depend on Radio Free Europe. It is their strongest link with the Free World.
But Radio Free Europe needs money to continue this important job . . . to grow . . . to become ever more effective.
It depends on individual American support for its very existence.
How about it? Will you help fight Communism? Secure the future of your children?

Senate Handles Twin Bill Wed.

Lying, Stealing To Stay Under Honor Court Rules

Lying and stealing will remain under Honor Court jurisdiction but will not be included as a part of the proposed Academic Honor System.

Senate approved this amendment to honor system revision bill on a roll call vote of 25-15 with one abstaining.

Final action on the bill is still pending. The revisions will be debated again next week.

Sen. Boyt Elam, arguing against the amendment, stated that, "By regulating academic dishonesty, Honor Court will be more effective than if other areas are thrown in."

"We can't remove the moral taint from lying and stealing by removing them from Honor Court jurisdiction."

Men's Vice President Marion Clark debated to help lying and stealing as Honor Court offenses.

As the senators tried to define what an Honor System is, Clark commented, "I hope the Honor System means something different to each student. We can't define it."

Many of the senators voting against the amendment were intrigued in favor of creating a Supreme Court which would try these cases, leaving lying as the sole Honor Court offense. Others had suggested making lying and stealing judiciary offenses with an optional appeal to Honor Court.

JUDICIARY OVERWORKED

"However," Senator Mygnon Clements stated, "Judiciary is already overworked. I understand they are even meeting on Saturdays now."

Sen. Dick Hume, who opposed the amendment stated that as a judiciary our prime consideration must be academic honesty as 'A' number one. However, this does not mean putting lying and stealing as two and three. They must be considered as is an equal line straight across the top.

Hume asked the senators for due consideration of the Supreme Court idea, "but, above all, let's not ramrod anything through just to get this over with."

ROLL CALL

Senators voting for the amendment to include lying and stealing as Honor Court offenses were Clark, Bedell, Champion, Finley, Macklem, Powers, Rich, Robinson, Bueke, Doomar, Eastridge, Adair, Fremmerer, Kemman, Gate, Richason, Sawyer, Simpson, Sindon, Stokes, Worsham, Baldwin, King.

Those voting "No" were: Ellerstein, Elam, Farnell, Ferlita, Miller, Boyd, Boykin, Cantel, Marler, Talley, Thigpen, Till, Dobson, McMillan, Hume.

Howell abstained.

Another amendment was submitted by the Judiciary Rules committee to change the name Academic Honor System to Academic Honesty but Senate rejected it, leaving the title Academic Honor System.

IN OTHER ACTION

Senator Chet Adair introduced a resolution requesting that some rooms open at night in the classroom buildings to allow students additional places to study. The bill was amended to read "consider the possible steps" instead of "take the necessary action" and was passed unanimously.

The classroom buildings were closed at 11 p.m. last year after "too much unsupervised social activity" was discovered by the administration. Senate agreed that time they would favor opening only a certain portion of the rooms and posting a schedule so that the area would be used by students in general instead of only a few individuals.

CURRICULUM COUNCIL

A Curriculum Evaluation Council will be created by unanimous Senate vote as requested by Student Body President Carl Butler in his State of the Campus address last week. The Council will consist of the Dean of Faculties, Chairman of Faculty Senate Committee on Academic Affairs as non-voting members and 10 students to represent the individual colleges and schools. These students will be elected from the college and school curriculum committees.

Members of these committees will be appointed by the Student Body President from a list of candidates submitted by the Deans of the respective schools. The committee's size will be determined by the dean of that school. It is not to consist of less than five members, including at least one each from the sophomore, junior and senior classes.

ONE YEAR

For the first year the representatives from the College of Arts and Sciences and School of Education will be of junior standing, and the representatives of the remaining schools will be senior standing. From then on, the arrangement will be reversed.

The Council will serve as a means of discussion and expression of student opinions and views concerning the academic courses of study offered at FSU. A report of Council activities will be made available every semester.

'S.P.' Elects First 'Mrs.'

The first Mrs. of the student party was elected Tuesday night at the party's convention.

Mrs. Dorothy Castelic's selection was formally by the married students delegation as "our first success in the political union."

Bruce Hamilton was married student delegation nominated Mrs. Caustic for treasurer of the Student Party. She was opposed by Ed Johnson and Charles Liberis.

But the day students, women's dormitories and Brown's delegations rallied together to her support.

"The day student delegation voting in a unit block, gives its eight votes to the next treasurer and first Mrs. of the student party, Dorothy Castlic," said Dennison Caustlic, the nominee's husband.

Bobby Byrd

Student Party Names Byrd

Whether Bobby Byrd will face opposition for the student body presidency remained in doubt yesterday after Byrd defeated Jim Miller for the Student Party nomination Tuesday night.

Miller had "no comment" when asked if he would run independently against Byrd. The vice president defeated the senator 97-35 at the nominating convention.

The Student Party is the only political party now functioning in campus politics. No other independent candidates have been rumored.

Meanwhile a race for vice president shaped up as Ken Van Assenderp, defeated for the Student Party nomination, announced he will run independently against party nominee Duncan Moore.

Moore, now secretary of welfare, received 77 delegate votes to 54 for Van Assenderp who is chairman of the Lobby Committee.

"I'm very grateful for the extremely strong support that I received in the convention and I am most encouraged by the pledges of support I have received in the past two days," Van Assenderp said.

"I'm confident that with such fine campaign workers we will be successful in our efforts to insure dynamic and forceful student government," he added.

UNOPPOSED

Two candidates for party nomination for major student body offices were nominated without opposition. Sen. Mygnon Champion for women's vice president and Sen. Carl Kuttler for men's vice president were nominated by acclamation.

For the secretary of Senate nomination, Kitty Miller defeated Sen. Jeanie Ferlita, 80-50.

Two court office nominations were filled by acclamation with Stearns for chairman of University Court and Bob Sopher for chairman of Traffic Court.

Following a policy of several years, the party did not nominate a candidate for chairman of Honor Court.

In the race for three positions on the Board of Student Publications, Bill McLemore, Barbara Syfrett and Ray Allen defeated Roger Sherman to win the nominations.

Filing for student body offices begins at 5 p.m. Tuesday. The deadline is March 7 and the election will be March 21.

Incorporation Move Set Into Motion By Senate

Statutory machinery was set in motion by Senate Wednesday for the creation of Student Enterprises, a student government managed corporation.

The bill, one of Student Body President Carl Butler's priority measures, stated the purpose as "to provide services for the Student Body, and promote the cultural, educational, athletic, recreational and general welfare of the FSU Student Body."

Primary purpose of the corporation, however, is planned to be work toward the financing of the swimming pool for the proposed student union by either entering some type of business on campus or by contracting for a loan.

Initial financing of the corporation may be provided by Student Senate through the annual Student Government budget which will come up for approval this Spring.

RELEASE SURPLUS

The bill also provides for the Surplus Funds Commission to release funds to the corporation. For several years surplus funds have been going into a "swimming pool fund" which could not be used for anything other than pool construction without enacting legislation. About $20,000 has been accumulated in this fund.

As a further means of financing, the corporation was given the power to borrow up to $1,000 with the provision that Senate could by a two-thirds vote approve loans of larger amounts.

The prospects for the corporation are unlimited, according to Sen. Mygnon Champion, who studied the incorporation plan prior to its adoption by Senate. The corporation might take acquires a student government managed corporation. over and speed-up construction of the proposed student union which has been delayed because of an unexpected increase in the down payment requirements for a federal loan.

DIRECTORS

The board of directors will consist of the student body president and the men's vice president as ex-officio members; three student members appointed by the president, and three members of Senate appointed by the vice president with the approval of Senate.

The president will serve as chairman of the board and the men's vice president will be vice chairman. Original plans called for the vice president of the student body to be vice chairman but Senate changed this provision to strengthen the post of men's vice president and to provide a distribution of duties.

Chairman Boyt Elam of the Organizations and Finance Committee which studied the bill said this would not necessarily eliminate the vice president as one of the members of the board.

The bill gives the board power to elect additional officers and also power to appoint such advisors to the corporation as it may deem necessary.

The board was also empowered to take the necessary steps for chartering the corporation as well as for entering into contracts and making policies for the operation of the corporation.

Without New Taxes

Expansion At FSU May Be Curtailed

By ROSA NELL WILSON
Flambeau News Editor

Unless the state Legislature votes new taxes, expansion at Florida State University may be sharply curtailed for the next biennium.

The no-new-taxes university budget recommended by the budget commission, although raising faculty salaries, leaves little money for new buildings, library book purchases and research equipment and cuts maintenance funds.

Along with pay increases, faculty members will be asked to teach larger classes, especially in the upper division, President Gordon Blackwell said. The recommended budget allows for no new faculty positions.

The budget commission, made up of the governor and his cabinet, probably did as well as it could without asking for new taxes, the president commented.

Pointing out that they did meet their raising university teachers salaries than for anyone else, he called the recognition of faculty needs the one encouraging thing.

DRASTIC NEED

"We are pleased that the Budget Commission recognized this as the drastic need of the university," Dr. Blackwell said. All other state salaries were limited to six per cent the first year and four per cent the second.

The budget commission's salary recommendation was about 80 per cent of the salary appropriation requested by the Board of Control he said.

Even this will not actually raise salaries as much as press announcements indicated. The president said—the university will get about two-thirds of the amount needed to reach this annual average.

The budget assumed that the faculty would be distributed evenly by rank, 50 per cent full and associate professors, 30 per cent assistant professors and 20 instructors.

FALSE ASSUMPTION

"This is a false assumption which we could not possibly approve," the president commented, especially with no new positions."

In making its proposals the budget commission accept Board of Control projections for enrollment increases for 1961-63, Dr. Blackwell said.

They estimated slightly fewer freshmen and sophomores than this year and only about one-half the suggested increase on the upper levels.

This would mean turning down a great number of qualified students, the president said. We think that if the Legislature doesn't change these estimates, then we must ask for a contingency appropriation."

This would permit additional funds to be obtained if the need can be shown on the basis of actual enrollment increases.

Average faculty salaries by rank recommended by the budget commission were $41,500 for full professors, $8,000 for associates, $7,100 for assistants, and $5,600 for instructors.

MERIT BASIS

"Whatever we get, we will allocate salary increases on a merit basis and endeavor to get as close as we can to these averages by rank," Dr. Blackwell said.

Operating capital outlay recommendations gave only a $22,000 increase over this year for purchase of library books, a cut of $100,000 from the Board of Control request.

This is a crying need in the university, Dr. Blackwell said. "We rank too low in our library purchases."

Development of the nuclear program may be hindered by a cut from $400,000 to $125,000 asked for new equipment.

"It would make it very difficult for us to keep some of our top people in that department," the president said, since they will want to go where good equipment is available.

A University's Needs
Salary, Building Increases Needed

By JOAN ABBOTT
Assistant News Editor

Increased faculty salaries and construction of vital new buildings are imperative if Florida State University is to continue its "climate of excellence."

"The pursuit of excellence or emphasis on quality" is the goal that has been set for the University President Gorden W. Blackwell said.

Salaries for faculty members and new buildings are the top priority needs of the university and are vital to its growth, according to President Blackwell. Both of these are largely financial as are many of our needs." "We're competing for faculty in a national market," he emphasized. "We're competing in the Ivy League, the Big Ten, the Pacific League, as well as with institutions close," he added.

"I believe that many of our faculty members sincerely prefer to be here at FSU, but I think that much longer are they going to stay with a marked difference in salary in comparison with what they could get elsewhere," Dr. Blackwell asserted.

SUNSHINE FINE

"Sunshine and camellias are fine but faculty have family budgets which they must meet," the president added.

"Certain badly needed new buildings" are the second most pressing need. Twelve million dollars worth of construction must take place in the next two years he said.

"With our phenomonal growth the last dozen years construction of new facilities has not been keeping pace," he added. The most pressing need for buildings is dormitories and laboratories, "without which we cannot let the size of our freshman class increase above the size of what it is this year."

"Growth will definitely be slowed down in the next few years until more facilities are provided," he concluded.

GREAT UNIVERSITY

"Emphasis upon quality" has also been enunciated as a part of the goal of making FSU a 'great university'."

President Blackwell described the concept of greatness in two terms that of a great private school such as Harvard and that of a great state university such as the University of Michigan.

"Some factors are common to both, he said. Both need to strive for quality in faculty, students, facilities and equipment, especially in the library. In addition there needs to be a "spirit or atmosphere in the institution which places emphasis upon the intellectual life and upon freedom of the mind and spirit."

But the state university has the added responsibility of "meeting the needs of the state and helping the state develop in a way which will afford maximum opportunity for every citizen to burgeon out the best that's in him," he added.

With the private school it can be the needs of the nation and the world that is its first interest, but although "we share these concerns," the first duty of the state university is to serve the state, he said.

The role of the president in the "pursuit of excellence," Dr. Blackwell defined as first a leadership role in relation to the rest of the administration — the faculty and students in helping them formulate high goals of achievement."

LEGISLATURE

This is internal within the institution, he said. The second concern the people and the legislature. "It's an interpretive role of explaining to the people of the state the ways in which the university can be of tremendous service and what our needs are."

"A great many people of the state do not realize what a great university can mean to a state," he said. "It makes a difference when an institution sends out a couple of thousand well-educated men and women each year to take their place in the life of the community and state," he elaborated.

"In 10 to 20 years they will become the leaders in their community and this is the thing that thrills me when I think of what we are doing in a university," he said.

Further there are the tangible results of faculty research that benefits the state for "much of it is and should be related to the problems of Floridians, whether it be problems of some educational technique in the schools or problems of a local government or community leadership or of Florida fisheries or development of minerals in the state or problems facing homemakers or of public libraries."

NEEDS DETERMINED

The needs of the university are determined in two ways, said Blackwell, the budgetary process and external comparison with other state universities.

The determination of the budget needs involves first, department heads, then the deans, then the top administrative officials and finally the Board of Control.

When the budget reaches the vice president and president, "we have to make the final decisions within the university as to the relative urgency of needs and we are never able to ask for as much budget as department heads and deans feel is necessary," Dr. Blackwell said.

The Board of Control considers the budget and the needs of the university in relation to the overpeople of thousand well-educated all system. Then the legislative commission considers the budget in relation to those of all other governmental agencies.

EXTERNAL COMPARISONS

By comparisons with other state universities, Dr. Blackwell said, library space, total volumes and annual budget may be compared. "We are not up to the library facilities of some other state universities even in the South," the president said. The budget requests this year would allow the library to come up to 92 per cent of the standards recommended by the American Library Association.

Faculty salaries may also be evaluated on the basis of comparison with other similar institutions. Budget requests would bring salaries to the average of 20 comparable institutions.

Senate Can Show Intelligence

Student Senate has finally gotten up off its collective tail and considered something progressive, breaking its long tradition of filibustering. It is now looking into the possibilities of a Student Enterprises Corporation which will enable it to borrow money and engage in profit-making activities.

The bill, given statutory authority by Senate, was introduced by Senator Mygnon Champion, last year's Outstanding Senator. It provides for a Board of Directors which will govern the operation of the corporation. The board will be composed of the president of the student body, the Men's vice-president, three senators appointed by the vice-president of the student body, and three students appointed by the president.

The fact that student senate directly controls the amount of allocations made to the Student Enterprises Corp., will tend to make this a more responsible group. It cannot borrow more than $1,000 without a two-thirds vote of approval of the senate.

Another control over the corporation will be the university administration which presently allocates all money to the senate. The administration would have the final say on the loans, and would have to be informed as to when the corporation would apply for a loan, what the loan is to be used for, and what collateral other than abstract hopes of profit would be offered.

The fear that student government will be dictated by the few on the Board of Directors can be assuaged by the fact that student senate actually controls the purse-strings.

This corporation will be founded solely for the purpose of enabling Student Enterprises to have a way of making money to support some of its large scale projects positively rather than waiting for legislative support—which proves itself slow in coming.

What Happened To Merit?

It is a sad excuse for a candidate for any office to seek that office not on his own merit, or his degree of capability, but on what he and his supporters think of as the failure of another individual or organization.

The tactless truth of the matter is that the office seeker is not interested in bettering the object of his post seeking, but merely hopes to institute a control over the publication or group in question that is utterly favorable to every scheme his party might cook up.

If the students of FSU are willing to vote for any candidate that proposes to dictate editorial policy for this newspaper, or any other campus publication, then each and every student that chooses to exercise his vote for such a purpose no longer will be free to criticize any campus political group that perpetrates such a fraud on the student body, for the voters will have voiced their approval for political control of campus publications.

NOR IT IS far fetched to say that perhaps such control would dictate that the new editorial policies of the Flambeau might call for the exclusion of letters to the editor that were critical of the ambitions of the controlling persons. Budget cutting threats are nothing new. This brazen attempt to stack publications controlling posts is neither new nor smart. It represents a selfish effort to bend the pages of the Flambeau to the level of a clique voice.

Flambeau critics are fond of mouthing the word "cooperation." And the ability to pronounce cooperation is the distinct boundary that separates their ability to understand cooperation. Their connotation is "I want thus and so put before the student body." And to the extent of not flinging mud, the Flambeau has cooperated, even amid threats from assorted individuals that threaten to "go to 'everybody' and blow the top off the Flambeau," for such weighty reasons as having an organizational announcement left unprinted because it came in after deadline.

SUCH HEAVY THINKING is the basis of nomination of occasional candidates. Their sole qualifications are that they know "people," and are severely limited in viewpoint, meaning that such a candidate cannot possibly distinguish between editorial policies, past, present or future.

You students who will be voting are familiar with the major candidates. You will have some idea of who and what you are casting your vote for. But, when you wade into the morass of third string political saw-horses, vote only for those you feel will represent your view. Keep in mind that campus publications are free to a surprising extent. Help keep them that way.

Check the candidates as closely as you can, and help elect men and women who can prove a relatively extensive interest and record in government. Some of your money is spent for campus publications. With a call for a free campus press, or are you going to subsidize politically tilted publications?

Just Wondering

Let's Have A Shorter Break

By DEANNA MORRIS

Just wondering what has been done about rescheduling a semester break for next year. After the inconvenience caused by this year's short break it seems only likely that somebody in authority will take the initiative and do the student body and administration a favor by lengthening the break.

Admittedly, the break comes very shortly after the Christmas vacation, but it is the only major relief in the Spring semester. Not only would it give the registrar's office time to get ready for the incoming hordes of people, to prepare accurate grade sheets, and to straighten out all the registration mess, but it would give the students some sort of chance to prepare for the long semester ahead.

IT WOULD HELP relieve some of that winter-time tension that is about ready to snap with the advent of spring, and it would certainly provide a break in the long hot run into June.

Most universities and colleges manage to have some sort of a spring vacation during the spring semester, but FSU is apparently not among these. After four solid months of studying and only taking off for a short day trip or a quick weekend, the university wonders why there are so many problems in the spring.

Not only do students need a longer semester break, but they need a definite change in registration procedures to enable them to know at least before they begin classes whether they enrolled in 101 or 102.

IT IS UNDERSTOOD that there is some work being done on making effective changes in the length of semester break, the registration method, and method of changing schedules once the student is enrolled.

We have spent many semesters in discussing to pre-register or not. We have nearly worn out the subject of photo ID cards and class admission cards, and as usual, we have come up with a decision that says absolutely nothing and does even less. It may take some time to effect all the necessary changes, but we would urge those responsible to have something done by next semester. This is a subject which can be discussed into oblivion while all the same problems are allowed to exist.

Operation Abolition

From Inside-Out

Revision Is Still Unsettled

By MYGNON CHAMPION

Revision of the Honor System remains an unsettled question, but Student Senate has now supplied the answer to one of the questions raised by the proposed revision.

The proposal, as submitted to Student Senate, discarded lying and stealing from the Honor System. It recommended an Academic Honor System which listed cheating as the only violation of honor.

"What, then, do we do with lying and stealing cases?" was asked by many Student Government officers. It was to this question that Student Senate after lengthy debate found an answer Wednesday.

Cases of lying and stealing were placed under the jurisdiction of Honor Court by Student Senate's action. However, it should be pointed out that Honor Court and the Honor System although related, are separate entities.

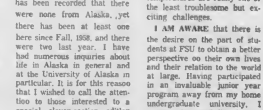
The Honor Court tries violations of the Honor System and, under the proposed revision, will continue to do so. But Honor Court has jurisdiction over a wide variety of other types of cases which are not violations of the Honor System:

(1) It hears appeals from the University Court and Traffic Court;

(2) It decides questions of constitutionality;

(3) It holds impeachment hearings after Student Senate has brought impeachment charges; and

(4) Under the proposed revision, as amended by Student Senate, it tries cases of lying and stealing.



Some senators expressed concern that the Student Body would be confused by this placement of lying and stealing cases under the jurisdiction of Honor Court, they voiced fear that the average student would assume, since lying and stealing cases are tried by Honor Court, that these are violations of the Honor System. It is to explain this difference between Honor Court and the Honor System that this column is written.

Because of this fear of confusion, several alternative suggestions were made for the trial of lying and stealing cases. One suggestion was to give University Court jurisdiction over these cases; another was to create a new court to handle them; a third idea was to remand Honor Court, giving it the title of the Supreme Court, Superior Court or some similar title.

This third suggestion has not been formally introduced as a motion in Student Senate although there appears to be considerable sentiment for such a change. It may well be introduced as a formal amendment at the next session.

The reason given for changing the name of Honor Court is to prevent close mental association of the Honor System with the Honor Court; in other words, to prevent confusion. Even though given a different title, it would continue to have jurisdiction over violations of the Honor System, appeals from lower courts, questions of constitutionality, etc.

The objections voiced to changing the name of Honor Court are two: (1) the title Honor Court is a tradition and (2) the present name of the court lends emphasis to the Honor System and thus has symbolic value.

Alaska Challenges Visitors

TO THE EDITOR:

In recent published statistics on students attending FSU it has been recorded that there were none from Alaska, yet there has been at least one here since Fall, 1958, and there were two last year. I have had numerous inquiries about life in Alaska in general and at the University of Alaska in particular. It is for this reason that I wished to call the attention to those interested to a special eleven-section edition of the newspaper, The Fairbanks Daily News-Miner, which is available at the circulation desk in the General Education Division of the Strozier Library. This special edition gives current information in words and with many pictures on life in its many aspects in this vast country.

There is much of the unexpected in Alaska to challenge the inhabitant or visitor, and the sometimes low winter temperatures are really one of the least troublesome but exciting challenges.

I AM AWARE that there is the desire on the part of students at FSU to obtain a better perspective on their own lives and their relation to the world at large. Having participated in an invaluable junior year program away from my home undergraduate university, I suggest the possibility that interested individuals might consider taking their junior year at the farthest north University of Alaska, a fully accredited school of about 1000 students. The trip can be made reasonably by car, and possibilities for summer employment there would be particularly favorable following the school year.

Coma Doesn't Like Wild Rat's Race

By LESLIE POWELL

Coma sat amid desolation, soaking her tired feet in a large economy-sized iced coffee. About her lay the debris of the Student Party convention . . . battered slogans, lost shoes, misplaced delegates and discarded candidates.

In her hands she clutched numerous lapel cards: Byrd, Miller, Van Assenderp, Moore, Kitty Miller, Jeannie Perlita, Champion, Kuttler, et cetera.

"Hmmm," she mused, "three more badges and I'll have enough for a homemade set of bicycles. Uh oh, what's this," she mumbled as she flipped away a Grover Cleveland campaign button. "With a name like Grover, he'll never get anywhere. Must be one of the Gainesville boys."

"SAY, BUDDY," she yelled at a straggler, "Watch out for the Dortman delegation. They're tough. Got gymnastics people on there, and they can be rough.

"And if you hear a ghostly whistle going 'toot-toot,' get out of the way, kid, it's the old organization steam roller getting under way. Goes to show what organization can do. Them as has gets. It separates the ins from the outs with rare exception.

"Say, what's this unit rule stuff? Seems to me that's leing the cake a little heavily. Especially since delegations seem to be chosen on the basis of such weighty qualifications as whether would-be delegates wear their rat-caps to bed.

"And then there are the candidates whose platforms are based on such things as making the Flambeau represent those views it is deemed to represent . . . and who in no way connected to the topics as integration, government or the university administration.

"WHAT'S CHANGED since editorial decisions pass to one individual to be made? Nothing. An individual system makes the policy.

"As for candidates and boost supporters, I think I would he nice to clarify connotation of the word they use it. Only in the case of candidates bent on a take-over in the student publications, I wonder if the word might not be more correctly applied to them than to 'backers.'

"Personally," Coma was saying, "I always hated to make decisions, but now I'm determined. I'd have run myself," she said, "if I had managed to keep my max factor from running in the heat. Nobody would run for a nominee with a o'clock shadow. However organizations have been known to vote for persons with a o'clock shadow on their men.

"I think I'd have run on a good old Slogan 'WE ARE SINKING DEEP IN SIN, WHERE? ee maybe. "THEY AIN'T NO BAD BOOZE BUTTERS AND BROTHERS. JUST THE SOME IS BETTER'N OTHERS.

"Rats, running is too much trouble, I think I'll just write in Linda Reams for everything."

Can't This Campus Help?

TO THE EDITOR:

I want to tell you how much I agreed with the Flambeau's recent article, "Famine Drives Men to War." It is the terrible truth that starvation can drive men to any extremes. Millions of people all over the world are starving, and, as the Smoke Signals editor quietly put it, "What are American university students doing about it?"

As large as this campus is, imagine what could be done if the students organized in a campaign to rid the world of just a little of the misery!

I wonder how many students saw the picture in this week's Life, of the starving disease-ridden children as they lay dying on the floors of ill-equipped hospitals in the Congo. Did these same students then dash off to a delicious supper? Surely they don't know that only $1.00, sent to the proper place, would give ninety-five children milk for one week.

We can do something! What?

An "Animal "Remembered

The average Florida State student freely uses the term "animal" in a massive generalization which includes all athletes, but more particularly, football players.

Omicron Delta Kappa, the top men's honorary at Florida State University, is playing havoc with the "animal" analogy. This outstanding national leadership fraternity once a year pays homage to a gridder. And they don't seem to consider him an "animal."

Robert Crenshaw was his name. He was a leader, a good student and an athlete simultaneously. He was exceptional because he could combine all of these and blend them together without upsetting any phase of college life.

He was a 185-lb. center on the 1956-57 Seminole grid squad. One of the smallest pivot men in college football, and was co-captain of this squad.

He was president of both his junior and senior classes, a member of Gold Key, ODK, and Alpha Caomcil, and pledge trainer of his fraternity. Crenshaw was also selected for Who's Who in American Universities and Colleges and FSU's Hall of Fame.

"Bob was not the greatest football player that FSU ever had. He was be the greatest fraternity leader, but for overall leadership he was probably the greatest FSU'a ever had," said Bill Cullom, Crenshaw's close personal friend.

A sample of those who knew him best, verified this testimonial. Don Veller, the former football coach who recruited Crenshaw told this story:

"I was recruiting for FSU then and went down to Miami, to see Edenon. At that time, we had just begun playing football and everyone was trying to push off the little boys on us. Pop Smith, their coach, pointed out a little guy. I said 'We can't use him. We play in a tougher league than that.' Pop said, 'Take him and you'll never be sorry.' We weren't."

"He had the biggest heart of anyone," Veller commented, "The first place I saw him was sitting behind me in church. That's the kind of guy he was."

"When he was in flight training at Bainbridge, Ga., he used to come down to the Wesley Foundation for church," stated his minister, Rev. Austin Halliday of the Methodist student house. "During his student years, he was head usher at the Foundation."

"Bob, more than any other student, has made a more profound impression upon the total life of the University community," his minister continued.

Thousands of students who use the term "animal" pass through FSU unnoticed, but a football player is singled out to be remembered by scholarship funds that stand for the same high qualities that Bob Crenshaw possessed.

Cagers Tackle UM, Tampa; Gators Nip FSU, 75-74

By MARK HILLIS
Flambeau Sports Writer

The Florida State Seminoles will journey to Tampa and Miami this weekend to meet these teams who will be bent on revenging earlier season losses to the tribe.

After losing their season opener 89-60 to the tribe the Spaniards will be hot on the trail of the Seminoles in their final home appearance. Coach Bob Lavery's Spartans now sport a 10-15 record and figure to be much tougher.

Dave Fedor and Ray Swain who combined their efforts in the first meeting of Tampa and FSU for 38 points will be the Tallahassee team's big guns.

At Miami, the Seminoles figure to be in a fast and furious battle. On their home court the Hurricanes pose as one of the toughest teams in the Southland. Some coaches believe this is partly the cause of Miami's questionable officiating.

In an earlier game this season top-ten ranked Louisville was quite disturbed at their loss to Miami. Louisville's coach had this comment to make: "Miami could beat the New York Knickerbockers 50 out of 50 times in Miami."

Seminole hopes depend on FSU's fiery little guard, Jack Davis. When Miami met FSU in Tallahassee, Davis held the Hurricane's mark - heralded Dick Hickox to only three points.

The Hurricane will also be counting on guard Julie Cohen, 7-1 center Mike McCoy, and forward Ron Godfrey for some point producing.

The Seminoles own a 17-9 edge in their Tampa rivalry but trail, 13-9, in their Miami series.

FLA. BESTS FSU

Florida State University with 23 seconds left to go in the game and possession of the ball failed to get off a shot and as a result dropped a 75-74 decision to the University of Florida Wednesday night.

Big Dave Fedor with 42 seconds left on the clock stuffed in a shot giving the Seminoles a 76-73 margin. Seconds later Lou Merchant, Gator guard, swished a 15-footer which proved to be the difference of the game.

Dave Fedor wound up high point man for the Seminoles with 24 points. Swain with 17 and Long with 13 were the only other two Seminoles in double-figures. Fedor also came off the boards with 15 rebounds, high in this department for both teams.

Baseball Nine Preps For March Opener

Florida State's talented baseball team under the direction of Coach Danny Litwhiler is currently working out on the FSU baseball field every day in preparation of its first game against Georgia at Tallahassee on March 15.

Nine out of eighteen lettermen will be back to make for a veteran squad. Leading returnees include Frank Davis, Florida State's winningest pitcher, who finished last season with an 8-3 record. This won-loss mark was identical to his performance of two years ago. The smooth control artist also struck out the most men, 67, while walking the fewest, 12.

Other returning burlers are Jim Daniel, whose earned run average was second to that of Davis, Ray McShane, Jack Ross, and Rick Madison.

Sophomore moundsmen slated to see duty include John Tucker of Aruba, Netherlands Antilles and Frank Echols.

Counted among the losses from last season are Bob Clem, star Seminole outfielder and Ray Bazsell, first-string second baseman. Sophomore catchers will probably have to fill the vacancies left by Bill Westendick and Hank Ross.

Jack Dull, second-sacker, Jimmy White, outfielder, and first basemen Doug Walker and Bob Madison should figure prominently on this season's roster. All four of these men were noted for their hitting abilities last year.

FSU's Odeneal Teaches Volleyball To Japanese

Florida State's golf coach, Bill Odeneal, recently made a trip to Hawaii and Japan to teach Air Force personnel the techniques and methods on instructing volleyball.

Odeneal was the coach of FSU's NCAA volleyball championship teams for several years until the sport was taken out of the Intercollegiate Athletic Department. He is also the present chairman of the National Public Relations Committee of the United States Volleyball Association and was chosen national leader in volleyball for three years.

The coach happily reported that volleyball was one of the biggest sports in Hawaii and Japan, being second only to baseball. Many spectators turn out for the games, and while there Odeneal took part in a match with one of the best teams in Japan. The team that he was on was composed of instructors and beat the Japanese squad.

He also spoke with college and YMCA officials on advancing the sport and initiating international competition.

In Hawaii he spent much of his time in the activities that lure many tourists to the islands. He took in the Hula Bowl game which was played there, swam, and played golf.

Odeneal is widely known for his acticity in the field of volleyball. He has written articles for magazines and the World Book Encyclopedia.

FSU Enters AAU Meet

The Florida State swimming team battles to improve its 5-1 dual meet record against Georgia and Georgia Tech and then moves on to enter the Georgia AAU meet.

The Seminoles, who met Georgia Tech last night, were expecting a tough battle from the Engineers, who sported a 9-2 record before the contest.

Tonight FSU takes on another Southeastern Conference opponent, the Georgia Bulldogs. In an early season match the Seminoles smashed the Bulldogs to the sound of 66-28.

Tomorrow the tribe tackles a bunch of tough competition when they enter the Georgia AAU.

Buck Hiles, Curt Genders, Paul Thompson and Pete Davis are expected to lead the Seminole squad into the meets. In the last meet against Florida, Hiles, Thompson and Davis combined to break ten records and were also instrumental in smashing the old relay marks.

Genders, an All-American diver, also put on a brilliant exhibition by diving his way to 312.7 points against the Gators.

FSU'S freshman team, carrying a 2-0 slate, will also take part in the meets by facing Georgia and Georgia Tech's frosh and entering the AAU as an individual entry.

Frosh Meeting Slated Today

A meeting of candidates interested in trying out for Florida State's freshman baseball team will be held in rooms 206-208 in Tulley Gym today.

Pfil Hunt, coach of the team, said that the time of tryouts for the team will be announced at the meeting.

Several sophomores have chances of getting the nod for starting positions. These include the following: Gary Elliott, Buck Hutchinson, Buddy Teagle, Roger Zimmerman and Dwight Smith.

Don Hughes, leading freshman pitcher last year, signed a pro contract to give the Seminoles another hoss in talent.

Florida State's two football quarterbacks, Ed Feely and Ed Trancygier, should also put in diamond appearances this season. Feely is to play second and Trancygier will probably be a pitcher.

Litwhiler is assisted by Don Fauls and Pfil Hunt in handling the team. Fauls is Florida State's trainer who doubles as a pitching coach. Frank Davis has attributed much of his success to the coaching he has received under the tutelage of Fauls.

Hunt is a graduate student, and he will instruct the freshman baseball team this year as well as helping Litwhiler with the varsity practices.

FSU Competes In Jaycee Meet

Thinclads Jaunt To Memphis

Florida State's young track team travels to the Memphis Jaycee Indoor Relays Saturday.

This is the second early-season prestige meet that the Seminoles have taken part in. FSU finished sixth in their initial outing at the Coliseum Relays in Montgomery, Ala., earlier this month. The University of Alabama copped the title in that meet.

The Crimson Tide will also be in strong contention for the Memphis championship but the Alabamans will have to best Memphis State, Georgia, Clemson, and FSU, among others if they are to win the first annual meet.

Coach Mike Long will enter a 17-man squad against the talented field. Recent warm weather in Tallahassee has aided the squad's workouts and the Seminoles should be in shape for their final indoor test of the season.

Undefeated in dual meet competition last season, the Seminoles lost four of their top point-getters. Ron Harrison, Tom Kennedy, Ted Keen, and Claude Guzzard, standouts of the 1960 aggregation, have all graduated.

Back from that squad are four Florida State record holders. They are Steve Long, son of the FSU coach who holds the school's high jump mark at 6-5¾; senior Kent Miles in the two-mile run with a 9:31.4 mark; junior Bill Welch in the 120-yard high hurdles with a 14.9 record; and team captain Don Ostergaard, the shotput leader with a 53-7¼ mark.

Also competing in the Memphis meet will be the two boys who scored points in the Montgomery outing. Bill Davis and Steve Long both collected second places in the meet.

Probable FSU entries are: 60 dash—Craig Johnson, Atlanta; Mike Hamilton, Orlando. 70 low hurdles—Bill Welch, Jacksonville; Terry Long, Tallahassee. 70 high hurdles—Welch and Dave Ellis, Orlando. 880 run — Bill Davis, Miami. Two-mile run — Kent Mills, Pontiac, Mich. 20-lap relay (8/6 yards each)—Quentin Till, Coral Gables; Jack Brocksmith, Tallahassee; Dan Roberts, Orlando, and Davis. 12-lap relay (480 yards each) — Ellis; Tom Houston, Orlando; Davis, and Till. 8-lap relay (320 yards each) — Johnson; Keith Crawford, Jacksonville; Hamilton, and Till.

Pole vault—Ed Hays, Thomasville, Ga. Shot put—Don Ostergaard, Fort Myers. High jump—Steve Long; Tallahassee; George Smith, Miami. Broad jump — Crawford and Herb Craft, Atlanta.

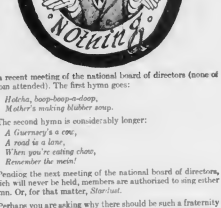
"THE SLOW RUSH"



Illustrated below is the membership pin of a brand-new national fraternity called Sigma Phi Nothing. To join Sigma Phi Nothing and get this hideous membership pin absolutely free, simply take a pair of scissors and cut out the illustration and paste it to your dickey.

Let me hasten to state that I do not recommend your joining Sigma Phi Nothing. The only thing I recommend in this column is Marlboro cigarettes, as any honest man would who likes a filtered cigarette with an unfiltered taste, who yearns to settle back and enjoy a full-flavored smoke, whose heart is quickened by a choice of soft pack or flip-top box and who gets paid every week for writing this column.

It is difficult to think of any reason why you should join Sigma Phi Nothing. Some people, of course, are joiners by nature; if you are one such I must tell you there are any number of better organizations than Sigma Phi Nothing for you to join—the Mafia, for example.

But if you should join Sigma Phi Nothing, let me give you several warnings. First off, it is the only fraternity that admits girls. Second, there is no pledge period; each new member immediately goes active. Perhaps "inactive" is a more accurate term; there are no meetings, no drives, no campaigns, no sports, no games, no dues, no grip, and no house.

The only thing Sigma Phi Nothing has that other fraternities have is a fraternity hymn. In fact, two hymns were submitted to a recent meeting of the national board of directors (none of whom attended). The first hymn goes:

Hakcha, hoop-hoop-a-doop,
Mother's cooking fodder soup.

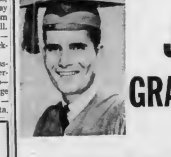
The second hymn is considerably longer:

A Guernsey's a cow,
A road is a lane,
When you're eating chow,
Remember the main!

Pending the next meeting of the national board of directors, which will never be held, members are authorised to sing either hymn. Or, for that matter, Marshuf.

Perhaps you are asking why there should be such a fraternity as Sigma Phi Nothing. I will give you an answer—an answer with which you cannot possibly disagree: Sigma Phi Nothing fills a well-needed gap.

Are you suffering from mental health? Is logic distorting your thinking? Is ambition encroaching on your native sloth? Are your long-cherished misapprehensions retreating before a sea of facts? In short, has education caught up with you?



If so, congratulations. But tell the truth—wouldn't you like to make an occasional visit back to the good old days when you were not so wise and composed and industrious—when you were, in fact, nuttier than a fruitcake?

If you pine for those old familiar miasms, those dear, dead vapors, join Sigma Phi Nothing and renew, for a fleeting moment, your acquaintance with futility. We promise nothing, and, by George, we deliver it!

A Lonely Man Guards De Creeft Exhibition

By MARY ELLEN HARRIS

A lonely man on horseback stands guard over a collection of motionless figures in various positions. The room is filled with silence, shadows, and the muted glow of fluorescent lights.

The lonely man on horseback is actually "Le Picador," the collection of figures are works by Jose de Creeft; and the room is the University Art Gallery.

This retrospective exhibition surveying the work of de Creeft, internationally - known American sculptor, will opeo to the public at 7:30 Monday night and continue through March 19.

The 20 works displayed were chosen from the artists's entire body of work by Robert II. Luckspecial representative of The American Federatioo of Arts. The works were contributed by museums, private collectors, the artist himself and his gallery.

Under a grant from the Ford Foundation and organized by The American Federation of Arts, this retrospective represents part of the Foundation's program in the humanities and the arts devoted to increasing the opportunities of the public to view the work of established artists.

The works on display trace the artist s development. Among the earlier works are "Le Picedor," 1925, and "Standing Figure," 1949. Later works include "Maturity," 1950; "Ilhiza," 1955; and "Niobe," 1958.

The sculptor has been one of the pioneers of twentieth century sculpture and has worked in a variety of materials such as wood, stone, marble, beaten and chiseled leads, and stoves pipes.

De Creeft was born in Madrid in 1884. In 1909 he went to Paris and was advised by the master Rodin.

In 1929 de Creeft came to New York, where he exhibited the controversial "Picador." This work, made of old pipes and kerosene cans, is a forerunner of the art of the found-object. In this country, he continued to work to traditional mediums and to experiment with new ones such as lead and other metals.

Plans Being Made For Family Weekend

Definite plans are now being made in preparation for Florida State University's Family Weekend, May 5-7.

Various activities are already scheduled for the annual weekend, which is designed for parents of FSU students to help them become better ocquainted with the University.

As the first main activity of the weekend, the University Singers will present a concert in Westcott May 5.

A picnic at the Reservation is plamed for noon of the following day, after which entertainment, still being planned, will complete the afternoon.

The traditional highlight of the weekend will be Circus Night, May 6. The usual worries about unpredictable Tallahassee weather have been eliminated, as the Circus will perform in a tent, secured from Barnum and Bailey Circus, Sarasota.

Special arrangements are being made for parents to attend classes with their sons and daughters May 5.

Efforts are being made to mail letters, concerning Family Weekend to parents before Easter, so students may discuss and make plans with their family during the holiday.

The University Police Office has requested that students and faculty members who operate cars on campus report their new license tag numbers.

Rise Stevens Will Perform

Tickets to performances of Metropolitan Opera star Rise Stevens, who will appear in Westcott Auditorium next Thursday and Friday nights, are now available from Tallahassee Junior Woman's Club members.

Tickets may be obtained either from Mrs. Gloria Conrad in 102 Psychology or Mrs. Helen Rebell at the University Bookstore. They are priced at $2 and $3, according to desirability of seating.

Internationally known, Rise Stevens has achieved television, film and record fame, in addition to her accomplishments to the field of opera. Her versatility is reflected in her ability to sing a classical aria or a semi-popular song with equal success.

Proceeds from the performances will be devoted to the charity project of the Tallahassee Junior Woman's Club. The project provides dental care, shoes and clothing for needy children in Leon County.

In past years, the Junior Woman's Club has produced a spring fashion show to raise funds. The tradition is being continued by incorporating the fashion show into next week's evening performances.

Barbarians and the Geisha starring John Wayne as Townsend Harris, the first western diplomat to enter Japan will be the campus movie tonight and tomorrow night at 7:30 in Westcott Auditorium.

At first Townsend is met with hostility by a people who want to remain isolated. A geisha girl portrayed by Eiko Ando helps Townshend to find a way in the hearts of the Japanese people.

Fox To Give First Lecture

The first lecture in the series, Perspectives on Religion, will be given tonight at 7:30 in the Library Lecture Hall.

Dr. Sidney Fox will start off the series with a talk on "The Evolutionary Beliefs."

Dr. Fox is a professor in the Biological Sciences Dept. and is head of the Oceanographic Institute. He has been doing basic research for several years on proteins, the "building block" of life.

About seven years ago Dr. Fox first successfully synthesized a substance that looks and behaves like protein, and has been concentrating much of his work now on an analysis of the completeness of his discovery.

His lectures on the evolutionary beliefs will explain how organisms developed into the complicated forms existing today.

There will be four more lectures in the series, each Friday night. After the last one March 24, all the speakers will be present to answer any questions from the audience.

Faculty Notes

Dr. John A. Griffin, director of University Relations, is represented at FSU at the first southern conference on higher adult education meeting in Gatlinburg, N.C.

The meeting, which began Feb. 22 and concludes today, studied the role of colleges in providing continuing education for adults in the South after they have completed formal schooling.

Speakers from fields of education, economics, sociology and the press discussed the social changes affecting educational and occupational needs of Southern citizens.

SCUBA Diving Students Take To The Wate

All Are Invited Beginning March 8

By TONI DI CARLO
Flambeau Staff Writer

Florida State University SCUBA diving students enrolled in the Diving Club safety and proficiency course will take to the water after one or two introductory lectures.

Beginning March 8, five certified instructors will teach interested students how to safely operate SCUBA (self-contained underwater breathing apparatus) equipment, and give them supervised practical experience in the water with oxygen tanks.

Students who own their own equipment are especially invited to attend the lessons, and a limited amount of tanks are available for a rental fee of $10.

FEES USED FOR EQUIPMENT

The $2 course fee for each person is used to purchase equipment in order to make the diving course available to more students. The charge includes a diving handbook, but compressed air costs extra.

The FSU Underwater Safety Council, a newly organized group with representatives from the administration, student government and diving club, awards certificates to those who successfully complete the course.

TO AVOID ACCIDENTS

The course's purpose is to eliminate future accidents like those last Spring, which resulted in the deaths of several FSU students.

The swimming pool in Montgomery (Women's) Gym will serve as the site of the first few lessons. Then the group moves outside to areas more suitable for diving.

"Unfortunately," said Al Schwartz, club president and one of the instructors, "we will be unable to use Wakulla Springs, which is a perfect diving area. The new management of the Springs had prohibited SCUBA diving and will make no exceptions," said Schwartz.

NEEDS CLEAR WATER

A teaching site, explained Schwartz, needs clear water to enable instructors to see their students at all times and areas in both shallow and deep water.

"The lack of sandier area as suitable as Wakulla will cause a decrease in the student-instructor ratio as an obvious safety measure," Schwartz went on.

Joe Dabbs, Carol "Poke" Runyon, Don Martin, Al Herbert and Schwartz will instruct the classes. All five are students at FSU and are graduates of various diving schools.

Dabbs was certified by the Air Force. Runyon at the Key West Naval Underwater Swimming School, and Schwartz by the Club Aquine Scos Marin with the Oceanographic Institute.

"CAVE DIVERS"

Several of the instructors are "extremely well-known cave divers," Schwartz stated, and one of the lectures will be devoted exclusively to the special hazards of this popular form of sport.

Most drownings involving FSU divers were instances in which they became lost in underwater caves and wandered around until their air ran out.

"Apparently, the danger involved in diving into these caves is one of the factors which makes it so popular," Schwartz continued. "It attracts many inexperienced divers who get themselves into serious trouble."

DIVING TERMS

Because the sport has gained in popularity so rapidly, especially in Florida where everyone is near some body of water, some of the terms have become confused through common usage.

Schwartz, clarifying some of these expressions, explained that, although most people refer to any kind of underwater diving as "skindiving," this term is used by the experts only in connection with divers who don't use SCUBAs.

These swimmers use facemasks to aid underwater visibility and often use "snorkels," short breathing tubes which are effective only while the diver swims on the surface. The main advantage of a "snorkel" is that it enables the wearer to breathe while looking down into the water.

"FREE DIVING"

"Free diving," is another term for SCUBA diving, since the oxygen tank leaves the diver free to swim and dive at will.

"Hard hat" diving is a form used almost exclusively by professionals and is often called "deep sea diving" by laymen. "Hard hat" refers to the hard metal helmet with connecting air hose used by the divers. The five instructors have been invited to the Naval Station in Panama City to gain some experience in this phase of their sport.

A HELPING HAND . . . and a coaxing look were given by instructor "Poke" Runyon to beginning diver Starr Nicholas during one of diving clubs recent meetings.

Another commonly misused term is "wet suit." Except for suits, tight-fitting rubber suits worn by divers to protect them from the cold, are divided into two categories: dry suits and wet suits. Dry suits, as the name implies, keep the wearer dry by means of water-tight ankles and sleeves.

Wet suits, on the other hand, operate on a more complicated principle, but are more practical. These suits are tight, but allow just loose enough to allow a little water to filter into the diver's skin. The suit is, however, tight enough to keep it from circulating; the water is warmed by the diver's body heat and serves as further insulation

EXPOSURE SUITS FOR STUDENTS

Schwartz suggested that students taking the course wear exposure suits, but added that he won't be completely necessary because the weather will be warm. Instructors have to wear suits since they are in the water constantly.

All five instructors are members of the sheriff's rescue and recovery squad. As Schwartz expressed it, "unfortunately, we haven't had any rescues yet, only recoveries, and they are not very pleasant."

International Club
Foreign Students Given Recognition

Two foreign students were recognized for their outstanding scholastic achievement at the International Club meeting Wednesday night by Dean of Students R. R. Oglesby. Two others were honored for their work in the club.

Ifiet Hatice Dinc, a graduate student in psychology from Turkey, took 14 hours last semester and made a 3.64. Phung-lieu Doan, an undergraduate student in physics from Viet Nam, made a 3.8, studying 16 hours.

The two students recognized for their work in the club were Firoza Ahmed, president of the club, who is from Pakistan, and "Roger" Cheng, from China. All four were awarded a picture folio of campus scenes and copies of recognition letters were sent to their ambassadors in Washington, D. C.

Following the presentation of awards, Miss Ahmed announced three persons who have been selected to fulfill vacant offices in the executive council of the club and members of a new committee, American Friends of Foreign Students.

NEW OFFICERS

The new officers are Pirom Poolsawasdi from Thailand, vice-president; Daya S. Natani, India, social chairman; and Santanu K. Ghose, India, treasurer.

The American Friends of Foreign Students Committee comprises Tallahassee men and an FSU faculty member. The committee will promote international relations in the area. Members are Mrs. John Ausley, Mrs. Phil Maxwell, Mrs. Kay Nunex, Mrs. George Lennen, and Dr. Hans Plendl.

Serving for the reception were Miss Edith McCollum, Mrs. Werner Baum, and Mrs. R. R. Oglesby. Helping with refreshments were Deanna Morris, Maryann Milmore, Ramona Dee Sinon, and Leslie Lowel.

Entertainment consisted of a Thailand quartet, an Indian trio and an American duet.

Publications Applications

Applications for editor and business manager of four student publications for next year are now available at the main office in Longmire Bldg.

The forms must be turned in to Longmire office by March, according to Nancy Henderson, chairman of the Board of Publications.

The editor of the Flambeau, Tally-Ho, Smoke Signals and the Legend, and a business manager for publications will be elected by the board following interviews March 8.

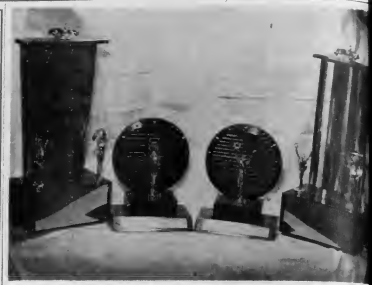
Requirements are a 2.5 overall grade average and a year's experience on the publication applied for.

Killian Gives Last Lecture

Dr. Lewis Killian, the third professor presented by Mortar Board in its series of four Last Lectures, will speak on "Science, Scientism and Human Values," next Thursday at 8 p.m. in Opperman.

Killian, a sociologist who has specialized in social psychology, explained that his lecture would be concerned with pointing out the limitations of science as an instrument for providing values and choices between values, whatever merits it might have as an intellectual tool.

"A great many people are making a religion of science," Killian remarked.



Killian is noted for his work in collective behavior, having coauthored a text on the subject. His work in race relations and human reactions to disaster has furnished material for several articles published in sociological journals.

Killian served as coordinator of research for the state attorney general's study of reaction to the 1954 desegregation decision. He has also participated in a disaster study carried out by the Research Council of the National Academy of Sciences.

Ticket sales begin Monday at Westcott Ticket Office for Assignment in Judea, premiere performance by the University Theatre of a play by Patrick Welch.

The play will run Wednesday through Saturday and the following Monday and Tuesday in Conradi Theatre.

PI KAPPA ALPHA . . . Go Kart trophies will be awarded to the winning sorority-fraternity group at the dance Saturday night.

Pikes Plan Free Go-Kart Race For Saturday Outing

By TONI DI CARLO
Flambeau Staff Writer

"Off to the races!"

This has been the cry of the Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity as they prepare for the second annual PiKA Go-Kart race to be held tomorrow at 2 p.m. on the Tully Gym parking lot.

No admission will be charged. "This event is not a profit-making project but rather a campus-wide activity designed solely for entertainment," said Ren Hazelton, chairman of the race.

"In fact, any proceeds from entry fees will be given to Campus Chest." he said.

CO-SPONSORED

The race and dance following the race are co-sponsored by Zeta Tau Alpha sorority.

The celebration dance will be held at 8 p.m. in the Suwannee Room. Admission of $.50 per couple will be charged in order to pay the B-Bells who will appear in person.

Each "kart" will be driven by a fraternity member representing a fraternity-sorority team. Moral support will be supplied by the girls.

"All of the cars will be identical in size, weight and horsepower, so the most important factors in the outcome will be the skill of the individual drivers and the moral support given them by the sororities," commented Hazelton

15 TO 20 MPH

Averaging between 15 and 20 miles per hour, 14 karts will careen around the tenth of a mile course before an expected audience of 1,000.

Seven heats of 10 laps each will be run during the elimination process before the feature heat which ("will be 25 laps (2.5 miles) if the gas holds out," Hazelton said hopefully. "The tank only holds about a quart of gas."

The course will be arranged like a miniature sports car track, surrounded by hay to protect drivers and spectators. After the lead car pulls into the clear, giving the race a moving start, official flagmen will wave the speeding mites on.

PIKE PIT MEN

Pit men and staging crews will be supplied by Pikes who have already been selected and are undergoing training.

In addition to the equality of the cars, which are being imported from Clearwater, another improvement over last year's event is the addition of a public address system to keep the audience posted.

Go-Karts, originally the innovation of imaginative American toy manufacturers, have grown in popularity in the past five years until there is now a string of Kart Clubs stretched across the nation's cities with an especially heavy concentration on the West Coast. Even Tallahassee has a Go-Kart Club.

SOME HAVE COURSES

These clubs sometimes have courses of their own but often operate in conjunction with drag strip owners as fillers between slick car races.

Teams and drivers will be: Delta Delta Delta-Sigma Chi, Ken Weatherly; Alpha Gamma Delta-Phi Delta Theta, Tom Fisher; Mu-Kappa Alpha, Quinton Pa... Sigma Kappa-Phi Kappa Tau, Stewart; Gamma Phi Be... Epsilon Phi-Marc Julius.

Also entered are Kappa Del... Theta Chi, Jack Smith; ... Omicron Pi-Kappa Sigma Ni... ner; Pi Beta Phi-Sigma N... ter Stephens; Sigma Sigma Sig... Pi Kappa Phi, Pat Canley... Omega-Sigma Alpha Epsilon... Smith; Alpha Chi Omega-... Phi Epsilon, Ed Miller; Alpha... Delta-Lambda Chi Alpha, ... Cannon; Kappa Kappa Gam... Delta Tau Delta, Steve Heinz.

Corrections Meet Is Held Here

The Sixth Southern Conference on Corrections will be sponsored by the School of Social Welfare at Florida State University Thursday and Friday.

Among the speakers who will participate in the conference are Philip G. Green, director of the Division of Juvenile Delinquency Service, U. S. Children's Bureau; Carroll L. Minor, director of the Virginia Division of Youth Services; and A. Frank Lee, commissioner of corrections, Alabama.

Thirteen different topics concerning personnel in corrections will be discussed during the two-day conference. Subjects of discussions range from "What Do Prisons Do, Anyway?" to "Capital Punishment in the South."

Dr. Vernon Fox, chairman of the criminology and corrections program, is in charge of the conference. Following registration, the group will be welcomed by FSU President Gordon W. Blackwell.

THURSDAY TOPICS

Topics discussed Thursday morning and their speakers are: "Training and Supervision in Probation and Parole," Lloyd Hendricks, Chief U.S. Probation Officer; "The Social Structure Within the Correctional Institution," Dr. Peter G. Garabedian, University of Arizona, and "The Total Correctional Process," William R. McCraw, superintendent, Southampton Farms, Virginia.

Following a luncheon in the Suwannee Room Mrs. Edwina Mitchell, warden, Alabama Prison for Women, will discuss "Special Problems in Prisons for Women." Afternoon topics in the library are "Crime, Delinquency, and the "Psychopath" by Dr. Michael Gilbert, psychiatrist, Miami; and a panel on "Shifting Approaches in the Southern Road Prison."

Green's talk on "Juvenile Delinquency in the South and in the Nation," will follow one on "Juvenile Delinquency in America and Other Cultures," at 8 p.m., in the University School Auditorium.

Speakers for the latter are Mrs. Rebecca Birch Stirling, anthropologist, Sarasota, and Gene M. Stirling, Anthropology Dept., Stanford University.

FRIDAY SCHEDULE

A breakfast at 7:30 a.m. in the Trophy Room will start Friday's session with Prof. William James of the University of Tennessee speaking on "Survey and Recommendations on the Penal System of Tennessee."

Other speakers for the day will give their talks at the Library. These include, Minor, on "Supervision of Juvenile Probationers and Parolees"; Herschel Saucier, juvenile delinquency consultant, Mississippi Dept. of Public Welfare, "Social Agencies and the Courts—Coordinated or Disjointed"; Dr. Sheldon Peizer, supervising clinical psychologist, District of Columbia Youth Center, "What Do Prisons Do, Anyway?"

Also, A. Frank Lee, commissioner of corrections, State of Alabama, "Rebuilding a Correctional Program in the South"; Dr. James Melvin Reinhardt, University of Nebraska, "The Sentimental Killer", and Dean Donal E. J. MacNamara, New York Institute of Criminology, and president of the American Society of Criminology, "Capital Punishment in the South—Quo Vadis?"

Expansion . . .

available for salaries on such projects, but the university must provide facilities.

The commission also turned down a requested $50,000 for a computer for the new computer center in the Math-Meteorology Bldg., although a $247,000 private grant is available for operation of the equipment.

Maintenance funds were cut at a time when a new building, Math-Meteorology, will be opening with high utility costs.

The commission made no recommendation for new buildings, but left about $28,000,000 for the Legislature to appropriate for construction.

Since all requests total more than $100,000,000 and FSU alone asked for more than $11,000,000, proposed buildings may be delayed several years.

NEW DORMS

The Board of Control rated two new dorms at the top of its building priority list, but the scarcity of funds may change the rating.

"I see no reason for building more dorms for more students if we can not offer them a high quality education," Dr. Blackwell declared.

Legislative subcommittees will visit the campus March 2 to discuss needs with the administration.

"I'm not pessimistic. I think that the Legislature will recognize these needs and others throughout the state," the president concluded.

Mademoiselle magazine is searching for talented young artists and authors among women undergraduates.

Through the annual college fiction and art contests, talent is discovered and rewarded by publication in a national magazine and by a $500 prize.

Interested women students should contact the Feature Dept. of the Flambeau immediately for further information. All entries must be postmarked by midnight March 1, to be eligible for consideration.

Tarpon Show Ducats Sold

Tickets are still available at the Westcott Ticket Office for the Tarpon Club aquatic show, "Spotlight on the News".

Performances began Wednesday night and will run through Saturday. The show begins at 8:15 nightly in Montgomery Gym.

Tickets are $.50 for students with activity books, (No. 5 coupon) and $1.00 for non-students. Tickets may be purchased at the door if any seats are left.

An acquatic show is presented annually by the Tarpons, the women's synchronized swimming club.

This year's show, "Spotlight on the News" under the direction of Miss Glynise Smith of the Physical Education Dept., features scenes from the pages of the daily newspapers, carried out in floating water patterns, water ballet, and synchronized swimming.

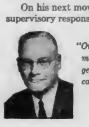
"GIVE A MAN A TOUGH JOB AND A CHANCE TO GO SOMEWHERE ...AND HE'LL BREAK HIS NECK TO DO IT"

In 1958 when Bill Ebben was only a few months away from his engineering degree at the University of Detroit, he was in touch with 15 prospective employers.

He chose the Michigan Bell Telephone Company because: "This company offered the kind of engineering management opportunity I wanted—and they weren't kidding."

One of Bill's first assignments was a survey of Michigan Bell's big Central District to find out how long available building space could accommodate the switching equipment required by rapid telephone growth. "I wasn't given any instruction," Bill says, "I was just told to do the job."



So Bill did it. His report became the guide for planning and budgeting future construction.

On his next move, Bill proved he could handle supervisory responsibility. He was sent to head up a group of seven engineers to design a new long distance switching center for Saginaw, Michigan —a $4,000,000 engineering project.

Today, Bill is on the staff of Michigan Bell's Program Engineer. He's working on a system for mechanized control of telephone construction costs.

How does Bill feel about his job? "Give a man a tough job and a chance to go somewhere—and he'll break his neck to do it. Of course, I don't think I'm going to be running the business next year—but I'm getting every opportunity to hit the top. You don't worry about opportunity here—you worry about whether you're as big as the job."

If you're a man like Bill Ebben, a man who can size up a job, figure out what needs to be done, and then do it—then you should get in touch with one of the Bell Companies. Visit your Placement Office for literature and additional information.

"Our number one aim is to have in all management jobs the most vital, intelligent, positive and imaginative men we can possibly find."

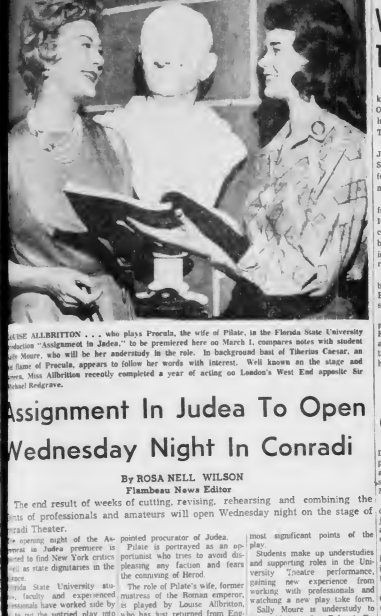
Assignment In Judea To Open Wednesday Night In Conradi



By ROSA NELL WILSON
Flambeau News Editor

The end result of weeks of cutting, revising, rehearsing and combining the efforts of professionals and amateurs will open Wednesday night on the stage of Conradi Theater.

The opening night of the As-[illegible] premiere is expected to find New York critics [illegible] as state dignitaries in the audience.

Florida State University students, faculty and experienced professionals have worked side by side to put the untried play into form.

Senior people of such long experience as Producer Eddie [illegible] whose Broadway career goes back to 1918, are cast with novices as Peggy Traylor, junior whose Claudia Pontius is one of the leading roles. Having a play down to precise stage size is routine business for Dowling, who performed feat of cutting Eugene O'[illegible]'s The Iceman Cometh [illegible] 21 to five and a half hours. [illegible] long career in show busi-

LOUISE ALLBRITTON . . . who plays Procula, the wife of Pilate, in the Florida State University production "Assignment in Judea," to be premiered here on March 1, conquers notes with student Bo Moore, who will be her understudy in the role. In background bust of Tiberius Caesar, an ill fame of Procula, appears to follow her words with interest. Well known on the stage and screen, Miss Allbritton recently completed a year of acting on London's West End opposite Sir Michael Redgrave.

Tickets for the performance of "Assignment in Judea are available at the Westcott ticket office [illegible] for the public and $.75 for students. After the premiere performance Wednesday the play will be performed Thursday, Friday, Saturday, Monday and Tuesday evenings at 8:15 p.m. and Saturday afternoon at 2:15 p.m.

[illegible] has included sponsoring several new playwrights, among such successes as O'Neill, Tennessee Williams, and William [illegible].

Produced and acted in The [illegible] Menagerie, which he co-[illegible] Williams' finest play, superior to his later work.

PREVIOUS SUCCESS

Speaking of his previous successes in introducing new playwrights, Dowling has said, "I have had to adding the name Patrick Welch to their distinguished company."

The author of "Assignment in Judea"—never on stage but always observing carefully—has read in the script where necessary rehearsals move along, although this is his first produced play, he has much experience to bring to the undertaking. A retired Army officer and student of Roman history, he has been stationed in the Middle East and observed the setting of the play.

Faculty members who are more familiar to the FSU theatre audiences of University Theatre productions are now acting opposite such professionals as Louise Allbritton, Frederic Tozere and Khigh Dhiegh.

Richard Fallon both directs the play and plays the part of Tertullus, Roman garrison commander who loves Claudia Pontius, the stepdaughter of Pontius Pilate.

HIGH PRIEST

Arthur Dorlag acts the part of the high priest, Caiaphas, involved in the political-religious issue that leads to the crucifixion of Jesus of Nazareth.

Sherry, whose stage experience ranges from Murder in the Cathedral to Orpheus Rex and King Lear, acts the part of the unconcerned Pontius Pilate, newly appointed procurator of Judea.

Pilate is portrayed as an opportunist who tries to avoid displeasing any faction and fears the conniving of Herod.

The role of Pilate's wife, former mistress of the Roman emperor, is played by Louise Allbritton, who has just returned from England with her husband, Charles Collingwood, foreign bureau chief for CBS.

Miss Allbritton played on Broadway in The Seven Year Itch, starred on numerous television dramatic shows, and just finished A Touch of the Sun in London with Sir Michael Redgrave.

JEWISH POLITICIAN

The conniving Jewish politician, Herod, King of Galilee, who intrigues to have Judea added to his kingdom, is played by Khigh Dhiegh.

Highly praised for his recent performance in In the Jungle of Cities, his Broadway experience includes South Pacific, Teahouse of the August Moon and Flower Drum Song.

Dowling himself plays the key role of Judas Iscariot, whose character is seen in a new light by the author of Assignment in Judea.

The Biblical betrayer of Jesus is portrayed as an agent of Rome who, assigned to associate himself with the Galilean, begins to feel the loyalty to Jesus.

Ordered to lead the soldiers to arrest him, he does so with the belief that Jesus will be held in safety until the danger of violence is past.

This new interpretation of Judas, Dowling feels, is one of the most significant points of the play.

Students make up understudies and supporting roles in the University Theatre performance, gaining new experience from working with professionals and watching a new play take form.

Sally Moure is understudy to Miss Allbritton, Sam Baker to Tozere, Stanley DeHart to Khigh Dhiegh and Robin Brown to Terence.

Rise Stevens Will Be Here This Weekend

Rise Stevens, internationally known star of the Metropolitan Opera, will make an appearance in Westcott Auditorium at 8:15 Thursday and Friday nights.

Sponsored by the Tallahassee Junior Woman's Club, Miss Stevens will include in her performance several semi-classical numbers.

Her international fame extends from South America to Russia. In addition to her repertoire of classical and semi-classical numbers, she is also accomplished in the fields of television and records.

General admission tickets will be on sale at the University Bookstore for $2 and $3. All seats will be reserved.

Proceeds from the show will provide a $200 scholarship to Florida State University as well as dental care and clothing for the needy children of the Tallahassee area.

Declaration Of Major Due

Sophomores now enrolled in the Division of Basic Studies who expect to reach upper division status at the end of this semester must sign a declaration of major by March 9.

G. Harold Massey, director of counseling, said all prospective juniors should see their faculty advisers without delay to sign a declaration.

Failure to do so may mean delay in schedule planning and registration for the summer and fall terms, Dr. Massey said.

Eligibility is based on earning 60 hours including major requirements in general education plus an acceptable grade point average. Requirements are outlined on page 22 of the FSU catalog.

Over 200 Delegates To Visit FSU Inauguration

Delegates from more than 200 colleges and universities and 16 learned societies, associations and foundations will observe the inauguration of Dr. Gordon W. Blackwell as president of Florida State University.

Wearing caps and gowns, these delegates will join FSU faculty members in Westcott Auditorium at 10 a.m. March 10 for the inaugural convocation.

All classes will be cancelled on the day of inauguration.

Some 270 specially invited guests, including Governor Farris Bryant and members of the Cabinet and Supreme Court, also will be on hand for the ceremony, according to Dr. Werner A. Baum, general chairman for the inaugural program.

DANIEL TO CHARGE

J. J. Daniel of Jacksonville, chairman of the Board of Control, will deliver the charge to FSU's new president, a sociologist who came to his position here last quarter after three years as chancellor of the Woman's College of the University of North Carolina.

Dr. William Friday, president of the Consolidated University of North Carolina, will deliver the inaugural address preceding the inaugural ceremony. After his address Mrs. Ellen Winchell, contralto, will sing a selection from the cantata Pilgrimage by Carlisle Floyd with the composer at the piano. Both Floyd and Mrs. Nikolaidi are on the FSU music faculty.

Dr. Baum said the first event on the inaugural program will be a concert March 9, by the University Symphony Orchestra with Robert Sedore, conducting.

The orchestra will perform Brahms' "Academic Festival Overture" and then will combine with the University Singers, Wiley Housewright, conductor, to perform Kodaly's "Te Deum." Other numbers will be Rimsky-Korsakov's "Russian Easter" and four by Aaron Copland.

PROCESSION

Some 600 faculty members will lead the academic procession which will move from Longmire Building to Westcott for the inaugural convocation. Delegates from learned societies will follow and then delegates from universities and colleges will file into the auditorium in the order of the founding of the institution, with the delegate from Harvard University (1636) first.

The processional and recessional will be played by Mrs. Ramona Cruikshank Beard. The Rt. Rev. Hamilton West, bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Florida will deliver the invocation.

A reception at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Blackwell from 4:30 to 6:30 p.m. on Friday will complete the inaugural program.

Beach To Climax REW Wednesday

"The Relevance of Theology" will be Dr. Waldo Beach's topic at the University Religious Emphasis Week tomorrow at 8 p.m.

The Methodist minister is the author of the book Conscience on Campus from which the title of the Week's theme was taken. Dr. Beach is a professor of Christian ethics at Duke University Divinity School.

The American Studies class will attend the lecture series in place of the regular Wednesday night lecture.

Attendance at Religious Emphasis Week events was running far ahead of last year according to University Chaplain John J. Carey. About 50 faculty members attended the faculty luncheon yesterday with about 95 students attending the student luncheon, he said.

Religious Emphasis Week activities today include student and faculty luncheons from 12:30 to 1:45 p.m. Dr. Duke McCall, president of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, will address the faculty group in the Trophy Room on "One World—Divided."

Dr. Isabel Rogers, chaplain at Georgia State College for Women, will speak at the student luncheon in the Suwannee Arcade on "Worship Without Obedience."

"Religious Values in Contemporary Literature" will be the panel discussion topic in Club Room of Longmire at 4 p.m. today. The Rev. Roger Steinhauer, Dr. Griffith Pugh, Richard Fallon, Dr. Claude Flory and Dr. Beach will comprise the panel.

An open discussion session is scheduled at 5 p.m. in the Student Lounge of Longmire with Dr. Rogers presiding at the "time for cynical seekers."

"The God of a Growing Universe" will be the subject of the evening lecture in Opperman Hall at 8 tonight, with Dr. McCall as lecturer.

Dr. Rogers will meet with Cawthorn Hall women at 9:30 p.m.

Breakfast speaker at the Westminster House tomorrow at 7 a.m. will be Dr. Rogers. Her topic will be "Follow Me." Cost for the breakfast of orange juice, two doughnuts and milk or coffee will be $.20.

"Religion, Marriage and the Family" will be the discussion topic at the School of Home Economics at 10 a.m. tomorrow. Dr. John Greene, Dr. Ivan Nye, the Rev. Harcourt Waller, Dr. Lewis Killian, Mrs. Nona Goodson and Dr. Rogers will participate in the discussion.

MORNING LECTURES

Dr. McCall will speak at the morning lecture in the Library Lecture Hall at 11 a.m. tomorrow. His topic will be "Making Life a Work of Art."

"Religious Implications of Contemporary Science" will be the topic of the final panel discussion in the Club Room of Longmire Hall at 4 p.m. tomorrow. Panel members are Dr. Hans Plendl, Dr. Nick Heerema, Dr. W. N. Kellegg, Dr. Raymond Sheline and Dr. Beach.

Seniors

Candidates for degrees in June graduation exercises have been granted an extension to March 10 to file applications for degrees at the registrar's office.

The original deadline was Feb. 14, but Registrar Murray Kenna said about 50 graduate students have not filed.

After that, (March 10), we will not even talk with anyone about it," he commented.

Killian To Deliver Third 'Last Lecture'

By GLENDA POWERS
Flambeau Staff Writer

"Science, Scientism, and Human Values", is the subject of Dr. Lewis M. Killian's "last lecture" Thursday at 8 p.m. in Opperman Music Hall.

Killian is the third speaker in this year's Mortar Board Last Lecture series. The sociology professor, who has been teaching at Florida State University since 1950, referred to his last lecture assignment as "frightening"—in that such a lecture should represent the ultimate in speech-making.

He added, however, that a "last lecture" is really a recurring thought for a teacher each time he faces the last class of the semester.

Noted especially as a social psychologist, Killian explained that his lecture would be concerned with pointing out the limitations of science as an instrument for providing values and choices between values, whatever merits it might have as an intellectual tool.

"The problem of values," according to the lecturer, "becomes particularly acute in the social sciences." Human values are among the most important things that the social scientist studies, he said.

SCIENTISM

In his discussion of science and scientism, Killian will cite instances of the invasion of the classroom and the home by scientism. He also plans to point out assumed, incorrect, and factual connections between science and religion.

Having provided material for several articles published in sociological journals regarding race relations and human reactions to disaster, Killian commented that listeners would no doubt expect some remarks on the race situation. Listeners will not be disappointed because one section of his lecture will be devoted to the field of race relations, he added.

Killian is well acquainted with information on the segregation issue, having served as coordinator of research for the state attorney general's study of reaction to the 1954 desegregation decision.

EDUCATION

Killian attended the University of Georgia, the University of North Carolina, and received his Ph.d. from the University of Chicago in 1949. Among his many honors are membership in Phi Beta Kappa, Phi Kappa Phi, and Omicron Delta Kappa. He is also a member of the American Sociological Society as well as Kappa Alpha social fraternity.

The Last Lecture series was begun by Mortar Board last year. This year's speakers have been Dr. John F. Spratt and Dr. George F. Holsclaw. Dr. Jackson Lee will be the fourth and final speaker of the year.

"Attendance has been good, but we hope to see an even larger crowd at the final two lectures," said Jan Pearce, Mortar Board president. "We consider the lectures one of the finest aspects of academic life here at FSU, and it is unfortunate for people to miss hearing the outstanding speakers," she added.

Dr. Killian is currently one of the Mortar Board sponsors.

SG Filing Starts Today

Filing of declaration of candidacy by those persons planning to run for student offices in the March 21 elections begins today at 5 p.m. with the deadline set for 5 p.m. March 7.

Declarations may be obtained and returned at the main desk in Longmire Bldg. No declarations will be accepted after the deadline.

A compulsory meeting of all candidates who have filed a Declaration of Candidacy will be held in Longmire Auditorium March 7 at 7 p.m. Campaign procedure will be explained at this meeting.

General election regulations, as given by J. P. Jones, secretary of elections, include rules on expenses, campaigning and grade minimums.

The total cash expenditures of candidates shall not exceed a maximum of $65 for president of the student body, $45 for vice president, $40 for chief justice of Honor Court, men's and women's individual contribution. Each group is organizing its own method of collecting funds.

vice presidents and $30 for chairmen of University Court, Traffic Court and Secretary of Senate.

EXPENSE ESTIMATES

All candidates must file expense estimates by March 10 at 5 p.m. No candidate will be placed on the ballot who has not filed such an estimate. This is merely a general idea of the amount the candidate expects to spend.

All students running for major offices must have an overall 2.3 grade average.

Active campaigning will begin March 14 at 5 p.m. No campaign literature is to occupy space under any circumstances before this time, Jones said.

Election placards are to be placed on designated bulletin boards on campus. Only one poster is to be placed on each side of the bulletin.

CITY PROPERTY

No campaign literature is to be placed on any city property. To protect the University property, the candidate must obtain the consent of the owner.

Violation of these rules will render the candidate subject to $1, $3, and $10 fines for first second and third offenses respectively. The fourth offense will result in automatic disqualification of the candidate, Jones added.

Any student may withdraw his Declaration of Candidacy at any time prior to noon March 16. He may change the office for which he has filed any time prior to March 7.

'Children Were Starving'

"The children were starving. "They starved crying hopelessly in the dust of the flinty roads. They starved and died quietly on the steps of bush hospitals and in the arms of would-be rescuers.

"Victims of the deepest tragedy of the Congo, they were the deathly harvest of an anarchy which called itself freedom."

In the words of Life magazine, February 17, the plight of the Congo children is poignantly depicted.

CAMPUS FUND DRIVE

In answer to their silent plea, a campus-wide fund drive is being conducted in the student religious houses and in the fraternity and sorority houses. Running through Sunday night, the campaign depends entirely upon Collections will be sent to the Congo via UNICEF (United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund) and the United Nations. The Wesley Foundation is serving as the agent for collection of contributions.

It Was In The Platform

Fulfilling political platforms is an unusual activity for Florida State's student government officials, despite their rank, but there is one who has followed through keeping the promises he made last spring.

The Curriculum Evaluation Council was only a part of a platform in the last student body president's race. The proposal to create such a group was brought before the Council of Deans for consideration in January and is now under study by the Steering Committee and the Committee on Academic Affairs of the Faculty Senate.

LAST WEEK, the little publicized Council was given the approval of the Student Senate and now has only to face the Faculty Senate before it either becomes a reality or is absolved.

The greatest strength of the Council lies in the coordination that it will provide between the different schools and colleges and the administration. Its members will serve as advisors to the president of the university, the faculty and the administration by offering student opinions and viewpoints concerning the university-wide academic courses of study offered here.

SINCE THE TWELVE members will be elected from within the different schools by a student curriculum committee, there will be the possibility of achieving a close understanding of the academic value of the individual schools represented.

The criticisms and studies of curriculum will move through the proper channels and not be lost in the usual griping of students who really aren't interested enough to do something about it. The Council itself has no power to force chances in the curriculum, but it can place the valid criticism in the hand of those responsible for setting up such changes.

A favorable Faculty Senate decision can stimulate this unusual student government interest in things academic and encourage further work in this field.

Which Is More Obscene?

With such publications as the Truth Seeker and various Nazi Party throwaways circulating about the country, it becomes difficult to understand the vigorous attempts to prompt newsstands of trashy magazines and borderline pornography. Filth is filth, with or without pictures for those too lazy to read.

With the growing demand for a cleansing of the corner newsstands of poor magazines filled with 'girley' photos and suggestive comment, perhaps attention will be brought to bear on such obscene efforts as those named above.

IT WOULD BE difficult to say which is most dangerous to minds in the long run . . . the lures of exposed flesh or dangerous party lines and the call of the anti-everything cults. It would appear that publications that call openly for hate and destruction would be just as immoral as those dealing in nearnudes. The idea of restricting violence in publications seems to have attached itself to the repression of violence in fiction, but pays little public heed to the criers of hate . . . hate the Christians, Catholics, Jews, Negroes, nationalities, creeds, governments, all religions; in short, hate all structured, organized society, and better: destroy it.

Those who have taken on the job of policing the newsstand must appear to have done so at the behest of clubwomen and others interested in controlling juvenile delinquency. These people generally mean well, but sometimes let their personal taste get in the way of strict, impartial judgement. As a rule, they are not exposed to such as the Truth Seeker or the Nazi blatants, else they would face a decision of revising their views of obscenity.

ONE SUCH LINE as, "God holds mother and germs of equal value" would be enough to set every woman's club in the nation on its ear. And it should. The morality of a publication can't be judged solely on the arrangement of drapery over some model.

The question so in need of an answer is how does one go about deciding the morality of publications if those publications contain substance as well as what the individual might judge "shady" content. Someone has to decide.

HARDHEADED CENSORSHIP is not the answer. Such an attitude is built around some "particular taste" but ever seems to forget that that which it suppressed soon acquires an honored place among the appetites of 'popular taste'.

Let those who made the decisions regarding obscenity take into consideration that many works of stature were once regarded as obscene. Many distorted, grotesque publications have been circulated beneath the notice of those engaged in the suppression of better than average works not set in conventional patterns. The obscene idea is perhaps worse than the obscene photo. Ideas need not necessarily be sold at popular prices as slick magazines or paperbacks. They can be had for nothing if your name gets on the wrong mailing lists.

Honor Code Is Being Amended

By GERRY DOBSON

The Senate is amending the Honor Code which was submitted to it by the Faculty-Student committee, in peculiar ways. The differences between the "old" system and the "new" one are being amended out. Lying and cheating are again to be Honor Code offenses to be tried by Honor Court. There is serious doubt that the faculty will allow much tampering with the original bill . . . the bill forbids proctoring in examinations, and the faculty may well feel that it has no check at all on student cheating if the new proposal is amended to resemble the old one in most respects.

Be this as it may, I can't help feeling that the entire problem is being approached from the wrong direction. The changes to be made in the Honor Code would be those which will make it effective, and in order for such changes to be made, the causes of the breakdown in our old system must be faced up to.

Do students have Honor Codes similar to ours? Yes, again. Then it would seem that the structure of the Honor Code is not at fault. What, then? It must be the attitude of the students toward the code.

It seems to me that all are unwilling to condemn the student body for its rotten attitude toward the Honor Code. After all, it isn't easy for idealistic persons to admit that the student body has completely and miserably failed to live up to its pledged word. And it is not easy for those running for office in student government to tell the students that they are at fault because the honor system is a failure.

But it's awfully easy to excuse the students by saying that 'they don't understand it,' or 'it covers a lot of minor violations which shouldn't be under the Honor Code.' These excuses allow rationalization to supplant honesty. It is dishonest for a student to say that since he thinks the Honor Code covers offenses which are trivial, he feels no compulsion to obey it. An individual student has no right whatever to pass judgment on the provisions of an Honor Code, if he has pledged to uphold it as it stands.

Perhaps we should endeavor to straighten out the attitudes of the student body. If we can't do it, let's go back to proctoring and admit that the students are too immature and untrustworthy to be placed on their honor.

Freedom Is Real?

OPEN LETTER TO FACULTY SENATE:

The University Constitution provides that "In his role as a citizen, the faculty member has the same freedoms and responsibilities as other citizens, including political rights and privileges, without institutional censorship or discipline."

As you have undoubtedly observed . . . students of the Florida State University are subjected to severe restrictions of their roles as citizens by the university administration. Perhaps the Faculty Senate might consider several related questions in connection with this problem.

(1) IS THE university community so compartmentalized that the academic freedom of faculty members can remain secure alongside administrative repression of unpopular viewpoints in the student body?

(2) Do not students also have responsibilities as citizens for the betterment of society?

(3) If so, should they not then be guaranteed the free exercise of the rights of belief, expression, association, and lawful political action necessary to meet their responsibilities?

IF THE ANSWER to the latter question is affirmative, I can think of no more appropriate action than an amendment to the Constitution of the Florida State University extending political freedom to students, and empowering the Faculty Senate or a committee thereof to review and invalidate administrative actions taken against students in retaliation for their lawful political activities.

Block Is Biased

TO THE EDITOR.

Several weeks ago the Flambeau published a cartoon by Herbert L. Block which pictured Truth as a young girl lying dead on the floor after having been stabbed in the back by the House Un-American Activities. Again in the February 20th issue, Flambeau published a Block cartoon which showed the committee collecting fees at the door of Congress for "stamping out opposition to the Committee on Un-American Activities".

Admittedly Mr. Block is an excellent political cartoonist, but I believe he has presented a completely false picture this time. He has consistently represented the committee as a sanguinary group delighted with the prospect of applying thumbscrews to some innocent victim.

STILL, THE members of the House Un-American Activities Committee are Congressmen; they are chosen to serve on the committee by their colleagues. The committee works closely with the FBI which has enjoyed a reputation for justice and integrity for many years.

Each day we see the world drawn more decisively into two opposing camps—freedom and slavery. The Communist leaders have indicated many times that there can be no co-existence between communism and democracy. Inevitably" they say, 'one or the other must die." Our enemies have stated that they intend to use every means from espionage to mass murder in order to be that camp which survives. In view of these facts, can we afford to be without a House Un-American Activities Committee?

I think your staff maintains a line student newspaper, however feel that the Flambeau is unwittingly publishing a gross misrepresentation of the facts when it prints "Herblocks" occasional tirades against the House Un-American Activities Committee

Not My Vote

TO THE EDITOR:

Time has finally come around for someone to write in and ask what is being done about the drainage problem on the sidewalks in front of the parking lot near West Hall. The problem has existed since September, and by the looks of it, will be there in June.

Isn't a university where everything from Science to Hotel and Restaurant Management is taught I am sure where must be ONE person that would have an idea to correct the situation or at least suggest a temporary solution.

Our Senators, engrossed in combats over the Honor System, seem to be taking this matter lightly now. But it won't be long before they'll be coming around asking for a vote for office. And you know what they'll get? . . .

Today It Is Cuba; Tomorrow, The World

(EDITOR'S NOTE: A Florida State University student from Miami has written his observations of organized opposition to the Castro government of Cuba last weekend in Miami.)

By BILL DOXEY

For the second time in five years Miami is playing host to an immense horde of refugees from Communist oppression. A few years ago they came half-way around the globe from Hungary. Today they are Cubans.

The "Magic City" of fun and sun has responded to this influx of distressed people in a typically American way. There are various rescue centers, the most prominent of which is the International Rescue Organization which is located in an old school building near the Miami river. On any day of the week the refugees congregate there in large numbers awaiting not only gifts of food, clothing, and money, but employment as well.

In order to appreciate the plight of these people one must go to the more remote sections of town. There, on the narrow, gloomy streets lined with pawn shops, taverns and cheap one-night hotels the Cubans are seen standing in small groups talking among themselves. The typically Latin laughter is gone and in its place there remains only sad, dark eyes and sorrowful expressions.

The Cuban does not want to live in Miami or in any other American city. He is determined to return someday to his native land. I was reassured by several with whom I spoke that "someday" will be very soon.

THERE ARE MANY democratic groups in Miami who are dedicated to the liberation of Cuba. Of these, there are three which may be considered to be the most powerful.

The Frente Revolutionario Democratico (FRD) is led by Dr. Manuel A. De Varona who has been a dedicated leader in Cuban political affairs since 1924.

A lawyer, Dr. De Varona has been three times imprisoned by Cuban dictators. It was he who on June 32, 1960 in Mexico City, laid the groundwork for the establishment of a united front against the Cuban communists.

The FRD headquarters in Miami is located in an old two-story home on the Biscayne Boulevard. While this underground movement is perhaps the most ardent group of any in revolutionary history one still must be "known" in order to gain admittance.

I APPROACHED the house with some misgivings although I and my companion, Warren Arthur, had been cleared through the proper channels. We were questioned at the doorway inquired where Senora Pessano's office was located, and at we climbed the creaking stairs we saw several dark men wearing loose fitting jackets lounging in glooming corners.

Finally, we entered a small cluttered office in the rear of the second floor. On the floor were many bundles of posters bearing the words "Cuba: The Hungary of America," while a small table was loaded down with stacks of mimeographed information releases.

Senora Pessino had been expecting us. After a brief introduction she proceeded to tell us about the Front movement and about conditions in Cuba.

THE FRD is dedicated to two objectives. (1) "To overthrow the Communist regime which enthralls Cuba." (2) "To re-establish in Cuba a Democratic government of law and order."

While many of our questions went unanswered Senora Clara did tell us much about herself. She had been for twenty-five years the editor of the Havana Post, and English newspaper. During this time she had gathered information on Fidel Castro, Raul Castro, and Che Guevarra as they formented plans in other Latin American countries. She repeatedly warned the Democrats of Cuba of the danger that these three posed not only to Cuba but to the entire American hemisphere as well. Her warnings went unheeded except by the Communists who repaid her diligence with a daylight raid on her office and left a message written in machine gun bullets on the walls. Some days later she was the target of another daytime assasination attempt. This time on a busy Havana street.

IN ORDER TO realize what Fidel Castro has done to Cuba one must talk to the Cuban people

His suppression of the Constitution is a known fact. The many killings he has ordered is also well known although I was assured that the actual number of the dead should be numbered more than 3800 instead of 1000. In the last week of January 17 firemen went "to the wall" there was so weak from the loss of blood that had been removed from their bodies for a proposed "Cuban Blood Bank" that they had to be propped up before the firing squad.

Another of Castro's diabolical plans follows the Communist plan to the letter. He has closed the schools and told the people who were dependent servants before his regime to send them to a two-room school where they have been to teach school. These "schools" are unique. Castro has decreed that the fathers and mothers of families will be sent to different parts of the island to work. The children are then sent to these "schools" where they are instructed by the "teachers". The parents are only allowed to visit their children with permanent permission.

Several weeks ago a Russian cargo ship left Cuba loaded to the waterline with heavy machinery confiscated from sugar and oil refineries. Also aboard were 1000 Cuban children who were being sent to Russia for Communist indoctrination. According to one source Castro plans to follow these 1000 with 50,000 more in the months to come.

Castro has established a slave labor camps. One is located in the Sierra Maestra mountains, and the other is situated in the Zapata swamp. The latter is guarded by Raul del Peso, a former commander in the Red Brigade in the Spanish Civil War. The inmates of these camps are mostly doctors, lawyers, professors and politicians who have refused to speak against the Communist regime.

Those living in one source feel that the invasion in October will be successful and that time there will be a revolt of 40,000 men strong who will link forces with those men who are now in the Escambray mountains. Two or four hours after the invasion begins the troops now situated in Guatemala, Nicaragua, Salvador, and the Dominicans of Puerto Rico as well as the voices of Cubans will converge on the island by sea and air. This force will be supported by the Cubans and fighters armed with rockets.

At the same time this invasion is moving towards the island a small band of young men armed with machine guns and grenades will attempt to assassinate Castro.

The new troops now being recruited in Central America are all Latin, it is reported. While there may be some Americans among these troops they will be Latin secretly. They are being trained by ex-Philippine Army Officers and ex-American Army Officers and also by several retired officers of Puerto Rico. Latin officers which fought against Russia in World War Two. Many of the soldiers are mercenaries. One source claims that 250 ex-Brazilian soldiers have joined up and are being paid $500 a month.

The FRD states that it firmly believes that there are no Communists in the government of Cuba. Of that number one-half may be said to be "hard core." When Castro is deposed a tremendous problem will arise.

PRIMARILY THE FRD, and the other movements as well are dedicated to the destruction of Communism, but they are also aware of the threat of a strong right wing.

In the days that follow the liberation of Cuba there will be many trials and executions unless these are handled correctly another blood bath will ensue.

One source revealed that the new government will be set up with a civil president who will be aided by a tribunal of army colonels. The Government will enforce the Constitution of 1940 and will give the people free elections.

There will be two political parties in Cuba. One will be the Authentic Democratic Party and will be led by Dr. Manuel A. de Varona. It will be slightly left-of-center.

The other party will be the Free Cuba's People Party and will be headed by Prof. Carlos Marquez Sterling, the leader of the 1940 Constitution. The party will be conservative.

The next president of Cuba will be one of the Cabinet of the Federal Supreme Court of Justice. One source goes so far as to say that he will be Dr. Alahan Trellez.

No matter who he may be, it is important not only to the Cubans but to all Americans as well that he will be a friend of Cuba is the key to a free and democratic hemisphere.

Testimonial To Stults

Florida State's tremendous showing in the Georgia meet Saturday was a testimonial to the fine coaching of Gene N. B. Stults.

Stults is a slight, balding, head mentor who has been responsible for an almost phenomenal record compiled by the Seminole swimmers during his fourteen year tenure as Florida State's head swimming coach.

The many tank greats that have paraded through the small Florida State pool, Stults is simply Bim and Bim is simply the greatest swimmer in the country.

The secret of our success," confided Buck Hiles, one of the Seminole Stults has ever coached, "Is that he gets the boys who have little or no hint in high school and improves their times. He gets boys who finished third and fourth in the state swimming meets," added Hiles, one of Stults more ardent fans though he is more noted for his successes at the polls than at the pool, readily agreed.

"Florida gets the name swimmers from high school," said one of the athletic Student Body Presidents. "Florida State gets the ones that are not quite as good, but Stults improves them so much that their times come down and they beat the same boys they swam against in high school who are swimming for the University of Florida."

es Can't Single One Thing

Buck Hiles

Hiles couldn't single out any one way that Stults improves his swimmers.

"You can't put your finger on any one particular thing. There are so many many things," the Atlanta swimming ace commented.

Hiles attributed his personal improvement to the background he had in swimming since learning to swim from the Georgia Tech swimming coach plus Stults help in improving his stroke technique.

Stult's improvement of the times of his swimmers showed up particularly at the Seminole freshman's squad performance at the AAU meet.

The tribe frosh displayed the same promise that their predecessors have shown in the past.

The Florida State freshmen were the stars of the Georgia AAU meet, though they did not come with the title.

The Baby Seminoles finished third in the final standings but finished third to the pair of varsity powerhouses entered, Georgia State and the University of Florida. And the frosh tribe not only a mere ten markers behind UF's Southeastern Conference champions.

tstanding Future Prospects

Moreover, the outstanding prospects for future varsity stardom Seminoles who set a freshman record in the 1,500 meter free- Smith who finished third and set a frosh record in the 200 breaststroke. Tom Lasanta, who set a freshman record in the breaststroke Dick Arcola, who set a freshman record in the breaststroke, and the freshman's top individual star, Lee Brans- who set freshman marks in the 100 and 220 yard freestyle, are all generous in his praise for his assistant Dee Edgington with the freshman team.

"I think the success of the freshmen was due to the fine cooperation of the swimmers and their coach. Their performance met our expectations," said Stults.

"They have worked hard using our methods of training and did well," the coach continued.

These were the words of a man who has taught good students and these in turn did their job well.

It has been the case for all the students of the tank mentor is so highly thought of in his profession that he is Vice-President of the Collegiate Swimming Coaches Association of America and is due to be President of that organization next year.

I think what the team did as a whole showed up the teachings of their coaches," concluded Buck Hiles. The results speak for the quality of that teaching.

FSU Swimmers Cop Ga. AAU Crown

Seminole Frosh Finish Third, Varsity Takes Dual Meets

By BILL VERIGAN
Asst. Sports Editor

The swimming Seminoles dumped two dual meet opponents, Georgia Tech and Georgia, and then went on to grab the Georgia AAU title over the weekend.

Georgia Tech, sporting a 9-2 record before the contest, was FSU's first victim on the tour as the Yellow Jackets were overwhelmed 65-30.

The tribe copped eight out of 11 possible firsts in its sweep to victory. They also gathered in six seconds and five thirds. Those breaking records were Paul Thompson, who cracked the 220 freestyle pool and meet marks, and Buck Hiles, who toppled pool and meet records in the 200-yard individual medley.

The next scalp to be collected on the trip was that of an early-season victim of the Seminoles, the Georgia Bulldogs.

The 31-35 score included seven firsts and six seconds.

During the meet Hiles tore up the old Georgia pool record in the 200-yard individual medley and Pete Davis broke FSU's school and meet marks in the 200-yard backstroke.

This was the tribe's seventh victory in eight starts and gave them a six dual meet winning streak.

Smashing for their fifth Georgia AAU triumph, Florida State collected six firsts out of twelve events to coast to an 84-point victory. This was 22 notches better than second-place Florida who managed only 62 points.

The only Georgia AAU that the Seminoles haven't won since 1956 was two years ago when they failed to enter.

The leaders for FSU were Hiles and Thompson, who knocked over two events each to place the tribe in the win column. Thompson topped the field in the 200-yard freestyle and 100 yard freestyle events, while Hiles won the 200 individual medley and 200-yard butterfly contests.

Other Seminole victors included All-American diver Curt Genders, who grabbed off the title in his specialty, and sophomore Pete Davis, who won the 200-yard backstroke.

The next Florida State meet will be against East Carolina College at the FSU pool tonight.

Florida State's amazing freshmen mermen racked up three victories in dual meet competition and gained a third place in the rugged Georgia AAU meet at the same trip as their varsity counterparts.

On Thursday the frosh resounding overcame Westminster College 69-36 and the Georgia Tech freshmen 68-27 in a double dual meet.

Coach Dee Eddington's Baby Seminoles conquered the Georgia frosh on the next night to the tune of 61-21 as Lee Bransford set a new yearling mark in the 50-yard freestyle.

Smith, Long Place In Pole Vault

FSU Thinclads Finish Fourth In Memphis Jay Cee Relays

Florida State's track team finished fourth in a field of 13 top notch colleges at the Memphis Jaycee Indoor Relays last Saturday.

The Seminoles finished with 30½ points, while scoring in eight of the 12 events. In first place were the Arkansas Razorbacks with 50 points, and they were followed by Alabama's Crimson Tide which collected 44½ notches. Northeast Louisiana barely edged the tribe by one-half a point and a score of 31 points.

Other leaders in the field were Clemson, Georgia and Georgia Tech.

The Seminoles were most successful in the high jump event in which there was a tie for first place between Steve Long and George Smith.

Two third places were copped by Herb Kraft in the broad jump and Terry Long in the 70-yard low hurdles, and fifth places went to Ed Hays in the pole vault event and Don Ostergaard in the shot put.

The Seminoles finished third in the 20-lap relays and placed fourth in the 12 and 8-lap relay competitions.

The dual meet schedule for the FSU thinclads starts next month against the Hurricanes of Miami.

Coach Mike Long is taking an optimistic viewpoint on the coming dual meet season, which he says is the toughest in the history of the school.

"We have some inexperience but we hope to make progress. We need a couple of outstanding individuals to pull us out of the muddle of the road," Long said.

Kellum I Defeats Majors In D-I Flag Football Play

The dorm - independent flag football playoffs went into the first round last week with Kellum I slipping by the PE Majors in the tune of 31-26. The high scoring game included five touchdowns and one extra point for the winners and four touchdowns and two extra points for the Majors.

The most exciting play of the day came when the Majors intercepted a pass in their game with Kellum I and ran it back 101 yards for a touchdown. The effort was to no avail, however, since Kellum I won the game.

In the other division the Aardvarks eked out a one point victory over BSU, 19 to 18.

Yesterday the Aardvarks played the Kellum I team in the semi-finals.

The data for the fraternity playoffs is still undetermined.

The bowling competition entered the semi-finals in the fraternity league with several teams already having been eliminated. Yesterday the bowling competitors battled again for first place with the losers' bracket playing yesterday afternoon and the winners playing last night.

In the dorm - independent league the bowling meet is completed with Kellum I coming out in the number one spot. They were followed by the Newman Club and the PE Majors.

The fraternity badminton singles were finally finished after several weeks of play. PDT won the tourney with KA and SX finishing second and third.

Volleyball will be the next event on tap March 7.

"We are looking forward to going through the year with an undefeated season," said Coach Bill Odenea! "Frank Malaras is putting better than ever before and Dickie Dunlap is as good as ever."

"Downing Gray has as good balance in hitting the ball as the top pros, and David Onstad is one of the longest hitters in collegiate golf," added Odenea!.

Flambeau Sports Writer

Florida State University bested a school scoring record in defeating the University of Tampa and lost its second heartbreaker of the week to the University of Miami by two points this weekend.

FSU in beating the Spartans of Tampa 116-86 erased all previous high scoring records hitting above the 100 mark for the eleventh time in the school's history.

Playing his top game of the season was sophomore Charlie Long. Long tied the season high individual scoring mark of 30 points that was previously held by Ray Swain.

In all, there were six Seminoles in the double figure bracket. Swain bagged 22, Dave Parker 17, Jack Davis 15, Tim Edney 14, and Faurest Coogle 10.

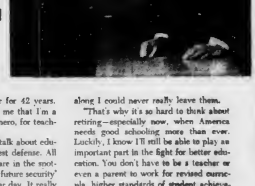
The tribe's previous scoring high amounted to 110 points, but this record was smashed when Edney swished through the 111 point. The Seminoles spotted the Spartans by 26 points twice in the waning minutes of the game.

Two other Seminole season-high scoring records were established. Out of 30 attempts from the foul stripe the tribe hit 38 and from the field they hit 39 field goals.

In the big game of the weekend the Seminoles went down in defeat 75-73 at the hands of NIT bound Miami.

The tribe staged a belated bid for the game in the final 3:16. Trailing 72-60 the Seminoles went on a scoring spree, netting 12 points before time ran out with Charlie Long's jumper bouncing off the rim.

With 26 seconds left to play the Seminoles had cut the Hurricane lead down to four points with the score standing at 76-71. Coogle stole the ball and raced down the court for a layup, slicing the lead to two points.



The Hurricanes' Mike McCoy missed a shot with ten seconds left. Swain picked off the rebound and called time out with five seconds remaining. When the game was resumed Davis whipped the ball downcourt to Long, whose frantic jump shot was shy by inches.

The game gave Miami its fifteenth season victory and a 20-8 mark for the season. FSU now stands at 13-16 with their lone remaining game to be played at Loyola of New Orleans.

The Hurricanes hit 39 per cent from the field and FSU managed 47 per cent. The big difference was in the rebounding department where Miami pulled down 81 rebounds while the tribe grabbed 37 loose balls.

"42 years with chalk on my sleeve"

The story of a man who was a national hero for 42 years and never knew it!

"I've been a schoolteacher for 42 years. Now they're trying to tell me that I'm a hero, too—me, a national hero, for teaching geometry!

"Lately, there's a lot of talk about education being America's best defense. All of a sudden, we teachers are in the spotlight—heroes of America's future security' someone called us the other day. It really makes you stop and think.

"Frankly, I've never felt much like a hero. Certainly there were times when I didn't act like one—times when I almost quit teaching for a job with more money or position. But each time I started to dream about the extra things I'd be able to give my own children, I'd remember the other young folks in our town—the slow child who needed help after class . . . the quick one who needed encouragement to compete for a scholarship . . . the typical student who had to be shown how existing learning can be. I guess I knew all along I could never really leave them.

"That's why it's so hard to think about retiring—especially now, when America needs good schooling more than ever. Luckily, I know I'll still be able to play an important part in the fight for better education. You don't have to be a teacher or even a parent to work for revised curricula, higher standards of student achievement or improved status, prestige and training for teachers. People just like you and me are working toward these goals all over the country."

We must have first-rate schools, not only to prepare our children for all branches of higher learning, formal and informal, but also to make them well-informed adult citizens. An educated America is a free America.

Pikes' Annual Race Won By Weatherly

Ken Weatherly, driving for Delta Delta Delta and Sigma Chi, captured the top award in the 1961 Pi Kappa Alpha-Zeta Tau Alpha Go-Kart Derby.

Weatherly placed first in the twenty-five lap feature event last Saturday afternoon. Jack Smith finished second for Kappa Delta and Theta Chi.

Also qualifying for the main event by placing either first or second in the three semi-final heats were Quinton Perry for Phi Mu-kappa Alpha, Bob Mormer for Alpha Omicron Pi-Kappa Sigma, Walter Stephens for Pi Beta Phi-Sigma Nu and Richard Chapin for Chi Omega-Sigma Alpha Epsilon

The afternoon was marred by only one mishap. In the second semi-final heat Steve Helgemo, driving for Kappa Kappa Gamma-Delta Tau Delta, flipped over rounding a turn and injured his arm. Substituting for Helgemo in the remainder of the race was Bob Perry.

An added attraction was an intermission powder-puff race featuring six pilot challenging for their sororities. Tri Delt Fli-Ann was presented with the trophy. Other participants were Laurie Stone for Alpha Gamma Delta, Joan Cauchman for Delta Gamma, Ginger Reeves for Phi Mu, Kay Cosey for Kappa Delta and Karen Ekman for Zeta Tau Alpha.

Trophies were presented to the first and second place sorority and fraternity winners at the Derby Dance, Saturday night in the Suwannee Room. Music for the dance was provided by the B-Dells.

Other entrants in the Derby were Boy Cannon for Alpha Xi Delta-Lambda Chi Alpha, Ed Miller for Alpha Chi Omega-Sigma Phi Epsilon, Pat Cantey for Sigma Sigma Sigma-Pi Kappa Phi, Marc Julius for Gamma Phi Beta-Tau Epsilon Phi, Bob Stewart for Sigma Kappa-Phi Kappa Tau and Tom Fisher for Alpha Gamma Delta-Phi Delta Theta.

Sigma Chi's Oldest Member Visits Here

By MARY ELLEN HARRIS
Assistant Feature Editor

"I've had a grand life in Sigma Chi fraternity; it's the greatest thing in my life next to my church."

These words sum up the life of William B. "Daddy" Ricks, the oldest living member of Sigma Chi fraternity, who has been visiting the FSU chapter this one week.

Daddy Ricks became a member of the fraternity at the University of North Carolina in 1898. He received his degree in law and his D.D. degree from Vanderbilt University the same year, 1894. He did his post graduate work at the University of Chicago.

Daddy Ricks was national president of the fraternity in 1914 and president of the Order of Constantine, an organization formed during the Civil War deriving its name from the motto of the fraternity.

He was also well acquainted with four of the seven founders of the fraternity and with Robert E. Lee Jr., a Sigma Chi at Washington and Lee.

According to Daddy Ricks, college today differs very little from the college of yesteryear. He cited the emphasis on classical education as opposed to the emphasis on science found in today's college as a major difference. The larger student body of today was another difference mentioned.

Collegiate social life has changed only slightly, Daddy Ricks said. "We used to have good times with the girls" and "big parties" he added.

Fraternity life is the same, other than the fact that the fraternity of yesterday was much smaller and had no house. At the time Daddy Ricks was a student, there were no sororities on campus.

Contrary in current opinion, college students of today have "just as high ideals and principles as when I was a boy," said Daddy Ricks.

The world may be in a state of chaos, but "I'm not a pessimist," added the spry old gentleman of 95.

"DADDY RICKS" . . . lounges as he rests during his recent visit to FSU. The oldest living member of Sigma Chi, "Daddy" classes the fraternity second only to his church in his personal interests. He claims that college has haven't changed since his college days.

I know all of you have important things to do in the morning like getting down to breakfast before your roommate eats the marmalade—so you really cannot be blamed for not keeping up with all the news in the morning papers. SOUTHERN RESERVE UNIVERSITY

Dr. Willard Hale Sigsfoos, head of the department of agronomy at Southern Reserve University, and internationally known as an authority on primitive peoples, returned yesterday from a four-year scientific expedition to the headwaters of the Amazon River. Among the many interesting moments of his journey in his own head, shrunk to the size of a kumquat, Dr. Sigsfoos refused to reveal how his head shrinking was accomplished. "That's for me to know and you to find out," he said with typical witty, but saucy grin.

NORTHERN RESERVE UNIVERSITY

Dr. Standrill Gibbon, head of the department of zoology at Northern Reserve University, and known to young and old for his work on penguins, announced yesterday that he has received a grant of $80,000,000 for a twelve-year study to determine precisely how much fun there is in a barrel of monkeys.

Whatever the results of Dr. Gibbon's researches, this fact is already known: What's more fun than a barrel of monkeys?

To determine precisely how much fun there is a pack of Marlboro. There is zest and cheer in every puff, delight in every draw, content and well-being in every flavorful cloudlet. And what's more, this merriest of cigarettes comes to us both in soft pack and flip-top box whose contents are sold at prices that do no violence to the slimmest of purses. So why don't you settle back soon and enjoy Marlboro, the filtered cigarette with the unfiltered taste.

EASTERN RESERVE UNIVERSITY

The annual meeting of the American Philological Institute, held last week at Eastern Reserve University, was enlivened by the reading of two divergent monographs concerning the origins of early Gothic "runes," as letters of primitive alphabets are called.

Dr. Tristram Lathrop Spleen, famed liar and wide as the discoverer of the High German Consonant Shift, read a paper in which he traced the origins of the Old Swedish rune "r" (pronounced "krahts") to the middle Lattic rune "rr" (pronounced "albert"). On the other hand, Dr. Richard Cuthbund Twonkey, who, as the whole world knows, translated "The Pajama Game" into Middle High Bactrian, contended in his paper that the Old Swedish rune "pt" derives from the Low Erse rune "tnf" (pronounced "gr").

Well, sir the discussion grew so heated that Dr. Twonkey finally asked Dr. Spleen if he would like to step into the gymnasium and put on the gloves. Dr. Spleen accepted the challenge promptly, but the contest was never held because there were no gloves in the gymnasium that would fit Dr. Twonkey.

(The reader is doubtless finding this hard to believe as Eastern Reserve University is celebrated the length and breadth of the land for the size of its glove collection. However, the reader is asked to remember that Dr. Twonkey has extraordinarily small hands and arms. In fact, he spent the last war working in a small-arms plant, where he received the Navy "E" Awards and was widely hailed as a "manly little chap.")

Film Club Show

The Film Club will present The Magnificent Seven in Westcott Auditorium at 7:30 tonight.

The Magnificent Seven takes place entirely in Japan. It is the story of a farming village and how they selected seven samurai warriors to protect their crops from bandits.

"The film has a beauty all its own, at is the beauty of actuality, of laughibility, of the thought behind the faces you see, and of the reasons behind the motions of the bodies," advance notices said.

DO WE HAVE TO DO THIS

We build better roads. We retain traffic engineers to make them safer. We pass traffic laws—hire officers to enforce them. Then—we junk all these safeguards by speeding, passing sights, ignoring warning signs. Where's the sense? Such law violations breed accidents that injure and maim thousands daily! The remedy? Drive safely—drive lawfully. Where traffic laws are strictly obeyed, accidents go down!

FACE THIS FACT
Drivers are the No. 3 cause of traffic accidents which last year injured 1,400,000 and killed 38,000. This year an increase is threatened. How long must this go on? YOU can supply the answer!

Welch Avoids Crowd

Col. Patrick Welch, author of Assignment in Judea, escaped the front-door crowd which was waiting in the entranceway opening night, entering the Conradi Theatre apparently from backstage.

Though they missed Welch, the early birds of the "front-door crowd" did see Eddie Dowling and his wife arrive about 7:30 p.m. Two latecomers to the play saw only a policeman in his bright yellow raincoat and G. F. Hoschuh's sculpture, "Barabbas."

While waiting for the play to begin, one of the understudies stood patiently near the program seller. People would move over to Sally Mours, probably asking her about her work as understudy to Louise Allbritton, leading actress.

"I think it would be better experience to work under a star than to have a role in the play," one woman standing near Miss Mours commented to another.

"The girls must be over there," one professor of English said to his male companion, as they hurriedly walked over to the "girls" —their wives.

Two students who had been studying in rooms above the Conradi Theater accidentally bumped into the crowd waiting to get into the theater.

The male student, dressed in casual school wear, turned to the female, glanced at her bobby socks and loafers, and laughingly said, "Aren't we typical first nighters?"

PRESIDENTS ARRIVE

The president of the University of Florida and his wife, Dr. and Mrs. Wayne Reitz, arrived with FSU President and Mrs. Blackwell, and Mrs. Blackwell's mother, Mrs. Belton Lyle.

Before entering the theater, they were photographed in front of Susan Tillman's caricatures of Miss Allbritton, Col. and Mrs. Welch, Dowling, Arthur Dorlag, Isa Davison, Peggy Traylor, and Knight Dhindsa (cast members) which were hung in the entranceway.

Before closing the doors to the theater so the play could begin, two ushers (Church Key members) stood talking.

"I understand lines in the play have been rewritten for the past week. I guess that's what the sign means," one commented.

The sign read: There are now three scenes in Act I and three scenes in Act II.

UNIVERSITY OF FLORIDA PRESIDENT . . . Dr. Wayne Reitz, and Mrs. Reitz were guests at the opening performance Wednesday night of "Assignment In Judea." Produced by Broadway producer Eddie Dowling, the new play by Florida author Patrick Welch is being presented by a student-professional cast for seven times here and then is taking to the road before going on the stage in New York or Chicago. Dr. and Mrs. Reitz were the guests of Dr. Gordon W. Blackwell, president of FSU, and Mrs. Blackwell. In the Blackwell party also is Mrs. Blackwell's mother, Mrs. Belton Lyle of Spartanburg, S.C.

STATE'S WIFE PROCULA . . . played by Louise Allbritton, tries to reason with her husband (Jo Sawyer), in a fit of anger, has just ordered that Caiaphus, the high priest, to be taken out and killed. Pilate is played by Frederic Tonere and Caiaphus by Arthur Dorlag of the University players.

Tickets for the performance of Assignment in Judea are available at the Westcott ticket office for Monday and Tuesday night performances at 8:30 for the public and $.75 for students. The play begins at 8:15 p.m. in Conradi Theatre. Friday and Saturday nights are sold out.

About 425 balcony seats are available to staff members, spouses and students for the inauguration of President Gordon Blackwell next Friday.

Tickets may be obtained at the Westcott Ticket Office for no charge Monday on a first come, first served basis.

Plagiarism' Is Set Under Honor Code

Eliminating or rewriting another student's written assignment will be plagiarism under the proposed Code of Academic Honor and these offenses will be subject to the Honor Court action.

The code approved this section of Honor System bill Wednesday after a discussion of the difference between editing, proof reading and rewriting.

Most of the senators argued that proof reading another student's paper for typographical errors and grammar errors should not be considered violations of the Code of Academic Honor.

Sen. Bill Moore said, "No matter how wide-spread the practice is, it is still not punishable." Sen. Wynnett Chamberlain agreeing with Kutcher, said, "It would be disastrous to the system." Senate finally decided to substitute the word "revision for "edit" in the approved section of the bill.

The campus legislators will be given the fourth week of discussion of the controversial Honor System next Wednesday.

The bill is expected to pass in final form at the next session and will then be submitted to the student body for approval. If it does pass, 25 per cent of registered students must vote on the issue with a majority approving the referendum.

The code also passed a bill to set up final elections from the ballot following the Tuesday primary on the Friday of the week as the primary. This is also a constitutional amendment and must be approved by a referendum.

Sen. Nancy Sindon, reporting Women's Senate activities, announced that work hours required for Freshman Flunkies will be reduced from 10 to six hours.

She also reported that a second fire marshal position has been created. One of the co-marshals will regulate fire safety practices in the women's dormitories while the other will be responsible for sorority houses.

FSU Symphony Band To Play Tuesday Night

Works by Hindemith, Vaughn-Williams and Holst will be performed by the Florida State University Symphonic Band Tuesday evening at 8:15 in Westcott Auditorium.

Made up of 70 instrumentalists, the Band has recently returned from its annual concert tour. It will be conducted by Dr. Manley R. Whitcomb.

Six seniors will make their last appearances with the Band. They are Clark Dobson, Jerome Edwards, Anna Clare Flynn, Trevis Hankins, Frank Knight and Irvin Lipscomb

FLUTE SOLO

Diana Butler, flutist, will solo on Chaminade's "Concertino for Flute." Miss Butler holds first-chair positions in The Symphonic Band, University Symphony, Marching Chiefs and Flute Quartet.

"Symphony in B flat" by contemporary composer Paul Hindemith will be played by the Band. The American Military Band Overture served as the stimulus for this work since it was written for Major Curry's Army Band.

The work is divided into four movements, all of which demand virtuoso technique. Because of its difficulty, it is rarely heard on concert programs.

TWO BRITISH WORKS

Two numbers by British composers, "Hammersmith: Prelude and Scherzo" by Gustav Holst, and "Toccata Marziale" by Ralph Vaughn-Williams, are also on the program.

Holst, whose two suites for military band have long been hailed as outstanding contributions to the band repertoire, first commissioned in 1930 to write "Hammersmith" for the British Broadcasting Corp.

The work was never performed during the composer's lifetime, however, and fell into disuse until it was rediscovered and published in 1959.

SAID OF HOLST

Robert Cantrick, conductor of the posthumous premiere at the Carnegie Institute of Technology commented: "In 'Hammersmith' Holst turned to the band to express musically a profound philosophical problem, one which was deeply rooted in his nature all his life: the paradoxical interplay of the humane and the mystical in man's experience. He did this at the height of his artistic maturity under the most favorable creative conditions of his career."

"Toccata Marziale' 'is a composition which makes full use of the band's sonority with a strong emphasis on contrast between short and long and loud and soft. It is written in the style of a festive fanfare.

Attendance At REW Shows Improvement

Attendance at this year's Religious Emphasis Week was deemed a "tremendous improvement" over last year by Florida State University Chaplain John J. Carey.

However, those events which conflicted with class schedules were not well attended, the chaplain said.

The "real problem" is not lack of interest, as evidenced by the good attendance at the evening lectures which ranged from 300 to 400 persons, but rather class and time conflict.

Realization of this problem and the establishment of a system for giving excuses to students for missing classes to attend the religious meetings is necessary, Rev. Carey said.

"We are transposing a busy three or four days on top of an already crowded university schedule," he emphasized.

"This year we attempted to reach out into some of the different schools," by presenting programs of interest to Home Economics and Business majors for example in those buildings. However, these programs were the poorest attended of all the activities because of class conflicts.

Chaplain Carey called for a "middle ground" to be reached by the committee in cooperation with the deans and administration concerning this problem.

He said the committee was "very pleased" with the responses to both the student and faculty luncheons.

The guest religious leaders felt the meetings with the faculty members at faculty homes and the dinner meetings at the sorority houses were among the "highlights" of the Week, the Chaplain added, since response to them was very good.

Of the panel discussions, the one concerning science and religion was the best attended, with nearly 70 persons attending, he said.

Last REW Meet

Beach Names Five Major Religions

From the "confused pantheon" emerge four dominant religions or theologies in today's society, said Dr. Waldo Beach, speaking on "The Relevance of Theology" in the final Religious Emphasis Week convocation Wednesday night.

He concluded with a fifth religion—religion X or the religion of Christianity.

To test the relevance of religion, people must realize that the understanding of a culture is most sharply focused in thinking about what a people love, according to Beach.

"Religion or theology is one's ultimate concern" the speaker cited this idea as Paul Tillich's contribution to an understanding of religion. "Whatever you take most seriously, whatever you cannot laugh at—those are your ultimate concerns; these are your religious gods" according to Beach.

AMERICAN GODS

In view of such, the real gods in American life are conformity, prestige, scientism, and sex, which make up the mystic pantheon, he continued.

From this pantheon come the four dominant religions: the religion of simple Biblical piety, the religion of gentle skepticism; the religion of scientific humanism, and the religion of Churchianity or conventionality.

The religion of Biblical piety he characterized as the outgrowth of strict, unquestioning attitudes —a religion in which one finds escape rather than encounter.

Gentle skepticism is fashionable among sophomores and many of the faculty members, said Beach. Believers in this religion are often refugees from the first religion, and skepticism is usually a corridor into other phases.

The religion of scientific humanism is anti-creedal.

The fourth and most prevalent religion, that of Conventionality," is the religion of social acceptability, the religion of American culture. The great ends of man are security and happiness."

RELIGION

Religion X or Christianity, difficult to detect from its counterfeits, exists among a minority group, Beach continued, abandoning ironical statements and sarcasm prevalent in his previous remarks.

"Although this religion is almost unknown, it is present in our midst like an echo. It haunts and lays men in a flat universe with a message about who we are and what our destiny is."

"Religion X represents a life of faith acted in love; a trust in a personal God who creates and sustains our daily life. To honor his Being, to celebrate His majesty, is why we are here," he continued.

"Love is the singular virture of Christian life," emphasized Beach.

In sketching some points of relevance between religion and campus situations, Beach mentioned the honor system, racial and religious inclusion and exclusion, and vocational choice.

Lobby Committee Given Challenge By Blackwell

A challenge to help Florida State University secure the appropriations needed to continue its growth was issued to approximately 200 students by President Gordon W. Blackwell last Thursday.

At that time Blackwell met with students selected by the Lobby Committee to act as official go-betweens for the university and the legislators, to give them the facts needed for their conferences with the legislators.

Opening the meeting Ken Van Assenderp, Lobby Committee chairman, expressed his appreciation to the students taking the lobbying task. He pointed out that this is the first time FSU has initiated such a project which puts a great responsibility on the shoulders of the students.

Bobby Byrd, student body vice president, thanked the students on behalf of student government. "Everyone connected with the school must help it grow and a most important role will be carried out by the students," he said.

APPRECIATED WORK

Before outlining the needs of FSU, Blackwell expressed his appreciation for the students' willingness to work and his confidence in their ability to do the job ahead.

To do a good job, the students must know and understand the facts about the university and its appropriation requests, continued Blackwell.

He then went over a brochure printed by the FSU Alumni Assn. and a mimeographed pamphlet containing a breakdown and analysis of the university's legislative request.

The brochure, printed at no cost to the university or the state, contains graphs and charts accompanied by explanations, illustrating the increase in enrollment, the ratio of students to professors, and faculty salaries compared to other institutions.

Other statistics included in the brochure showed that although Florida ranked 20th among the states in per capita income in 1959, it ranked 43rd in per capita expenditures for higher education and ranked last among the states in terms of per cent tax revenue expended for higher education.

BUDGET REQUEST

The operating budget request approved by the Board of Control for the next two years is $27,225,093 while the Budget Commission has recommended only $22,941,203. Of this $18,585,289 would come from the General Revenue Fund and the remainder from fees paid to the university.

The university request is larger than the recommendation made by the commission to enable the university to allow its enrollment to increase and to meet the increases in professors' salaries.

The additional amount is also needed to aid in purchasing a computer for the nuclear science program, additional books for the library, and the erection of more dormitories and classroom buildings.

Faculty salaries constitute the greatest need said Blackwell, as FSU cannot keep up without the necessary increases. He emphasized that FSU is in favor of meeting the needs of all the universities in the state and said FSU would get its fair share of the allocations.

Also present at the meeting to assist Blackwell were Vice President Milton Carothers and Robert Bannerman, director of alumni affairs.

DISTRICTS

Following the meeting the students gathered in districts to plan their meetings with the legislators. They will contact the legislators occasionally, both here and during the Easter vacation, said Van Assenderp.

Speaking about the Lobby Committee and the go-between, Van Assenderp said, "FSU is at a crucial position in her history. She can continue to move forward as an outstanding university community or she can become stagnant and relatively unproductive.

"It is up to us, the students, to shoulder our responsibility to help secure a more fruitful relationship with the state government. It is to this challenge that the Lobby Committee and

Two Students Will Attend Navy Meeting

Two FSU seniors, Virginia Delavan and Robert Mosher, will be delegates to the United States Naval Academy Foreign Affairs Conference in Annapolis, April 28-29.

The subject of the conference is "Problems of U. S. Foreign Policy in Africa and the Near East." Sessions have been planned by midshipmen of the Naval Academy Foreign Relations Club. More than 120 students from 56 colleges and universities west of the Mississippi have been invited to participate. Delegates will be divided into seven round tables, each studying a particular geographic area.

Papers on African and Near Eastern affairs from the academic, business, newspaper, military and political fields will move into round-tables and present group discussions. Representatives of foreign embassies will speak on major domestic and foreign problems of their countries.

The objectives of the conference are to analyze forces affecting U. S. interests in these newly-important areas of the world and to make recommendations for future policy.

Colonialism, nationalism and the Cold War battle for friendship of the uncommitted nations will be major topics of discussion.

Both FSU delegates have special interest and training in the study of foreign policy. Miss Delavan is a social science major and was editor of the Florida Flambeau last year. Mortimer is majoring in government and international affairs.

Students File For Offices

Ten students have filed declarations of candidacy for student government offices that are to be filled in the March 21 election.

Only two of the 11 posts were opposed at 3 p. m. yesterday. Deadline for filing is Tuesday at 5 p. m.

Daniel Webster and Gordon Smith had filed for chief justice of Honor Court and Myggon Chamjoon and Jeanie Ferlita for women's vice president.

Unopposed were Bobby Byrd for student body president; Carl Kuttler, men's vice president, and Kitty Miller, secretary of Senate. Three students had filed for the three openings on the Board of Publications, Joan Abbott, Ray Allen and Bill McLemore.

No candidates had filed yet for vice president of the student body, chairman of Judiciary or chairman of Traffic Court.

All candidates must attend a meeting at 7 p.m. Tuesday at which Secretary of Elections John Paul Jones will explain election and campaign procedures.

Sophomores

All sophomores who will be eligible for transfer from the Division of Basic Studies to an upper division, must sign declaration of majors by March 9. Eligibility for transfer from the Division of Basic Studies is based on earning sixty hours in general education plus an acceptable grade point average.

Rise Stevens

Tickets are still available for Rise Stevens' performance tonight at 8:15 in Westcott auditorium.

General admission tickets are on sale at the University Bookstore and in 102 Psychology, for $2 and $3. All seats are reserved.

Proceeds for the show, sponsored by the Tallahassee Women's club, will provide a $200 scholarship in Florida State University as well as dental care and clothing for the needy children of the Tallahassee area.

Student Lobbyists Can Help

One good idea that has been shuttled into action this spring is the one that draws on the students of Florida State to form lobbying committees that will be in contact with the legislators so soon coming to town.

But this will be lobbying with a difference. Members of each lobby are drawn from cities and towns from which a member of the legislature has been elected. It will be a case of hometown meeting face to face with hometown. And it probably is a fair method of having some semblance of area representation from the FSU campus.

FOR EXAMPLE students from Orlando and vicinity will be those who will contact the gentleman or gentlemen from the Orlando area. This method should furnish the lobbyists and the legislators with some basis of common interests and, we hope, mutual understanding of divergencies of what is desirable and what is acquirable for FSU within the next two years.

Some two hundred and twenty students are involved in the lobbying efforts on behalf of the FSU student body. The Lobby Committee made up of FSU twenty students is the steering mechanism behind the lobby efforts. Two hundred students will actually be in contact with the lawmakers.

THESE STUDENTS were chosen on the basis of home counties. An IBM list was made up of all students at FSU from the state of Florida on the by-county basis. Each county in Florida is represented in the FSU student body. The list then was checked by the steering committee and the final list was approved by the Dean of Women and the Dean of Men.

The idea behind the student lobby group is not 'pressure'. That would not work for a variety of reason, but mainly because the legislators are more than well aware that the average student here is under twenty-one. Pressure efforts can backfire with bruising results.

The student lobbyists are not registered as lobbyists, and rather than try the pressure method, will work on the more candid method of simply meeting with and talking to men from the home county or district.

WHAT THE LOBBY can actually accomplish is a moot question. One important thing it can accomplish is goodwill in the legislature. If the students of FSU show an interest in their own welfare, then perhaps the gentlemen on Capitol Hill will be more interested too.

If the end results of the lobby efforts is a closer rapport between our students and the people who handle available funds, that in itself will be a considerable accomplishment. If we can succeed in making Representative Smith from Doe County feel that his coming-of-age constituents are interested in his least effort to enhance their Alma Mater; can make him feel that we are interested in his interest in FSU, then we are on the right road.

It's Not A Saturday Matinee

Students at Florida State University have reverted back to their Saturday morning matinee-style behavior when they attend the free campus movies held on the weekends in Westcott Auditorium.

Raucous cat-calls and vicious hissing at the villains do not signify the presence of a very distinguished or adult audience. Rather it brings to mind the rotten-egg bearing, tomato-slinging audiences of the vaudeville days.

SOME COMPLAIN about the films, how they are chosen, the fact that they are not really "free", etc. First of all, students have a part in selection of the films. They are chosen with two factors in mind: the opinion of students who are interested enough to let Miss Maria Williams' office know their preferences, and the actual stars featured.

The fact that student activity money pays for the films is almost lost sight of when one considers that these movies are costing the student only 1.7 cents per person in attendance.

THERE IS NO excuse for the cat calls, or for the spilled food and drinks that are not even supposed to be in Westcott in the first place.

Students are not forced to attend the movies. They are here for the student's enjoyment. If students can't at least act like adults when at such simple entertainment as a campus movie, then we suggest that said students restrict their social life to burying their collective heads in the sand.

Watch Those Abbreviations

By LESLIE POWELL

This is the era of persons, places, organizations and events known far and wide by their initials. For other departments, I cannot speak, but here on the Flambeau we have to watch out for BOP, PBO, IBM, SG, SBP, B&B RR, etcetera.

With REW just over, and before anybody else works in their monogrammed plans on us, we propose to start an initialed project all our own, namely CSW. And that doesn't mean what you may be thinking.

CSW stands for Campus Sex Week. Tentative plans call for a panel of experts speaking on a variety of subjects. Free time permitting, I think that it would be just wonderful if we could get connaisseur Tommy Manville to moderate a panel made up of Ann Landers, Mary Worth and Margaret Mead speaking out on such subjects as "Passing Notes and Good Grammar," "How to Hold Hands Hygienically," and "The Role of the Busybody on the National Scene."

Other ideal individual speakers would be Porifirio Rubirosa the internationally known sportsman elaborating on the topic, "Intercepted Passes, Stolen Bases and the Fast Break"; Baby Pignatelli and a Cadillac, "Things Mother Didn't Have to Tell Me"; Polly Adler could take the wraps off "The Night Life of a Telephone."

OF A MORE local nature, sports writer Ben Sharp might be enticed into speaking on "How to Cultivate That Blush," and "The Sporting Element."

A neat surprise feature could be two anti-football coeds (they exist) who would outline their crafty scheme to demoralize the football team and bone up other college sports at FSU. At present, this scheme is being given a trial run with excellent results.

The score to date: Co-eds 1,000; lettermen: .000.

The Flambeau will sponsor a seance, in cooperation with Pirate U recently, such experts as Don Juan and Du Barry will pass on timeless tips of personal interest.

Field technicians from the Kinsey institute would pass out questionnaires and conduct personal interviews in conjunction with observers from the Attorney General's office.

Entertainment will be by Candy Barr, doing her original imaginative dance, "Put It Back Lady." The Combined Dean's Chorus will render a number of vocal selections including "Dear What Comes Naturally," "Thank Heaven For Little Girls," and "The Best Things In Life Are Free."

Featured Speaker will be Miss Cora Camille, authoress of such best sellers as "I Was a Prisoner in Peyton Place," "Inside Lolita," and "I Told You I Heard Other Voices In Other Rooms."

Sororities and fraternities are invited to present original skits. Frats should build their skits around the theme "A Mother's Plea, Take Care of My Little Coed." The sorority's should present the theme "A Father's Retort: Do It and Die, Buster."

Nominations are now open for the first "EROL" award, the campus equivalent of "Oscar." Categories are Lover, Hero Class, Lousy Lover, Miss Most Dated and Miss Informed. National telecasting will be handled by Scarlet Letter Productions. Wholesale expulsions are expected to follow the conclusion of CSW.

From Inside-Out

How Does Student Government Represent The Student Body?

By MYGNON CHAMPION

How can a government be said to "of the people, by the people, and for the people" if it is separated from those people by a gulf of apathy, lack of public information, and inadequate communications?

To be more specific, how can Student Government represent the Student Body and, thus, fulfill its role as a democratic institution, if the students do not understand the functions and basic structure of their government, if they are not informed on current issues, if they do not express their opinions and suggestions to their representatives?

ON THE OTHER SIDE of the coin, how can those students who hold offices in Student Government represent their constituency if they do not know what the students want done, if they are only guessing at student opinion?

FSU's Student Government compares most favorably with that of other universities; it is much more highly developed and better organized than most others, but this gap in communications between the student and their government is a serious weakness. Most student's know too little about Student Government, and Student Government knows too little about student opinion and complaints.

BECAUSE OF ITS diverse organization, the legislative branch is perhaps the most confusing to the casual observer. There are three separate senates: Student Senate, Women's Senate and Men's Senate. All senators are members of Student Senate as well as one of the other two.

Unlike Congress and the state legislature, bills do not have to be passed by more than one of these senates. Matters concerned with women students only are the concern of Women's Senate only; the same is true of men's affairs; a recommendation concerning both men and women comes before Student Senate.

SUBJECTS ELIGIBLE for Senate action are virtually unlimited. Student Senate has direct authority over changes in the Student Body Constitution and Statutes and indirect authority to act as the voice of student opinion on any subject, whether it be requesting the administration to simplify the procedure for correcting grade errors or stating to the Legislature or Congress student opinion on a particular issue.

In addition to this, Student Senate must approve all appointments made by the Student Body President, and has authority over the annual Student Activity Budget, which last year totaled more than $80,000.

Women's Senate has specific authority over amendments to Knowledge for College and to the constitutions of Freshman Flunkies, Sophomore Council, Junior Counselors and other women's organizations.

BOTH STUDENT Senate and Women's Senate have several standing committees which specialize in a particular phase of that senate's business. For instance, the Organizations and Finance Committee of Student Senate is in charge of all matters concerned with the budget and student organizations; the Social Rules and Codifying Committee of Women's Senate is in charge of all amendments to Knowledge for College. All bills coming before either senate are referred to a particular committee for close scrutiny before being returned to the Senate floor for debate and voting.

Each of these Senates, of course, has officers to see that its business is conducted smoothly. In Student Senate, Bobby Byrd, as Student Body Vice President, presides. In his absence, the Vice President Pro Tem, Jim Miller, is in charge. Ths Secretary, Marianna Girtman, is elected by the Student Body. The Parliamentarian, Kay Finlay, is appointed by the Vice President as are the committee chairmen.

In Women's Senate, Women's Vice President Martha Bedell presides. In her absence, the Women's Vice President Pro Tem, Wynnon Cunningham, performs these duties. The Clerk, Linda Wahl, is appointed by the Women's Vice President, who also appoints all committee chairmen.

In Men's Senate, Men's Vice President Marion Clark presides. The Men's Vice President Pro Tem, Carl Kuttler, is elected by the Men's Senate.

Two Cultures Portrayed In 'Judea'

MARK HOMER WITHAM

Sharp contrasts are drawn in Patrick Welch's Assignment in Judea, given its first airing in the Conrad Theatre Wednesday evening. The blacks and whites of two cultures are shown in their rawest and occasionally tender forms, one the ruler, the other reluctantly submissive; one of law, one of spiritual constitution.

Rapidly exposing life, playwright Welch deals with dignity, faith, justice, morality, commerce, speedy justice — speedy trial. By maneuvering people and thoughts, the characters are manipulated as the situation demands—the actors themselves the raw material.

FLEETING GESTURES and life itself, Pontius Pilate, played by distinguished actor Fredric Towers, accompanied by his aristocratic wife and beautiful daughter, accepts the somewhat undefined position as Procurator of Judea. Mr. Towers portrays the egotistical, cowardly procurator with forceful, charming dignity, despite the nature of the part.

Constantly attempting to mend her foolish husband's ways, or to keep him from the pieces, Claudia Procula is a lady of many burdens. Louise Allbritton as Claudia the elder glides handsomely, poised, from one phase to another, with a sad smile and sorrowful heart. Excellent scenes of domestic discord are included, usually ending with Pilate taking his bath like a good boy, and Miss Allbritton doing a marvelous job of pawing the marble.

NOT COMPLETELY ignorant of her parents' unpleasant relations, yet unsuspecting that her questionable origin is a major factor of the quarrels, Claudia Pontilla is blissfully spends long hours making the very mistake her mother did before her. The lovely Miss Peggy Traylor radiates a glow and flame of love that one suspects Pontilla's mother to have also possessed. Miss Traylor's light and girlish rendition of the young "not-so-innocent," creates contrasts to the sadness displayed by Claudia Procula.

Pontilla's lover, the only logical thinking Roman in the production, Torrentius Varro played by co-director Richard Fallon, displays masculine leadership and eager determination for honest justice throughout the performance, using broad freedom of movement, and unlimited facial expression, as does Stan De Hart, who portrays the Roman Tribune's title, Centurian Alpheus.

PILATE IS besieged by two seemingly immovable forces, Crafty King Herod Antipas, played by theater artist, Ralph Dheigh, appears as greed and temptation, with Judea to be traded for a rut and a letter. With an atmosphere of precise method, Mr. Dheigh gives Herod a personality of cynical subversiveness. Spiritual and political diplomacy on the part of Arthur Durling, as the High Priest Caiaphas, leads the simple Procurator from scheme to scheme.

Ira Davidson, played the earthly, more erotic Zara. As Zara, "well known, settled, and quite self dependent," Miss Davidson interprets a raw phase of life with rich throaty laughter, beguiling smile, and flashing eyes.

THE PLAY IS built around influencing factors of the crucifixion. Shrouded by mystery, crushed by circumstances, Agent Three, played by veteran artist Eddie Dowling, expounds of a strange and quiet faith, which soon would encompass the world. Throughout Dowling's performance, the uncertainty and inner fear of the humble spy are expressed through facial contact, his every movement, every gesture, demanding the audience's attention.

The sincerity of Dowling's interpretation soothes are auditory, yet intrills in the undercurrent of thought that disaster of the betrayer is inevitable, his guilt and remorse inescapable.

Welch has expounded new thoughts and ideas to the mysteries of the Crucifixion. The actual content of the play as presented by the Florida Players may be called calculated speculation. Deviating from the Biblical interpretation of certain events and characters, Mr. Welch's composition is concerned with people, as well as time, and things — despite the dark and disparing nature of the betrayed Judas.

Objectives Are . . .?

By BILL TROTTS

In the February 27th edition of the Tallahassee Democrat the lead editorial was titled, "Check Yourself at Red Goals". Following were 16 objectives attributed to the communists by the Cardinal Mindszenty Foundation.

The objectives "should make Americans' hair stand on end," state the editorial. The list included such things as: propoganda to end cooperation with anti-communists Franco, deGaulle, and Salazar; use of student riots to force removal of Chiang Kai-shek and other anti-communist stalwarts; seduction of American youth through propaganda magazines, student and teacher exchanges with communist countries, etc.; repeal of the NDEA loyalty oath; abolition of the House Un-American Activities Committee, ROTC, and nuclear testing.

THE LIST INDICATED that students and younger people are to be used as tools for the communist purposes. There is nothing frightening in this indication; the power groups of the world have always used the younger people to do their dirty work for them. That situation is truer now than ever, and the communists are not alone in their use of young people for their own nefarious aims. Nor do the communists have a monopoly on propaganda and seduction. Historically speaking, youth has always been the gun-fodder for their parents' power politics.

Communism is an evil and a threat to the freedom of man and that shows his disregard for humanity by such acts as brain-washing of Cardinal Mindszenty and the rape of Hungary. Men who love freedom have fought for the communist cause, nor do they hold it as other power group; power is the antithesis of freedom. But men who would try to arouse the fear of fellow Americans, while hiding behind the name of a hero such as Cardinal Mindszenty, are hardly champions of freedom.

THIS TYPE OF maladjusted patriotism leads Americans to hypocritically join forces with dictators such as Chiang Kai-shek because, whatever reasons for opposing communism have nothing to do with freedom or human decency. Even the editorialist who considers Chiang and Franco as "anti-communist" stalwarts might wonder about the value of dying for Chiang Kai-shek or Franco in a war against communism.

There are many loyal Americans who believe that the ROTC program would help America better if it were voluntary. These people have in the right of a man to die in the freedom that would have him defend them. Some of these persons can find reason in the notion the honesty and efficiency of loyalty oaths with the feeling that they are a part of the communist movement. They exercise their right to question just as they exercise their right to breath. But they would like to end questioning, and breath, many of them would like to see an end to the nuclear stalemate.

WHEN FREEDOM is at stake a man it matters little what their freedom was taken from him by HUAC or the Marines; either way he has lost his individual rights to life. Some years ago, no one would had the courage to question and doubt defied the rules of Englishmen, today the same men will defy the same name-callers who pose as American patriots.

The enemies of freedom are many and they are legion. The 13 the teacher who fights for academic freedom by setting an example with his own life. The man who would endure months of all who defy him with his own dogma. The news media which would be fears and emotions, the weak public to bully them out of their nickels. Though communism is an arch enemy of freedom, these three groups are more effective because they are accepted as such by the American way of life.

BUT AMERICANS who complish nothing by hiding behind the purported objectives of their enemies. Is it more than concern ourselves daily with the communist objectives let us list our objectives and see how they compare with the communist list.-Prime on our list should be the desire to make sure Americans are intelligent citizen; a citizen who respects not only fellow church members and those with the "right" color skin, but a citizen who understands and respects men no matter what their creed or color.

If we can reach these objectives, freedom will survive. When that happens America will again be seen as a beacon light and home of the brave and the land of the free, and the rest of the world will be better for it.

Struggle For Life

By MARY ELLEN FISHER

From the opening scenes to the final seconds of The Magnificent Seven, Kurosawa does not waste words or movements in his unsuccessful attempt to exemplify the struggle for survival of a small farming village.

Nothing was lost to the viewer who did not speak Japanese, for what could not be translated into English subtitles because of the great language barrier was conveyed through the excellent use of background music and photography.

SET IN JAPAN during fifteenth century, it is the story of a small farming village that dreads the approaching harvest knowing it will be followed by bandits who annually loot and destroy the villages.

This year, the younger men of the village decide to go to the villages and fight twice. He instructs their hungry Samurai to employ their services. Kambei, the first to arrive, is the farmer's offer, and the lead and decides the more Samurai are needed adequately defend the village. His carefully selects five men who equality. Lacking in faith candidate, he offers that these chosen five have to do.

HOWEVER, THERE farmer's son who has been longing the role of a Samurai and ultimately proves himself worthwhile. He becomes the last member of the Magnificent Seven and lends a touch of comic relief to the film.

The are a thirty man regiment and fortify the village in preparation for the feared attacks. After the harvest, the villages settles down for the long wait.

Successfully defeating the bandits, the Samurai must leave. They have saved the village from destruction, but according to tradition they must go. They cannot remain there for they are Samurai.

Florida State cage team, which Coach Bud Kennedy promised be one of the best on FSU's relatively brief round ball egun to show signs of real power this season.

eminoles turned in the best record they have compiled in ars by winning 14 games while losing ten against a schedule ne of the toughest in the Southeastern United States.

ing the foes conquered by the upstart tribe were the mighty ity of Kentucky, one of the schools in the playoff to determine ampionship Conference representative to the National Collegiate Association's annual cage tourney; the University of Miami, eared in the NCAA tournament last year; and Clemson, Alabama, The Citadel, and Loyola of New Orleans—all major opponents.

It was the best year as far as the won-lost record was ed in the last five years," Coach Kennedy commented. "We ever handled down the stretch with only eight boys, but ll came through well."

ring the shorthanded final stretch, the Seminoles poured on and won 10 of their last 14 games. Two of those games nto the University of Florida and the University of Miami some courts, by one and two point margins respectively.

Florida State out scored their opponents on the whole by 74.4 points to 69.5, which was the first time this has happened in some time.

This was mainly due to the exceptional shooting percentages the tribe compiled. FSU made 48.5 percent of the shots they took off the well-used shuffle offense. This offensive shuffle, which was designed to get a better shooting, did just that. The Seminoles improved their bucket-getting by ten percentage points. Last year's 38 per cent average was the high water mark before.

"We told the boys at the first of the season that we wanted them to shoot for 45 percentage but they exceeded our expectations."

The foul shooting was also impressive as the injuns canned 442 free throws to their opposition 411 while collecting five less fouls than their opponents.

Rebouding was another facet of the game in which the Seminoles excelled. FSU collected 1054 missed shots o 1023 for the opposition. Last week the Seminoles were placed sixth in the country in rebound grabbing. This is figured by dividing the number of shots in a game by the number of rebounds gotten.

Four See Last Home Action As FSU Wins

By BILL VERIGAN
Asst. Sports Editor

Florida State's talented tankers continued their winning ways to take their seventh consecutive dual meet win 60-35 against East Carolina College in the last home contest of the season.

Four seniors, Buck Hiles, Curt Genders, Paxton Briley, and Carl Butler, put in their last appearances at the FSU pool.

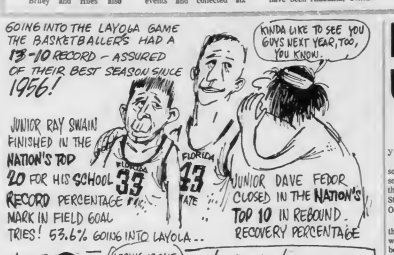
Genders has not lost a dual diving event, and his performance on Tuesday night kept his slate clean.

Briley and Hiles also closed out their home careers at FSU with outstanding performances. Briley took the 440-yard freestyle, while Hiles smashed the pool, school, and meet records in the 220 freestyle. To win the event, Hiles had to overpower Paul Thompson, who had set the record for this event only a few meets previously, but the All-American freestyler managed to take the race an armlength ahead of his teammate.

The Seminoles took firsts in eight out of the eleven events and collected six seconds and three thirds to end up with 60 points. The tribe's season mark now stands at eight wins and one loss in dual meet competition.

Other tribe winner were Glen Mitchell, Pete Davis, Gerry Braden, and Risto Pyrkko.

This year's home season has been extremely fruitful for the mermen, who have won all of their home meets after an early season loss to Southern Methodist on the road. Their victims have been Alabama, Texas A&M, Sewannee, Georgia Tech, Florida, and two route of the hapless Georgia Bulldogs. The Georgia AAU title was also brought back to Tallahassee by the tankers for the second straight year and this was fifth title in the last six seasons.



East Carolina could now be considered a two-time loser to the tribe since they competed in the Georgia AAU and fell victim not only to the Florida State varsity but also finished behind the Seminoles freshman squad.

On March 11 the tankers travel to Gainesville to take on the University of Florida Gators. The Gators were easily handled earlier in the year.

The record books have been battered and assaulted all season with new marks being written by Hiles, Thompson, and Phil Davis. Hiles is now the possessor of four school titles, the 220 butterfly, the 200-yard individual medley, the 100-yard freestyle, and the 220 free style. Thompson copped the 440 freestyle school record and Davis grabbed the 200-yard backstroke school record.

The freshman team has had an outstanding season with five wins and no losses. The starcling fresh under the direction of Coach Dee Eddington have also been able to beat their varsity counterparts at their own game on several occasions.

Bim Stults, varsity swimming coach, has had nothing but good things to say about his students, even when emerging from the swimming pool where his jubilent warriors had thrown him followng a victory.

FSU Golfers Face UF Gators Monday

By MIKE HAZELWOOD
Flambeau Sports Writer

The Florida State Seminole golf team will meet its first opponent of the year, the University of Florida, Monday.

This match opens the new season for the Seminoles. This season has all the prospects of being the best in the history of Florida State, according to Coach Bill Odeneal.

This year's golf team is one of the largest in the history of FSU with 17 members. Of these members six are returning lettermen. These men are: Senior Frank Malara, White Plain, NY; Senior Co-captains Downing Gray and Dickie Dunlap, both of Pensacola; Senior Buck and Pete Fraleigh of Madison, Fla.; and junior David Onstad, Miami Springs, Fla.

Other members of the team are Junior Manning Nordone, Syracuse, Fla.; Chuck Keating, Corning, N. Y.; Bryan Bergeron, Clewiston, Fla.; Dick Shulman, Hilsta, NY; Dick Ross, Springfield Ohio; Rip Edel, Dayton, Ohio, and senior Mike Stauffer from Jacksonville.

The sophomores are Roger Kennedy, Pompano Beach, Fla.; Bob Kurvin, Jacksonville, Mike Mogowan, Jay, Fla.; and Ray Daley, Pompano Beach.

Coach Odeneal said, "We are looking forward to going through the year with an undefeated season. I feel that Frank Malara is putting better than ever and that Dickie Dunlap is as good all around as ever before."

"Dowling Gray has good balance in hitting the ball as the top professionals and Rock Fraleigh is playing steadier by hitting all shots with accuracy and authority," said Odeneal. "Manning is a steady player who is never out of the match or game, and he has great capacity and David Onstad is one of the longest hitters in collegiate golf," said the coach.

The big highlight of this season will be the All American Invitational Intercollegiate. This will be held in Houston, Texas and the top sixteen teams in the country are invited. The winner of this tournament is considered by all people to be the number one team in the nation.

In the matches on March 24-5 FSU will play the Naval Academy, Miami and Jacksonville University. Friday and Saturday the Seminoles will take on these three plus Jacksonville Navy.

This year the golf team has been extremely fortunate in being able to use the Capital City Country Club said Coach Odeneal. Last year the team had to use the course in Thomasville which is a poorer course and further away. By the traiging on an excellent course the culibre of our players has improved, the coach added.

Mural Football Nears Close

Flag football is now in the final stages in both leagues with the Fraternity league tournament just getting underway, while the Dorm - Independent league tourney is nearly completed.

Yesterday there were two fraternity games on tap with SX meeting PKT and the winner facing KA, while SAE came up against PKP, with the winner playing DTD. PDT drew a bye for the first round but is still in the running.

Dorm-Independent football is almost finished with only one team, the Aardvarks, still having a clean slate. Earlier in the week BSU was eliminated with two defeats, Kellum i and the Majors Club have one loss each and they battled to stay in the competition yesterday. The winner will have to knock off the Aardvarks to be victorious in the tournament.

Fraternity bowling is also near the end of play with PKA the only team left without a loss. TX is their nearest competitor with one loss, and LXA has clinched the number three spot.

Badminton doubles have ended with Kappa Alpha taking first place, LXA winding up in second place and ATO finishing third.

Last semester's table tennis winners have just been announced by the Intramural Athletic Department. Kappa Alpha took first, SN second, and LXA third. The late release of these places is due to the time needed to determine point standings.

Beavers, Miller Lead FSU Gymkana Team To Ga. AAU

Also competing in the Atlanta meet will be Jerome Edwards on the trampoline and mats, rope-climbing, and flying rings, and Mitch Weinstock and Ray Schaefer in the All-Around and Side Horse events respectively.

Rick Miller and Joe Green participated in the South Florida AAU meet in Miami Feb. 25.

Accessories Can Add New Touch To Old Wardrobe

By ANNE CALVERT

As signs of Spring definitely come into view, and with them thoughts of Easter's approach, it seems appropriate that accessories, shoes in particular, be our theme.

Everyone can't afford a new wardrobe, but accessories are relatively inexpensive, and they can give that "new" touch to the old wardrobe.

So many girls, nowadays, seem to be shoe crazy, and it's easy to see why with the many attractive styles available. The concept of basic colors has changed a great deal in recent seasons, and this has much to do with increased interest in shoes.

NOT LIMITED TO CONSERVATIVES

Manufacturers no longer limit colors to the old conservatives; navy blue, white and black patent for Spring. Pastel blues and pinks were the first to break the color barrier, followed in short order by loden green and beige. These colors are back again this season, but the names have changed. Now one wants chalk blue, mauve, cucumber or bone. In addition there are shocking pinks, corals, orange, deep-sea blue, platinum and so on. They are available in single colors or in combination.

STYLES VARY TOO

And styles are as varied as colors. Caution, open-toed shoes are just not fashionable this season. Everything else cut out is all right, but the toes have to be left in according to the fashion magazines. Buttons and bows, tucks and pleats make interesting additions.

The little heel is high style, and a boon for those who are on their feet for long hours, or for those who like up and down the Tally hills.

TINTED HOSE SLENDERIZING

Tinted hose are popular, and dark tints lend an illusion of slimness to legs a bit on the heavy side. Key the color of hose to shoes and costume. They should give an unbroken line between hemline and floor.

Besides shoes, colors and styles are as varied in gloves and bags. In selecting accessories, however, remember that a well coordinated costume has no more than three colors. A color can be repeated once, but not twice.

Coeds To Vie For Title Of Sun Goddess

Seven Florida State University coeds will vie with seven more girls for the title of the 1961 Sun Goddess of St. Petersburg.

The Sun Goddess will be crowned March 25, at the annual Suncoaster's Coronation Ball. The Goddess is St. Pete's good-will ambassador to the North and Europe.

Last year's Sun Goddess, Sylvia Ludwig, was a student at FSU.

The seven FSU coeds in the Goddess Court are Rosemary Armes, Jane Ann Briggs, Ruth Coeppe, Patti Sue McCarty, Virginia Moore, Barbara Schafer and Ritchie Cooper.

Eighteen - year - old Rosemary Armes is a freshman majoring in elementary education. She is a member of Kappa Alpha Theta social sorority.

Barbara Schafer, 18, is also a freshman majoring in elementary education.

Jane Ann Briggs, 20, is a junior majoring in literature. Ritchie Cooper, 20, also a junior is majoring in education. She has pledged Delta Gamma social sorority.

Virginia Moore, 19, is a sophomore majoring in elementary education. She is a member of Kappa Alpha Theta sorority.

Twenty-two-year old Patti Sue McCarty is a graduate student doing post-graduate work in music. A 19-year-old junior majoring in education, Ruth Koeppe is a member of Sigma Sigma Sigma social sorority.

Back row: Felicia Lewis, Beverly Marchetta, Judy Merritt, Patricia Bassett, Jerry Elliott, Diane Raitey, Penny Howell, Nina Sue Reeves, Linda Geisler, Sandy Clary, Lynn Butler and Patricia Mack.

The 80th chapter of Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority was officially launched with the pledging of girls this semester under the leadership of five transfer actives.

The Epsilon Zeta chapter made Longmire their headquarters until the Kappa house can be completed next fall. Ground will be broken next month for the house which will be located on West Jefferson St.

The Kappa badge is a golden key, and pledges wear the Epsilon Zeta pin signifying completion of the new chapter. Kappa is the second oldest Greek letter sorority, and was founded at Monmouth College, Monmouth Ill.

The five active members are Lamoine Brittan, graduate student from Oklahoma, who is serving as president; Sally Montgomery and Marnie Read, both from the University of Georgia; Carol Grout and Lee Seiler from the University of Mississippi.

Jimmy Dorsey Band To Play For ROTC Military Ball

ROTC cadets and their dates will dance to the "sophisticated swing" of the Fabulous Jimmy Dorsey Orchestra" at the annual Military Ball on March 11, in Tully Gymnasium.

The formal dance, under the supervision of the newly-created Joint Army-Air Force Staff, will be highlighted by the presentation of the Queen of the Military Ball who is elected by the cadets.

All of the military organizations are contributing to the preparations for the affair and Village Vamps and Freshman Flunkies will assist at the ball.

FIRST TIME

For the first time, tree cokes will be served to formally attired girls and their uniformed escorts in the traditional red, white and blue setting.

The Jimmy Dorsey Orchestra, playing "Sophisticated Swing," "So Rare," "Song of India" and many other famous Dorsey hits, will be under the direction of Lee Castle, "adopted third brother of the Dorsey family."

Castle, called "The Prince of the Trumpet" by Jackie Gleason, was a long-time companion and co-worker of the famous Tommy and Jimmy Dorsey. He has played with such men as Artie Shaw, Glenn Miller and both of the Dorseys.

EIGHT YEARS OLD

Jimmy Dorsey, who played the saxophone for the first time when he was eight years old, had one of the most popular orchestras in the country during the "big band era" of the late 1930s and the early 1940's.

Duke Ibsens were established on a large scale during this period and Dorsey and his popularity are acknowledged as the greatest single factors in establishing the "jukes" as an American institution.

Dorsey was also one of the few performers to sell more than 40 million records.

BSU 'Hoboes' Are Working To Raise Mission Money

Baptist Student Union "hoboes" are working to raise funds to send two Florida State University students half-way around the world to Summer Mission assignments.

Norma DeCamp will spend the summer at a mission in Hawaii and Dawn Sheffield in Tanganyika, Africa.

The fund-raising goal of the "hoboes" is $1,150. Since the project began two weeks ago they have raised $130.

ODD JOBS

The "hoboes," BSU students, have special telephone committees to receive requests for odd jobs. They will paint, wash windows, do house cleaning work, wax, rake leaves, baby sit, as well as other jobs.

Anyone interested in having a "hobo" work for him, call the Union house, 222-2656.

CAR WASH

Tomorrow and for many Saturdays to come the "hoboes" will hold a car wash from 9 a. m. to 5 p.m. at the Student Union.

A group of the BSU students recently put on a play at an Auburn drama festival which won first place. The play, This Night Shall Pass, by Dorothy Clarke Wilson, was performed at Quincy last Sunday as part of the money-raising project.

The BSUers plan on performing this play at other area churches to add to the fund.

The 25-minute play is about the relationships which result from war. It concerns the fate of three lone survivors of a city, one of which bombed the city. The theme is that love must play a part in rebuilding the city.

CADET CAPT. ROBERT VAN GOODLOE . . . representing FSU was named the most outstanding corps commander at the Southeastern Air Force ROTC drill team competition last weekend. The competition was held at Dobbins Air Force Base, Marietta, Ga. FSU placed second in the contest.

Placement Conference To Be Held Next Week

The second annual Florida State University Teacher Placement Conference will be held next Thursday, Friday and Saturday, announced Dr. Garth K. Blake, director of Educational Placement and Internship.

Approximately 22 Florida county school systems will be represented, along with representatives from Albany, Columbus, Atlanta, and DeKalb County, Ga. and Bakersfield, Calif.

These representatives will conduct three separate group meetings so that students can become familiar with three different systems. Representatives will also hold 20 minute individual interviews with interested students.

LAST YEAR

"Last year," reported Dr. Blake, "some representatives came authorized to have students sign an agreement form for employment."

The purpose of the Conference is to assist FSU graduates in obtaining employment positions. It is also felt that such a conference is advantageous to the schools of Florida.

All FSU 1961 graduates, including graduate students, who are prospective teachers are invited to participate in the conference. Students should contact the Internship Office, 208 Education or call ext. 2346, in order to indicate a first, second and third choice of school systems in which they might be interested in securing employment.

GROUP MEETINGS

The group meetings will be used to give students general information such as salary schedule, living and working conditions, anticipated vacancies, and employment procedures. Arrangements for personal interviews will be made at group meetings.

Applications Due Friday

The deadline for applications for the editors and business manager of student publications has been extended to 5 p.m. Friday, said Georgiana Fry, acting chairman of the Board of Publications.

Applications are available at the main desk in Longmire and must be returned to room 20 Longmire.

Six applications have been received so far.

The only competition so far is for the editorship of the Smoke Signals with Merry Morehouse and Spence Guerin applying.

Scarlett Pogue has applied for the editorship of the Tally-Ho; Ben Sharp, the Florida Flambeau; and Leslie Powell, the Legend, which is the literary anthology.

Dianne Klinck has applied for the position of publications business manager.

Requirements for editorships are a 2.3 over-all grade average and two semesters of experience on the publication, although these requirements may be waived by the Board. The business manager should have 2.0 over-all grade average.

Coffee Hour Talk Is By Hunt Friday

Dr. Kelleg Hunt will be the featured speaker of the English Coffee Hour at 4 p.m. today at Westminster House.

Dr. Hunt, English professor, has chosen Lewis Carroll's book, Alice in Wonderland for his talk.

He claims that adults are beginning to read this book more often than children because of its various implications. Some of the original poems, which are used in Alice in Wonderland, as parodies, will be read.

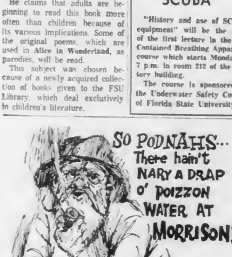
This subject was chosen because of a newly-acquired collection of books given to the FSU Library, which deal exclusively in children's literature.

Frosh Group Starts Board

A Freshman Advisory Council which will be governed by a constitution is presently being set up by the Freshman Class officers.

Its purpose will be to promote interest among freshman students in student activities.

Boyce Ezell, class president, said it would "help ease the burden of the class government" and that he hopes to see it go into effect next Fall. It must first be approved by the Student Senate organizations committee.



Representatives to the advisory council would be elected by the class to give representation to dormitories, freshman members of fraternities and sororities, freshmen living off campus, and those living in cooperative organizations.

Any student who is officially registered as a freshman is eligible for the advisory council.

FSU Opera Guild Produces 'Tosca'

Richard Collins will direct and sing the lead role in the upcoming production of Tosca by the Florida State University Opera Guild, March 17 and 18.

Puccini's popular opera will be sung in an English translation by John Gutman.

Collins will appear in the role of the Roman police chief, Baron Scarpia, who is the villain of the three-act melodramatic opera. Collins has appeared in the role in a number of professional productions, including one by the National Opera Company.

Tickets for the opera which will go on sale March 13, are $1.25 for students and $2 for the public. A double cast will give alternate performances at 8:15 p.m. in Westcott Auditorium.

SEDORE TO CONDUCT

Robert Sedore will conduct the FSU Opera Chamber Orchestra for both performances. The Blessed Sacrament School chorus, directed by Dr. Irvin Cooper, will provide the boys chorus for the opening scene set in a church. A selected opera chorus directed by G. S. Griffin will also perform.

A cast composed principally of students has been rehearsing nightly for the opera, which was first performed at the Costanzi Theatre in Rome Jan. 14, 1900. Just about a hundred years after the events of the opera are supposed to have taken place in that city.

Students playing the role of Floria Tosca, a famous singer, are Ethel Donaldson who has appeared in La Boheme, Waltzing Heights, and La Traviata; and Christine Buhrman who sang in Il Travatore at Brenau College. Gainesville, Ga., and in Bartered Bride at FSU. Both are students by Klelab Nikolaidi of the FSU music faculty.

ARTIST LOVES TOSCA

Cavaradossi, an artist who is in love with Tosca, is played by Leland Fox, and Wendell Bartholt. Fox has sung with the Masque and Lyre Opera Co. and the Metropolitan Light Opera Co. He was a member of the St. James Boys Choir in New York City for seven years. His opera roles include that of Pinkerton in Madame Butterfly and Othello. Barthoff spent four years in the United States Army Chorus, Washington, D.C. He has appeared in FSU productions of Carmen, Aida, and Carousel.

VALDOSTA PERFORMANCE

On March 23, Tosca will be presented at the Ritz Theater in Valdosta, Ga. The Valdosta Artist Series is sponsoring the presentation.

Some of the past productions of the Opera Guild include Carlisle Floyd's Susannah Desidua, Verdi's La Traviata, Rigoletto and Mozart's Cosi Fan Tutti. The most recent production was a joint production with the Speech Dept. of The King and I.

FSU OPERA GUILD . . . will present Puccini's opera, "Tosca" Friday and Saturday, March 17 and 18. Singing the role of Baron Scarpia, cruel chief of the Roman police, will be Richard Collins, director of the Opera Guild. In this rehearsal scene, Scarpia vents his anger on Cavaradossi, artist, played by Leland Fox of New York City, while Floria Tosca, famous singer played by Christine Buhrman of Lake Wales, tries to restrain her lover.

Talk On Evolutionary Beliefs Opens Library Forum Lectures

By BONNIE FREEDMAN
Flambeau Staff Writer

Dr. John Anderson, assistant professor of psychology, will continue the Perspectives on Religion series with a talk on "Does Man Need to Invent a God?", at 7:30 tonight in the Library Lecture Hall.

The Liberal Forum Lecture Series opened last Friday night with a speech on evolutionary beliefs by Dr. Sidney Fox, head of the Oceanographic Institute.

Dr. Fox, whose own research is concerned with the synthesis of protein, said, "I find myself as a scientist interpreting results that may have religious implications."

Beginning with the statement from St. Georgine that chemically all life is one, the scientist said, "The elephant, arctic moss, a pineapple, are of much the same composition."

He pointed out with the use of slides that the embryos of the fish, the pig, the chick, and the human are almost identical in their first trimester of development.

Man has undergone an intellectual evolution as well as a biological one, however, Dr. Fox remarked. Chapley, in Of Stars and Men, shows the first step of this development, when man realized that the Earth was not the center of the universe, and that further, this system was but one in a whole galaxy.

Charles Darwin recognized this evolution of the intellect, and according to Dr. Fox should have been given more credit for showing that man had evolved to higher images and abstract qualities, and, as more than an animal, had mental powers, moral sense, and social instincts.

Darwin's theory of evolution held that organisms evolved as a variation from a prototype, by selection of those organisms most suited to the environment, and by reproduction of the selected, the speaker explained. He believed that the ability to think was selective.

Dr. Fox also illustrated with a slide the concern of religion with evolutionary beliefs, showing the order of evolution now accepted.

Perhaps the ultimate question, he said, is the cause for cosmic beginnings, which led to stars and solar system, and consequently, Earth.

On Earth developed inorganic matter, which underwent certain changes under proper conditions to give rise to organic substances, he continued. This developed into organized pre-cells and cells, than plants and animals, and man.

From a crude form of response and memory came mental faculties, which evolved to direct a purpose and morals. Dr. Fox suggested, "Men's morals do not survive because they are good by an absolute standard, but when they survive, they are judged by man to be good."

Man's further intellectual development will be toward an increased awareness, Dr. Fox felt. He said that man synthesizes his own purpose, but emphasized that this made it no less real.

Summarizing, the speaker said evolutionary beliefs were, collectively, a continuum which purports to answer man's questions about his universe, and to him, "God is those forces beyond my control."

Dr. Walton Leaves FSU For Position In Athens, Greece

Dr. Francis Walton, head of the Florida State University Classics Dept. has resigned to accept a position as librarian of the Gennadios Library at the American School of Classical Studies in Athens, Greece.

Francis Walton

Dr. Walton, who joined the FSU faculty in 1932, will leave for Greece this summer. During the present academic year he has been a visiting professor of classics at Cornell University. He is well known as an authority on Greek religion.

The Library in Athens is a research collection of rare books and other materials relating to Greece, with particular emphasis on the Byzantine period, the period of Turkish occupation, and the Greek War of Independence. Much of the material there is unique, and the Library is a focal point for scholars of all nations working on topics dealing with post-classical Greece.

Dr. Walton was previously associated with the American School in 1956-57 when he received a Fulbright research grant for study of religious festivals of ancient Greece.

HAVERFORD COLLEGE

He was graduated from Haverford College with an A.B. in 1928, and was awarded his M.A. in 1930 and his Ph.D. in 1936 by Harvard University. His graduate work was in classical philology.

His publications include articles in Encyclopedia Britannica, a translation of Diodorus of Sicily, vol. VI, and numerous reviews, chiefly on Greek religion, Greek literature, and classical archaeology in the American Journal of Religion. He had 31 articles, including "After-Life," "Aphrodite," "Asclepius," and "Atargatis" in the Oxford Classical Dictionary (Oxford, 1949).

FSU Composer Will Write Opera For NYC Company

Florida State University composer Carlisle Floyd has been commissioned to write a new opera for production by the New York City Opera Company. Its premiere performance will be in New York sometime in 1962.

Called The Passion of Jonathan Wade, the opera will have a setting in South Carolina during the early days of Reconstruction. It is the story of a Union officer in the army of occupation and his conflict of allegiances between duty and conscience.

Floyd's commission is from a recently announced $950,000 grant by the Ford Foundation to further work in American opera. The opera, for which Floyd already has written the libretto, is his fifth.

One of the composer's operas, Susannah, first performed in 1955, won the New York Music Critics Award following its first performance in Tallahassee in 1957 and it has been performed numerous times. Since then he has written Wuthering Heights, on commission for the Santa Fe Opera Company. This was performed by the Opera Guild here last spring.

Also on a Ford Foundation commission Floyd wrote a series of five songs on motherhood called "The Mystery," on a text by the Chilean Nobel prize winning poet, Gabriela Mistral, and this was first performed by the San Antonio Symphony with Phyllis Curtin last November.

JOHN CARRADINE and Virginia Riser portray a scene from Archibald MacLeish's play "J. B.," which will be the next Artist Series production. It is scheduled for March 20-21.

Pulitzer Prize Play

Next Artist Series Is MacLeish's 'JB'

By GLENDA POWERS
Flambeau Staff Writer

Tickets for Archibald MacLeish's Pulitzer Prize-winning play J. B. an Artist Series production scheduled for March 20-21, go on sale Friday morning in the Westcott Ticket Office.

John Carradine, Shepperd Strudwick, Frederic Worlock, and Olive Dunbar star in the Elia Kazan production, which ran a successful year on Broadway.

Tickest for the two 8:15 p.m. performances are free to students with activity coupon eight. They are $3.50 for individuals outside the University.

Following the New York premiere, Life Magazine referred to the two-act modern play as a "Broadway triumph!" Newsweek called it a "theatrical thunderbolt," and the Associated Press said "a rare theatrical event of a lifetime."

J. B. won for its author, Archibald MacLeish, his third Pulitzer Prize, his other two being in the field of poetry. Currently a Boylston Professor at Harvard, MacLeish has served as president of the American Academy of Arts and Letters.

CLASSIC STORY

Although modern in itself, the play is based on the classical story of Job. Two unemployed actors, Mr. Zuss and Nickles, at a balloon and popcorn salesmen in a circus which has been playing the Old Testament story of the suffering Job, are dissatisfied with the interpretation of the story.

They make up their minds, late one evening when the show is over and the tent is empty, to play it themselves as they think it should be played. The ensuing events, however, are not at all as they had expected.

Elia Kazan has directed such films as On the Waterfront, Gentleman's Agreement, East of Eden, and A Face in the Crowd. Broadway plays he has directed include A Streetcar Named Desire, Cat on a Hot Tin Roof, and The Dark at the Top of the Stairs.

John Carradine made his stage debut in New Orleans in 1925 in Camille and has since appeared in numerous pictures, has been seen both on Broadway and on tour in Shakespeare, murder mysteries, and even musicals.

Contrary to popular belief, he is American rather than English. One of his most distinguished Broadway appearances was in The Madwoman of Chaillot.

Shepperd Strudwick, who portrays J.B., has appeared in several Broadway hits, in more than 40 motion pictures, and in more than 100 major television appearances.

Frederic Worlock, Mr. Zuss in the play, made his stage debut in 1906. He has been seen in more than 60 films, his latest having been Spartacus.

Olive Dunbar, Sarah in the play, frequently appears in dramatic television programs. She made her professional debut in The Joyous Season with Ethel Barrymore, and her latest work was with the touring company of Sunrise at Campobello.

Killian Warns:

Popular Scientism Makes Scientists 'High Priests'

By PATSY GUTHRIE
Flambeau Staff Writer

"The elevation of the scientist to the status of a high priest in a society that worships science" is regarded by Dr. Lewis Killian as the most dangerous aspect of popular scientism.

The social scientist attacked "scientism" in a discussion centering on science and moral values in the third Last Lecture, sponsored by Mortar Board Thursday night.

Noted in the field of race relations, Dr. Killian introduced his lecture as a model of a "last lecture" he would give in a course in Introductory Sociology.

The role of the scientist in race relations has been tremendously misunderstood, particularly since the U.S. Supreme Court cited scientific studies in their school desegregation decision of 1954, Dr. Killian said.

He pointed out that, although present evidence indicates that segregation constitutes a psychological handicap to Negroes, the cited studies hardly qualify as scientific proof.

No criticism of the courts is intended, Dr. Killian said, since judges must make decisions as jurists, not scientists.

Just as the social scientists did not create the desegregation decision, they cannot solve the crisis it precipitated, although they can make the contribution of narrowing down the realm of debate, if people want to listen to them, Dr. Killian remarked.

For example, the sociologist can suggest ways of either maintaining segregation more efficiently or of accomplishing desegregation more smoothly, but they cannot make the ultimate choices for free citizens in a democracy, Dr. Killian concluded.

Dr. Killian carefully distinguished between science, as a method of acquiring knowledge and the body of knowledge but up through that method, and scientism.

Scientism is characterized by the idea that science is the measure of all truth, he explained. "Scientism is a faith, a religious heresy that is particularly dangerous because it masquerades pure and absolute "fact" including no elements of faith," he emphasized.

While the scientists disagree about the nature of science and knowledge, the laymen often understand neither science nor its philosophical premises and bestow an aura of great prestige upon anything that even appears "scientific," the sociologist noted with concern.

SCIENTISM

Scientism is manifested in the implicit belief that science can soon develop techniques for dealing with every area of life, including teaching, child-rearing, mate selection and religion, Dr. Killian observed.

Stressing that he did not intend a criticism of science, Dr. Killian maintained that, "as a method of attaining the kind of knowledge that lies within its scope, science is the most valuable tool man possesses."

The method is logical, empirical, free and individualistic, and its use "frees man from the limitations of folk wisdom, of his own uncontrolled observations, and of his immediate sensory environment."

Scientism perverts science, because it seeks to find values through science, contrary to one of the basic postulates of science, he claimed.

According to Dr. Killian, science "can describe the range of human values, but it cannot validate any of them. It can analyze how people act when they experience the emotion called love, but it cannot make them feel love."

LIMITATIONS

Another limitation of science observed by Dr. Killian was that "It can define what men have known to be good, but it cannot relieve them of the responsibility of choosing between good and evil, nor give them the courage to follow what they themselves perceive to be good."

The choice of values always rests upon a moral judgement made by individuals as human beings," and is a non-scientific choice, he insisted.

"But to argue that because values are beyond the scope of the scientific method does not mean that they are unimportant, completely relative, or simply the ephemeral creations of human groups," he affirmed.

Just as the scientist cannot say which values are "best" in any absolute sense, he cannot assert as a scientific proposition that none of them are best, Dr. Killian pointed out.

"There is abundant and convincing evidence that neither an individual nor a society can long survive without some fairly well-integrated set of values by which to guide their actions," Dr. Killian added.

THE UNIVERSITY SINGERS . . . conducted by Dr. Wiley Housewright, will join with the University Symphony conducted by Robert Sedore in one number of an inaugural concert in honor of President Gordon Blackwell on Thursday evening, March 9. Soloists for Kodaly's "Te Deum" will be, left to right, Wendell Barthoff, Ethel Donaldson, Chris Buhrman, and Thomas Holt.

FSU Was 'Short-Changed'

By TONI DI CARLO
Flambeau Staff Writer

"The cabinet shortchanged the state universities in its salary recommendations," said Sen. L. K. Edwards Jr., according to the Tampa Tribune Saturday.

Edwards, chairman of the Senate Appropriations subcommittee studying university budgets, said that he was speaking for himself, not for the whole committee.

"I am committed to no new taxes. But I firmly believe that it will be false economy to fail to pay our university professors adequately," stated Edwards.

The Tribune further reported that the senator said "the salary recommendations of the cabinet budget committee would force the universities either to keep the pay of their top teachers at substandard levels or reduce research to levels that are unacceptable in first class institutions.

FAITH

"He believed that the cabinet acted in good faith. But the formula on which it based its recommendations was unrealistic."

Edwards "became convinced" after his committee's trip to the state universities last week that "salaries are the number one problem."

The cabinet recommendation which the senator termed "unrealistic" provides for raises up to 29 per cent if the professors are willing to take heavier teaching loads.

Other members of the visiting committee were: J. A. Boyl, John Rawls, Bernard Parrish, Kenneth Ireland Jr., J. J. Griffin Jr., Ben Hill Griffin Jr., George Anderson, W. K. Scott, George Stallings, George Stone and Robert Kennedy, consultant.

Dr. Broward Culpepper and W. G. Hendricks representing the State Board of Control at the Thursday meeting.

President Gordon W. Blackwell acted as host for the group and talked with them about FSU's budgetary needs.

The committee members were most courteous and gave us every opportunity to present our views," which Dr. Blackwell tried to do," according to Dr. Milton W. Carothers, university vice-president.

However, the legislators made "no comments as to what their decision would be" while on campus, Dr. Carothers said.

Due to a lack of time, the committee was able to visit only the Science Bldg. and the new accelerator buildings. Most of their time was spent discussing the university problems with President Blackwell.

The other members of the visiting group were unavailable for comment.

Second place was awarded to Phi Delta Theta Fraternity and Zeta Tau Alpha Sorority.

The Phi Delts, directed by George Moore and accompanied by Rose Marie Regero, sang "Greenfields" by Gilkyson and Rogers and Hammerstein's "There's Nothing Like a Dame."

Barbara Youmans, director, and Margaret Dyche, accompanist, led the Zeta chorus. Their selections included "Ora Pro Nobis" by Williams, and Roff's "The Little Peach."

Landis Hall and Pi Kappa Phi Fraternity placed third.

The Landis women, directed by Mary Crawford and accompanied by Betty Forche, sang "I Feel Pretty" by Berstein and "Lacrymosa" by Mozart.

Tom Thomas directed the Pi Kaps as they sang "When All Is Still" by Miles and Ringwald's "Paul Revere's Ride." They were accompanied by Janet Duncan and Nancy Mobley.

The judges included Dr. Wiley Housewright, professor of music education, Dr. Lewis Pankuskie, assistant professor of music theory, and Paul Yoder, graduate assistant in voice.

The winners were decided on a point system based on pitch, rhythm and overall musicality; understanding of the text, projection and diction; and presence, personality, and stage deportment.

You Can't Dignify Cheating

Let's not dignify common cheating by calling it plagiarism. And common cheating is an apt description of composing or rewriting a written assignment for another student.

Plagiarism as a charge, implies that the individual accused had the taste to select an article written by another individual, coup it an attempt to pass it off as his own. To a degree this is a left-handed compliment. But plagiarism is generally easy to uncover by an instructor who knows his field and his students.

THE COMPOSITION or rewriting of another's theme or term paper is something else again. This is a complete reliance on the ability of a second party to earn a passing mark in a class. The chiseling student doesn't even have to acquaint himself with the works of established authors or authorities.

Further, where English papers are concerned, editing would be, if not cheating then very much borderline. The paper will not be indicative of the abilities of the person receiving a grade if that person does not do all the work himself.

Seaching out typographical errors in itself is not much offense. It often is best if a second party goes over typed material to search out transposed letters, etcetera, because the writer himself will often have handled the material to such an extent that typographical errors just won't register.

CERTAINLY WHETHER or not the practices referred to are widespread, and we must agree with Senator Dobson in his statement that "it still is not conscionable."

Plagiarism must be an Honor offense, but it should be included under cheating, not made a catch-all for cheating offenses. And the penalties that are meted out in composing and rewriting cases and perhaps in editing cases too, should be equally binding on all parties involved. In a case of outright plagiarism, it seems that only one student would be responsible. Of course, with the senatorial flair for being thorough, FSU may eventually earn fame as the only university in the world that prosecutes William Faulkner, Carl Sandburg, Lillian Hellman, ad infinitum, as partners in plagiarisms.

Ignore What You Don't Like

The only reason that Florida State does not have an admitted drinking problem is because it is ignored by those very persons who are responsible for upholding the university standards.

As far as our public is concerned, the possession or consumption of alcoholic beverages on this campus is entirely illegal. The actual case, however, is quite different.

EVEN THOUGH WOMEN students are the only ones who seem to be brought before the courts on drinking charges, it is usually found that their source of liquid refreshment is from members of the opposite sex. There seems no way to either control or enforce drinking regulations among men students, even though it is common knowledge that there are infractions in open violation of the existing rules.

There is the frequent complaint that we have a double standard at FSU. There seems to be some preconceived notion that rules were written for the women to abide by and for the men to outsmart. As far as enforcement is concerned, the women get the penalties and the men, the raised eyebrows.

AS LONG AS we allow the fatherly attitude of "boys will be boys", to continue there is no logical reason for maintaining our drinking regulation. We play the hypocrite in too many ways already. Our public is not oblivious to the fact that there is drinking going on on this campus. It is also equally enlightened about the steps that have not been taken to enforce the regulation.

We have a court system effectively working to control and eliminate the drinking problem on the campus as far as women are concerned. But there is nothing, including administrative action, which seems to have any effect on the men. There is no actual report of more than token disciplinary action for such infractions, and then it seems to be the result of pressure, the result of being unable to conceal the truth of the drinking matter.

WHO HANDLES THE drinking cases for men? The Dean of Men's office is apparently too busy with other affairs to handle the drinking situation. The men's fraternity gives the impression that it wouldn't know what to do with a drinking case. The IFC advisor would smile and say, "What proof do you have?"

This leaves an ugly hole in our picture of the university and its "well-organized" policy on drinking. We say that we don't have drinking on the campus, and then lament the increase in cases.

In order to support this lie we should give it the semblance of respectability and provide a method of enforcement—even if it is only on paper.

Coma Was Chic But Depressed

By LESLIE POWELL

Coma was chic but depressed.

She wore a black silk sheath, loads of pearls, and shoes not much more than a couple of beals tied on her feet. She had shaved off her eyebrows and penciled in neat new brows. Her gold tooth had been replated and was resplendent. She'd even had it engraved front and back. The front initials were C. C., and according to her, those on the back were BWJ. This, she said was "Ralph Waldo Jones, boy poet in the frenzied manner."

WITH ALL THE finery and sudden worry about appearance, I couldn't help wondering what bothered Coma. The story as I got it was this: She'd decided to hike over to the men's gym one afternoon to peek at the football players. This was great fun because they always peeked back, at least once, anyway.

It had been an especially trying day. Coma's schedule that black day had been Bait and Fly Casting at 10 a.m. and Women's Glee Club at 11 a.m. She took a nap before lunch, a nap after lunch and played pinball from 2 'til 4 p.m. Feeling somewhat better, she had strolled gym-ward and was headed into an ROTC platoon standing rigidly under the mesmerizing influence of a microphone in the hands of a couple of officers and gentlemen.

ON IMPULSE, Coma grabbed the mike and yelled "Charge, troops." The troops charged alright; but in wild retreat. That tore it. Coma decided that from then on she'd slick up a little bit, and that very afternoon she bought a jar of Wildroot Cream Oil.

Now she was gloomy because all her old friends failed to recognize her. The man of her dreams, a bachelor professor, for whom she had a special five year plan, had looked over her head in class and pronounced her absent for days on end. She was depressed. She had to choose between couth or happiness.

SUDDENLY SHE decided. You sensed it coming. She ripped off all that facade and stood revealed in her greasy coveralls, rolled to the knees. She took her lacquer off, shook it out vigorously and slapped it back on at a cocky angle.

A squad of ROTC cats bopped past, Coma's eyes lit up. "The heck with Angel Flight," she said. "I'd rather join 'em than fight 'em." And she charged away yelling "Hey, Field Marshall. Hait one time. Wait for me!"

Letters to the Editor

Stop TV Lectures

TO THE EDITOR:

Why doesn't the English Department admit that it has failed and discontinue the broadcast of the English 101 and 102 television lectures?

The purpose of these lectures as stated in the syllabus is to provide "visual aids which could not be provided otherwise for each of the sections of Written Communication." These visual aids most of the time turn out to be a series of rules taken almost exclusively from the textbook which are printed on cards and telecast to the audience—a captive audience, since attendance is required.

THERE IS VERY little subject matter which can be taught in a writing course. Composition can only be learned by writing, making mistakes, having these errors pointed out, and trying to improve. This course, minus the TV, is based on these principles. Good instructors are working capably within these bounds and are producing some very solid results. The television lectures, however are completely supplementary and superfluous. They go over material which the text covers ad nauseum. When the textbook fails to provide substance for the thirty minutes, the instructor brings in anything from a first edition of Samuel Johnson's dictionary to a movie tour of the library.

Nor are the lectures themselves any great achievement in television production. Audio mistakes are fairly frequent and the lecturers themselves seldom go through a telecast without stumbling over at least one word or phrase. Dr. Paul Stoakes, who handled the 101 lectures, has a rather pleasing TV personality, but the script can only be described as "corny."

THE 102 LECTURER, Dr. Griffith Pugh, on the other hand, is completely unsuitable. I in no way wish to attack Dr. Pugh personally or diminish his intellectual achievements or capability. However, his slow, wonderful, Southern drawl can only produce sleep and boredom, when coming from a television set.

There is only one solution. Discontinue the lectures immediately. They are only wasting the time of everyone concerned, students and teachers.

Possibly some way exists to utilize television in teaching communications, but this present method is not it.

How About Some Chess?

TO THE EDITOR:

On the weekend of March 17, 18 and 19, an intercollegiate chess meet will be held on the campus of the University of Florida in Gainesville, Florida. At least three schools will be represented, and possibly more. Teams have been entered from Florida, Florida State and Stetson. All schools have the option of entering more than one team if sufficient players are available.

ALTHOUGH WE have enough players for one team, it occurred to me that other students on the campus might like to be considered. The present team which will represent FSU was selected from among chess players on the campus known to me. Very likely there are a few chess players on the campus about whom I don't know?

Accordingly, would you please carry a brief announcement to the effect that any student fundergraduate only) who would like to try out for the FSU chess team should contact me immediately. My campus phone is Ext. 3320; my office is Room 136, School of Business Building. Thank you.

Writer Says 'Thank You'

TO THE EDITOR:

I would like to thank you for your editorial on Friday's (Feb. 24) paper regarding Student Senate's passage of the bill authorizing incorporation of Student Enterprises. Both for myself and for student government, let me express my appreciation for your complimentary remarks.

However, it should be pointed out that the bill was co-sponsored. Since Senator Dick Hume would not mention that his name was omitted as a sponsor of the bill, let me take this opportunity to point out to the Student Body that Dick had as much, if not more, to do with incorporation as I did.

MYGNON CHAMPION

Critique Is Criticized

TO THE EDITOR:

Mark Hoener Witham's review of Assignment In Judea seems to me to be an example of either sheer incompetence or a deliberate attempt to suppress value judgement for a reason best known to the reviewer. I have no basis for believing thus latter, and so I shall presume the former.

What doesn't Mr. Witham do? He doesn't choose to consider whether the play is successful or not. I may represent an easily discredited and radical minority viewpoint, but it seems to me that this is an essential part of any criticism that aspires to even undergraduate respectability.

THE PLAYRIGHT, Mr. Welch, has a very delicate problem in this play of interpreting a great deal of expository material into a fairly conventional dramatic structure without losing the narrative tension and fullness of characterization necessary for successful drama. His solution is not so exemplary that it can be ignored. The same is true of the other strengths and weaknesses of the script. To say, as Mr. Witham does, that the actors themselves are the raw materials and that the playright is "rapidly exposing life" is not to criticize. It is rather to painfully expose the reviewer's own lack of dramaturgical insight.

I will concede as far as the acting is concerned that Mr. Witham was forthright enough to vigorously admit that he admired it all without qualification. I hope we can expect as much least as much in his next review.

New Peace Corps Fights Communism

By BILL TROTTS

Last Wednesday, President John F. Kennedy issued an order that may have the most far reaching effects of any presidential act in the decade of the 60's. As he had promised in a campaign speech delivered in San Francisco in October 1960, the President activated the Peace Corps as a partial satisfaction of his expressed desire, "that some appropriate way be found to take advantage of the skills, the talents, the devotion, and the idealism which are inherent in America's young people; and to utilize the services of those properly trained . . . to help other people help themselves."

BY SETTING THIS organization into action the leader of the most affluent society in the world has declared that his nation will actively strive for better living standards for all peoples of the world, on a non-political, non-military basis. This is probably the greatest blow that could be struck against communist propaganda, which portrays America as a nation which spends half of its wealth on military "defense." President Kennedy should be lauded for taking swift action on a matter so closely related to world peace. While others seem content with mere "avoidance of war," our President has challenged American youth to make use of their surplus talents and ideals to establish understanding and respect throughout the world society.

An appropriate motto for the Peace Corps might be this statement by Albert Schweitzer, "Example is not the best method of teaching, it is the only method.

ALTHOUGH THE mechanics of the corps' operation are not fully determined, there is enough information to make these predictions. The terms of service will be 3 to 4 years, and pay will be comparable to enlisted pay in the military. Volunteers, agronomists, engineers, and hygienists will be the most needed specialists. The training period will last six months and will emphasize on the culture and language of the area to be served. Draft deference will be offered corps members during the term with the corps, but expiration will not be provided beyond their tour of corps membership. Corps members will go only to countries where they and request a particular area. The work will be difficult and demanding.

This is only the first of many steps that must be taken before the United States is ready to demonstrate to the world that a people and a nation are truly concerned with the welfare of people of the world. Many groups of volunteers, such as American Friends Service Committee, Operation Crossroads Africa, and International Voluntary Services, have done excellent work with these limited resources, but the time has come when the American people must demonstrate their collective interest in the welfare of a person to person basis.

PRESIDENT KENNEDY has wisely chosen the youth of America to lay the foundation for a world of understanding and peaceful settlement of differences. In the words of Democratic Congressman who initially suggested the Point Four Youth Corps, Representative Henry S. Reuss of Wisconsin, "If we cannot afford to send many thousands of U. S. Army officers to Turkey and Iran and Pakistan to train military forces, surely we can afford to send a small number of young Americans to train farmers and teachers." America can thus demonstrate her humanitarian interest in peace when Congress is willing to match each dollar spent for "defense" with a dollar expended in an unquestionable cause for peace.

Then and only then will a nation be known to the world as a nation of peace-loving people. The communists will not afford the type of competition we have offered in the Peace Corps, and they cannot win against the ideals of Western civilization. Young American youth put into practical action.

A Modest Proposal

TO THE EDITOR:

I would like to demonstrate my appreciation, in public, to the University Court, in behalf of their forthright campaign against liquor. In a case recently before the court, twenty-six women students were found guilty of committing the serving of alcoholic beverages, a heinous offense, irrespective of the low alcohol content (approx. 3% plus or minus 0.1 per cent of the drink. My sleep is undisturbed, when I contemplate the decisive vigilence devoted in preventing alcoholism in the student body.

CONSISTENCY is a virtue, and, in line with the most virtuous University Court, I wish to make a modest proposal. Noting that many food flavorings are alcoholic, I believe that the banning of vanilla ice cream (alcohol 0.2 plus or minus 0.1 per cent,) and its derivative foodstuffs, is the logical first extension of the principle set by the court. Surely no one wishes to have hordes of ice cream addicts wallowing in unseemly debauchery, away from Sunday sundaes and gorges dotting our campus.

Consider the infamy our university would suffer. Women students, stripped of all restraint, an erotic frenzy on their lips, the observers perfumed with vulgar fertility rites in the rose street. Or older students seen alleviating the DT's with ice cream cones and vanilla milk shakes! Hatchets in hand, let the court descend en masse upon these hideous dens of shake machines, and destroy them, in the greatest tradition of Carrie Nation! I am assured that the Court will, with the measures necessary, eliminate this, the root of Satan.

And since we are at such a good start, why not banish the devil from the system entirely! If the University Court were to initiate an "All Sex League—

Four FSU Spring Sports Open Competition Soon

Veterans Pack Baseball, Golf, Tennis Squads; Thinclads Go With Neophytes

A full slate of spring sports swings into action with the baseball, track, golf, and tennis squads due to open their campaigns shortly.

Veterans will compose the bulk of the baseball, golf, and tennis teams, but track will have to by make its dual debut with a lot of unseasoned cindermen.

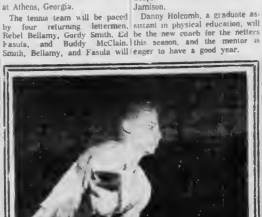
An experienced lineup should provide the punch for another outstanding baseball season. The head coach, Danny Litwhiler, stated that "We have a better ball club than last year," and added that it is probably one of the better ball clubs in the history of the school with adequate balance.

Veteran hurlers Frank Davis and Jim Daniel will be backed up on the mound by Ray McShane. Other first-stringers will probably be Neil Martin, Jimmy White, Jack Dull, and a quartet of excellent sophomore catchers, Buddy Teagle, Bob Sherman, Buck Hutchinson, and Gordon Johnston.

Coach Danny Litwhiler's baseball team, starting off its season on March 15 against the Georgia Bulldogs, meets some of the nation's toughest collegiate competition, including Auburn, Navy, Florida Southern, Georgia Southern, and Miami. Also on tap is a four-day tournament at Tallahassee with Duke, North Carolina, Western Michigan, and Florida scheduled to participate.

The Seminole cindermen have a lofty season ahead of them which extends through June 17. Coach Leogi's track team has already competed in the Coliseum Relays at Montgomery, placing sixth, and the Memphis Invitational, finishing fourth.

Long has been looking for a consistently good cross-country squad, but hopes that the team will progress as the season passes.



Steve Long and George Smith, who tied for first place in the Memphis tourney, will be relied upon to perform the high jump honors. Herb Craft, broad jump, Ed Hays, pole vaulter, and Don Townsend, shot putter, will lead the Seminoles in the other field events. Quentin Till, Bill Davis and Terry Long will be the mainstays in the running events.

"We are looking forward to going through an undefeated season," commented head golf coach, Bill Odenkirk. Dickie Dunlap and Downing Gray, team co-captains, Frank Malara, David Oustad, Rock Fralleigh, and John Fraleigh round out a large group of lettermen who got a chance to prove their abilities against the University at Florida at Gainesville yesterday.

Highlighting the year will be the All-American Invitational Tournament at Houston and the Southern Intercollegiate tourney at Athens, Georgia.

The tennis team will be paced by four returning lettermen, Rebel Bellamy, Gordy Smith, Ed Fasula, and Buddy McClain. Smith, Bellamy, and Fasula will all be fighting to take the first position on the squad, but they will have to contend with Paul Scrapa, a transfer student, Don Loop, Bill Warwick, and Jamie Jamison.

Danny Holcomb, a graduate assistant in physical education, will be the new coach for the netters this season, and the mentor is eager to have a good year.

Bill Beavers works out on the Parallel Bars

Georgia Tech Defeats FSU To Win Ga. Gymnastics Title

Florida State's gymnastics representative lost the Georgia AAU meet for the first time in the history of the school last weekend. The Seminoles were beaten 69.85 by Georgia Tech.

Bill Beavers led the Gymkana squad to the second place finish by garnering 28 points, including four first places, in the tight meet in which the lead changed hands repeatedly. FSU led until the last event, when Tech swept the top three places in the horizontal bar to win the title.

Beavers' first places were scored in the All-Around, the Free Exercise, Side Horse and the Parallel Bars. The Seminole gymnast also took a second in the Still Rings and fourth in the Long Horse.

Jack Ryder scored a pair of firsts for Florida State by taking the long-horse in both the trampoline and the tumbling events.

Rick Miller was also a big winner for FSU. Miller took second in the Free Exercise, fourth in the Horizontal Bars and third in the Tumbling.

Other Seminoles placing included Ray Schaefer, with a fifth in the Free Exercise and sixth in the Still Rings; Mitch Wenstock, with a sixth in the Side Horse; Jerome Edwards, with a third in the Rope Climbing, and a fourth in the Flying Rings; and Joe Green, with a second in the Trampoline and a second in Tumbling.

Fedor Makes All-American, Leads Scorers

Dave Fedor, 6-6 Seminole forward, was chosen for honorable mention on both the United Press International and Associated Press All-American squads recently.

Fedor led all Seminole cagers in the statistical department this season for the second year in a row. Fedor broke into college basketball last season by setting the record for sophomore scorers with 524 total points.

Fedor, the state's leading major-college scorer this season, finished the 1960-61 campaign with 456 points and 236 rebounds. He averaged 19 points per game and 14 rebounds per tilt. Fedor record 12 or more points in every one of FSU's 24 tilts in the run his string of games that he has scored in double figures to 40.

Fedor also pulled down 12 or more rebounds in 40 of 49 games, and grabbed 16.3 per cent of all Florida State rebounds this season, a figure that ranked him among the top ten in the nation in this category.

For two seasons of play, Fedor has knotched 982 points for a 20.1 average and 736 rebounds for a 15 rebounds per game average. Fedor also led the tribe in free throw percentage with a 80.4 average, making 86 out of 107.

Ray Swain finished second in tribe scoring by turning in a 17.4 points per game average while scoring 413 markers. Swain made 168 of 313 field goals for a 53.7 shooting percentage. Fedor finished with a 50.7 per cent mark.

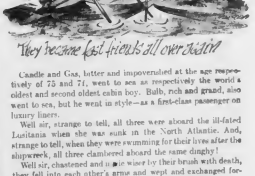
WORDS: THEIR CAUSE AND CURE



Today let us take up the subject of etymology (or entomology, as it is sometimes called) which is the study of word origins (or insects, as they are sometimes called).

Where are word origins (insects) to be found? Well sir, sometimes words are proper names that have passed into the language. Take, for instance, the words used in electricity: ampere was named after its discoverer, the Frenchman Andre Marie Ampere (1775-1836); similarly ohm was named after the German G. S. Ohm (1787-1854); watt after the Scot James Watt (1736-1819), and volt after the American Fred C. Bulb (1843-1912).

There is, incidentally, quite a poignant little story about Mr. Bulb. Until Bulb's invention, all illumination was provided by gas, which was named after its inventor Milton T. Gas who, strange to tell, had been Bulb's roommate at Cal Tech! In fact, strange to tell, the third man sharing the room with Bulb and Gas was also one whose name burns bright in the annals of illumination—Walter Candle!

The three roommates were inseparable companions in college. After graduation all three did research in the problem of artificial light, which at this time did not exist. All America used to go to bed with the chickens. In fact, many Americans were chickens.

Well sir, the three comrades—Bulb, Gas, and Candle—promised to be friends forever when they left school, but success, alas, spoiled all that. First Candle invented the candle, got rich, and forgot his old friends. Then Gas invented gas, got rich, bankrupted Candle, and forgot he old friends. Then Bulb invented the bulb, got rich, bankrupted Gas, and forgot his old friends.

"They became fast friends all over again."

Candle and Gas, bitter and impoverished at the age respectively of 75 and 71, went to sea as respectively the world's oldest and second oldest cabin boy. Bulb, rich and grand, also went to sea, but he went in style—as a first-class passenger on luxury liners.

Well sir, strange to tell, all three were aboard the ill-fated Lusitania when she was sunk in the North Atlantic. And, strange to tell, when they were swimming for their lives after the shipwreck, all three clambered aboard the same dinghy!

Well sir, chastened and humbled by misery by their brush with death, they fell into each other's arms and wept and exchanged forgiveness and became fast friends all over again.

For three years they drifted in the dinghy, shaking hands and singing the Cal Tech rouser all the while. Then, at long last, they spied a passing liner and were taken aboard.

They remained fast friends for the rest of their days, which, I regret to report, were not many, because the liner which picked them up was the Titanic.

What a pity that Marlboros were not invented during the lifetimes of Bulb, Gas, and Candle! Had there been Marlboros, these three friends never would have grown apart because they would have known how much, despite their differences, they still had in common. I mean to say that Marlboros can be lit by candle, by gas, or by electricity, and no matter how you light them, you always get a full-flavored smoke, a filter cigarette with an unfiltered taste that makes anyone—including Bulb, Gas, and Candle—settle back and forget anger and strife and smile the sweet smile of friendship on all who pass.

© 1961 Max Shulman

Another peaceful smoke from the makers of Marlboro is the brand-new unfiltered king-size Philip Morris Commander. Try one soon and find out how welcome you'll be aboard.

AN IDEA BY GRADUATE STUDENT . . . E. B. Carter (third from left) has been parlayed into a "fast ball" technique which makes Florida State University's tandem Van de Graaff accelerator a highly efficient tool in an inquiry into the nature of the atomic nucleus. Shown at the targets end of the accelerator are graduate students (L to r:) W. E. Hunt, M. K. Mehta, Carter, and G. E. Mitchell.

Kellum Beware:

Accelerator Pitches 'Fast Ball' Particle

Van de Graff can pitch a "fast ball" alpha particle now at an energy rate of 18 million electron volts.

Nuclear physicists working on the Florida State University tandem Van de Graff accelerator claim that the speed has never before been reached on similar accelerators. A speed of 12 million volts has been reached on other tandem accelerators.

The high energy, maximum possible for alpha particles, is important, according to Dr. R. H. Davis, who has been directing several experiments on the accelerator, because "it makes possible the study of many new reactions of the atomic nucleus with precision techniques."

By studying these reactions scientists develop their conceptions of nuclear structure. The alpha particle, or nucleus of the helium atom, has been a most important projectile for use in the study, Dr. Davis said.

IMPORTANCE

It's importance lies in the fact that the alpha does not retain or fix atoms, or spin, and therefore can be handled by a scientist in the same way a baseball batter can handle a straight ball better than a curve.

A half dozen experiments have been run using the new and powerful beam. Preliminary results will be reported at a forthcoming meeting of the American Physical Society.

OTHER ACCELERATORS

On this continent the others which are installed and in use are at Chalk River National Laboratory in Canada, at University of Wisconsin and at California Institute of Technology, while Argonne National Laboratory, Rice University and Oak Ridge National Laboratory are soon to put like machines into use.

On the FSU machine, which has been in use for several months, the new high energy has been achieved, said Dr. Davis, by fully utilizing the accelerator and selecting negative ions into the alpha particle beam.

Details of the mechanism of energy production are not clearly understood, he said, and further study is under way. Meanwhile the beam provides a new research tool for the study of nuclear phenomena.

Diana Butler To Solo With FSU Symphony

Diana Butler, flutist, and a Clarinet Ensemble will perform with the Florida State University Symphonic Band tonight at 8:15 p.m. in Westcott Auditorium.

The program will be conducted by Dr. Manley R. Whitcomb, director of bands at FSU.

Miss Butler will play the "Concertino for Flute" by Cecile Chaminade. She was featured with the Band during its concert tour of West Florida and Alabama last week.

The Clarinet Ensemble, composed of Linda Carr, Sherrick Hiscock, Bernard Linger, Sylvia Lynes, John Munn, Virginia Nolting and Valerie Wilson, was also featured with the Band last week. They will perform von Weber's "Concertino for Clarinet."

In addition, the program will include the "Symphony in Bb" by Paul Hindemith and numbers by three British composers, Gustav Holst, Ralph Vaugh-Williams and Gordon Jacobs, which are staples in the band repertoire.

The concert will close with the "Passion in Paint" by Henri Rene. This composition presents the composer's impressions of the paintings, "At The Moulin Rouge," "Persistence of Memory" and "L'Absinthe."

Anderson Claims Religion Necessary For Development

By BONNIE FREEDMAN
Flambeau Staff Writer

"The individual, to develop healthily, must fill certain needs, many of which are labeled as religious." Dr. John Anderson, assistant professor of psychology, summarized in answer to the question, "Does man need to invent a God?"

Speaking in the second week of the series, Perspectives on Religion, Dr. Anderson traced a being's psychological needs through all his stages of development.

There are primary needs, without which an organism cannot live, such as air, water, food, and sleep, he pointed out.

There are also secondary needs that contribute to a person's health, as love, curiosity, activity, the speaker continued, and there are tertiary needs that are satisfied differently in the different stages of growth.

Dr. Anderson began his discussion of the tertiary needs with the first stage of development. "In the pre-natal stage," he said, "there has as yet not been demonstrated a need for cultural or religious values."

In infancy, the tertiary need that needs gratification is a sense of trust, he suggested. In early childhood, the need leans toward a sense of self, of autonomy.

In middle childhood, initiative must be developed. In fact, even up to early adolescence, there is "no specific need for or against religion," he continued.

The younger adolescent view-church as his senses perceive it; how the place looks, smells, sounds, and how much time he has to spend listening to that man.

The adolescent years are a time of physical turmoil, and lead to the searching questions "who am I?" and "why am I here", the psychologist said.

"As the army has pointed out, intelligence for a change, the teen-ager finds physical prowess important," the speaker said.

The concrete beliefs of religion have usually been discarded early in an aware person, Such thoughts as "only good people get to Heaven" are not important to the adolescent when he begins to form his philosophy of life and religion, the psychologist said.

The later stages of development do not have as much of an effect on the acceptance of a religion as these early ones do, Dr. Anderson suggested

"Religion seems to fill needs in many individuals, to have somehing to call upon in successes and failures, and to set out rules."

The next speaker for the series will be Dr. Grace Cairns, assistant professor of philosophy. The Liberal Forum series is presented at 7 p.m. on Fridays in the Library Lecture Hall.

Contrary to rumors, there was no quarantine on the University Hospital last week.

"This was a false rumor," said Dr. J. R. Shuler, chief physician. "We merely closed the infirmary to visitors because we didn't have room for them. The infirmary had only two empty beds on each floor and this was too crowded for visitors."

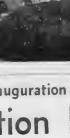
Inauguration Symposium

'Education For World Leadership' Is Topic

"Education for World Leadership" is the topic of the inaugural symposium today at Florida State University.

Three outstanding educators and public figures will discuss the problems of education at 2 p.m. in Westcott Auditorium.



Dr. Frank Graham, Dr. George Allen and Dr. Logan Wilson will be the main speakers with Dr. Marion Irish, head of the Government Dept. acting as moderator.

Dr. Graham, a mediator for the United Nations, will be the opening speaker for the symposium. He is a former president of the University of North Carolina and has served as a United States Senator. He was the first chairman of the Oak Ridge Institute for Nuclear Studies and has been UN representative for India and Pakistan.

A diplomat for 30 years, Dr. Allen has just recently served as director of the United States Information Agency. Dr. Allen has had an outstanding as well as varied career, having been the youngest ambassador abroad from the U. S. when President Harry S. Truman appointed him to Iran.

He has been ambassador to four foreign countries and twice has served as assistant secretary of state. He is one of twelve Americans to have been given the permanent classification of career ambassador.

Dr. Wilson, the third member of the panel, has served as a sociologist on the faculties of Harvard, University of Maryland, Tulane and the University of Kentucky, and is presently chancellor at the University of Texas. In addition to his various duties and activities in relation to his own particular field, Dr. Wilson has written numerous articles and books, including The Academic Man.

SYMPOSIUM SPEAKERS . . . are Dr. Frank Graham (t. top) Dr. George Allen (c. top) and Dr. Logan Wilson (bottom).

Other Events Will Be Held During Blackwell Inauguration

The next event in the two-day inaugural program will be an informal luncheon at 12:30 today in the Suwannee Room for more than 500 delegates and faculty members.

Following the education symposium this afternoon, President and Mrs. Gordon Blackwell will receive guests in their home from 4:30 to 6:30. Delegates and all faculty members and their wives are invited to the final inaugural affair.

The 228 delegates from educational institutions and organizations, along with 200 FSU faculty delegates and nearly 100 representative students, began registering yesterday afternoon.

A concert by the University Symphony and Singers last night, opening the weekend's activities, was one of two events open to the general public without invitation. The symposium this afternoon is also open.

The inaugural convocation began at 10 this morning with the procession of delegates into Westcott Auditorium. Gov. Farris Bryant, members of the State Cabinet, Supreme Court, Board of Control and others were among the 200 official guests.

Greetings were extended by the governor for the State of Florida, President Carl Burker for the student body, President Fred G. Drake Jr. for the Alumni Assn. and Dr. Lewis M. Killian, chairman of the Faculty Senate steering committee, for the faculty.

The Rt. Rev. Hamilton West, bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Florida, gave the invocation. A selection from FSU composer Carlisle Floyd's cantata "Pilgrimage" was sung by Mrs. Elena Nikolaidi of the School of Music faculty with the composer at the piano.

Mrs. Ramona Cruikshank Beard played the processional and recessional.

No formal program is planned for the luncheon except the invocation to be given by FSU Chaplain John Carey.

Background music for both the luncheon and the president's reception will be provided by a string ensemble composed of Robert Sedore, Robert Glenbach, Nancy Hearn, Donald Michel and John McLean.

Only about 40 special guests will have reserved seats at the luncheon, Social Director Marie Williams said.

No Parking

No parking will be permitted by the faculty, staff or students from 6 a.m. to 4 p.m. Friday on University Way, University Circle, Ivy Way, or on the Home Economics Bldg., the A Bldg and the Music Bldg., pending bids.

Because of the inauguration, no automobiles will be allowed to enter the main gate in front of Westcott or the Ivy Wall. Call St. entrance except those driven by out of town delegates.

Publication Appointments Approved For Next Year

By JOAN ABBOTT
Assistant News Editor

Spence Guerin was elected editor of the Smoke Signals for next year by the Board of Publications Wednesday, defeating Merry Morehouse by a 4-2 vote.

Unopposed editorial candidates whose appointments were also approved by the Board were: Bev Sharp, Flambeau; Scarlett Pogue, Tally-Ho; and Dianne Klinck, publications business manager.

The Board did not elect an editor for the Legend '62, the literary anthology, but rather received applications. Chairman Nancy Henderson said that application blanks would be available at the main desk in Longmire. Deadline for applying for the editorship is April 10.

Guerin has been staff artist for the Flambeau for two years and art editor of the Smoke Signals. He proposed making what is generally termed a "general interest magazine" into a humor magazine.

"I believe this is what the students want," Guerin said. He added that he would encourage humorous contributions to the magazine, especially satire, and would give them preference over more serious literary works.

TO ENTERTAIN

The purpose of the Smoke Signals should be to entertain: the anthology should be the place for literature of a more serious nature, Guerin maintained.

Part of his program is also to establish a continuing feature.

Miss Morehouse, who has been production manager of the magazine this year, proposed establishing a more standard format.

A program of intensive recruiting, training sessions and departmentalization of news and features were among the proposals Sharp made for improving the Flambeau. Sharp has been Flambeau sports editor for a year. He also worked on several other publications and was editor of his high school paper, which received an all-American rating.

RECRUITING LETTER

Sharp plans to send out a letter to all freshmen women next week explaining the opportunities for work on the paper. Since the discontinuation of the journalism school here it is necessary that "We recruit students early in their college career so that we may train them and so they may have opportunities for advancement into editorships," he said. Sharp is also planning to send out recruiting letters to high schools in the state which have classes in journalism.

Training sessions for new staff members will begin March 28 and continue weekly through April 19, he announced.

Miss Pogue, who has been assistant and classes editor of the Tally-Ho, has no specific plans for changes in the yearbook. She said she felt that it should serve as a record of the activities of the university and any changes would be to better serve the student body.

PROCEDURES

Current Tally-Ho editor Harriet L'Engle said that Miss Pogue had served with her in various capacities and that because of this she was familiar with the procedures for publishing the annual.

An accounting major, Miss Klinck has been assistant business manager of student publications for three weeks. She is also treasurer of her sorority.

Dr. Lawrence Campbell requested that the Board include in the minutes the fact that he was "deploring" the lack of competition for the editorships. He also recommended that the Board do everything in its power to insure that there would be competition next year.

Friday Says Freedom Is Necessary

Universities must be firmly committed to academee freedom if they are to have "the leadership and the competence to assume an appropriate role in national and international affairs," the inaugural speaker said this morning.

FRIDAY

Delivering the inaugural address Dr. William Friday said such universities are those where there is assurance of "the right of the faculty member to be responsibly engaged in efforts to discover, to speak, and to teach the truth"

The president of the Consolidated University of North Carolina was a colleague of the new FSU president who served as chancellor of the Woman's College of North Carolina before coming here last September.

In addition to having academe freedom, such a university must be "committed to good teaching and to the liberal tradition," Dr. Friday said.

"What is there about America for which we now hold the responsibility on behalf of aspiring peoples everywhere"' he asked.

"It is our belief in the dignity and worth of the individual human being and in his capacities for growth, for development, and his ability to govern. It is our democratic convictions which was must extend through education.

DUTY TO HARMONIZE

"I it seems to me that our duty is to so harmonize good teaching with the demands of scholarly research and extended service that the ideals of liberal education will be faithfully served.

"The new sense of urgency for reaching greater heights of excellence in education, boro of our international responsibilities, adds compelling urgency to our task.

"The increasing importance of research, the demand for services of extension, and the compelling necessity for any modern university to play its part in the international community are evident. And what is true of universities is particularly true of state universities.

"In what kind of university will we find the leadership and the competence to assume an appropriate role in national and international affairs?" he asked.

FACULTY CONFIDENCE

"It will be a university that strives at all times to maintain and enrich its competence and quality of its taculty. We speak here of able, well-prepared, and highly motivated men and women who have a love for teaching and reseaeh.

"A reasonable and competitive salary scale is required, for good men are scarce and the demand for able scholars vastly exceeds the supply.

"There must also be adequate facilities — classrooms, laboratories, library. These are the indispensable tools of the student, the teacher and the scholar

"It will be a university that knows its identity with the public schools.

"It will be a university that encourages responsible student self-government as basic to education for responsible citizenship.

"Finally, and particularly the province of a state university, it must be an institution that envisions its campus as co-terminous with the boundaries of the state. For the people must be served in ways appropriate to a state university."

Young GOP's Organize Sat. In Longmire

The Young Republicans Committee of Florida State University will hold an organizational meeting from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday in the Senate room in Longmire

Roger Sherman, organizational president, said that the purpose of the group will be "to promote better government in Florida and in the nation through an active two-party system." He urged all interested students to attend the meeting.

In discussing the group's relationship to the Young Democrats Club, Sherman commented, "We will probably work with the Young Democrats for three years, and then against them."

"The committee began to take form at the Florida Republican Caucus in St. Petersburg and will be under the auspices of the National Federation of Young Republicans.

Temporary organizational officers will be elected at the Saturday meeting.

Task Lurks Under Ceremony

The pomp and circumstance which today surrounds the inauguration of Dr. Gordon W. Blackwell as president of the Florida State University is merely a temporary facade for the awesome task of the presidency.

He brings to this position a reputation as a scholar, and experience gained as a teacher and administrator at some of our nation's leading universities. It will take every ounce of his ability to carry out the demands of the job.

After the academic procession and the formalities of welcoming a new president to his job, Dr. Blackwell is faced with a university writhing with growing pains, and a legislature which can provide the funds necessary for such well-rounded development. His will be the inspiration and stimulus that can make this university grow better even as it grows larger. His is the administrative ability to tap the pulse of an institution of this size, to know its feelings, its needs, its wishes.

Because of his position of leadership in relation to the administration, faculty and staff, Dr. Blackwell will be faced with all the ultimate decisions concerning the university's policies and the educational direction that it takes. As he has stated, "Fundamentally, it is the intellectual life that education should foster."

Finances Are A Problem

The first problem, and the most coercive, is the one of finances. There must be adequate financial support to provide quality faculty and staff, to provide sufficient facilities and to be able to afford to maintain these facilities once they are provided.

The state legislature holds the actual budget in the palm of its collective hand. For the first time, 200 students from this university will appear as lobbyists before their hometown senators and representatives during this legislative session. These students carry with them Dr. Blackwell's challenge to do justice to their university. They carry with them a strong insight into the background of their university's needs. But, most of all, they carry with them the backing of their president.

Dr. Blackwell has had to make himself familiar with the financial needs of this university almost from the moment of his arrival. He has received the recommendations and has expressed his opinions on the overall budget prepared by the Board of Control. Without these expected funds, his hands might just as well be handcuffed behind his back.

The state cabinet has announced that it would recommend an increase in salaries for the state universities, but at the same time, it refused to consider an increase in the number of paid faculty positions. Along with the increase in salaries, comes the expectation that the university will be able to increase the work load of each faculty member. This leads into another basic problem confronting the new president.

Quality Education

Along with the suggestions of increased salaries and increased hours, the cabinet has seen fit to consider lowering the academic requirements of the state institutions to admit more students. This is a question of the balance between institutional integrity and state control.

The present requirements for admission are not the highest. The students who are being educated here are but average citizens who will eventually move into our communities and gradually take over a degree of the government of the affairs of not only their own regions, but of the state. In Dr. Blackwell's own words, "We must take steps to insure that first rate education is available, first of all, to the students of ability and not wasted upon the merely affluent."

To the president will go the position of conveying this impression effectively to the legislature, to those responsible for the admission requirements. It will be his duty to convey the feeling that the quality of education which is so desired cannot be gained at the cost of lowering standards.

The president must guide his university so that he may effect a balance between the areas of research, teaching and a degree of extension of services. He must be able to lead FSU into a balance between the arts and sciences and the professional fields.

Overall Perspective

It is extremely simple for one area of a university to gain more attention than others, particularly if its already enjoys a good reputation. Unfortunately, such a policy only weakens the university as a whole, for the unbalance undermines the more underveloped areas through administrative shortsightedness. Through an optimum of faculty participation in policy and a clear overall guidance, the president can strengthen his university's worth and effectiveness.

One of the most important aspects which the president determines is that of academic freedom. Through his guidance and foresight can come the "spirit or atmosphere in the institution which places emphasis upon the intellectual life and upon the freedom of the mind . . ." which he has declared to be important. Dr. Blackwell has said that, "We must awaken them (students) from the ennui of unthinking conformity and complacency to the excitement of curiosity, and from this excitement we must lead them to the awful responsibility of knowledge."

Dr. Blackwell must insure this academic freedom to his faculty and to his students. FSU's faculty members must have the freedom to teach what they consider the truth without fear of reprisal from the community or from the legislature.

In the future, the president is faced with such questions as integration, over-emphasis on scientific research and vocational training, and even a constant redetermination of the goals of the university.

He has already anticipated some of these questions, and has taken a preliminary stand, but the constant shifting nature of opinion and ideals will force him to be continually flexible and farsighted.

Dr. Blackwell today wears robes indicative of the oldest heritages of education. It is his job to maintain their prestige and to make them more significant in a modern community. Through his use of them and his skill, these robes can acquire a new dignity and a new purpose, one which admits only progress—a progress tempered with the highest of quality.

Secretary Adams To Speak On Campus

TO THE EDITOR:

As students of today and voting citizens of tomorrow, it is our duty and responsibility to be informed and educated on the functions of our government. In an effort to assist in informing and educating the student body of FSU, the Young Democratic Club of FSU is sponsoring a "Know Your State Government" campaign. We would like to invite and urge all students to take part in this program.

We are very fortunate to have a most outstanding leader of our State Government to speak to us on Tuesday, March 14th at 7:30 p.m. in the Library Lecture Hall. This is our Secretary of State, Tom Adams. He will speak on the functions of his office.

Mr. Adams is very gracious to give us some of his most valuable time to come to the campus. Let us not let him down—let us show him that the students of FSU are interested in our government and its functions. This will also give the students an opportunity to meet Mr. Adams personally.

President, Young Democratic Club

Judicial Branch Composed Of Three Levels Of Courts

By MYGNON CHAMPION

In view of the current debate over the Honor System, perhaps no more appropriate time than the present could be found for an explanation of our court structure at FSU.

Like our national judicial system and most of our states' court structures including that of Florida, the judicial branch is composed of three levels of courts: lower, intermediate and higher.

AT THE TOP of the judicial hierarchy is the Honor Court. Contrary to much popular misconception, Honor Court's jurisdiction is not confined to trying violations of the Honor Code. It also hears appeals from University Court (Judiciary) and Traffic Court determines questions of constitutionality and impeaches Student Government officers after charges are brought by Student Senate.

If the proposed revision of the Honor System that is now under discussion is passed, the Honor Court will also have jurisdiction over cases of lying and stealing. The court presently has jurisdiction over these cases as part of the Honor System; if the proposed revision is enacted, lying and stealing cases will continue to be tried by Honor Court but as a separate category of cases outside the Honor System.

AT THE INTERMEDIATE LEVEL of courts are the traffic Court and the University Court, more commonly known as Judiciary. Actually there are two Judiciaries. (Men's Judiciary and Women's Judiciary) which normally meet separately and handle different cases. When they meet together, they are collectively known as the University Court.

AS HONOR COURT hears appeals from the intermediate courts, so University Court and its two Judiciaries hear appeals from the lower courts (House Councils and Off-Campus Court). In each case, the procedure for appealing a case to a higher court is to file a written statement with the court office (4th floor of Longmire) stating the desire to appeal the case and the reasons for appealing it.

IN SPITE OF THE SIMPLICITY of the appeal procedure, very few cases are appealed to a higher court. Perhaps this is because so few students are aware of their right to appeal. Perhaps it is also because few students are dissatisfied with the penalty received in the court of original jurisdiction.

Perhaps some explanation should be made of which cases go before the entire University Court and which go before Women's Judiciary or Men's Judiciary. The greatest volume of cases by far is handled by Women's Judiciary. These cases are remarkably varied; they include major violations of women's rules, such as drinking and visiting men's apartments; they also include cases of coming in more than 30 minutes late or going to House Council on numerous occasions.

MEN'S JUDICIARY handles very few cases. In general, this court handles only those cases involving men students only which are turned over to them by the dean of men. University Court handles cases involving both men and women students.

The vast majority of students, especially women students, are much more closely familiar with the lower courts than with either Judiciary or Honor Court. At the lower level are found the House Councils and Off-Campus Court. These courts handle violations of 'minor' women's rules, with House Councils trying case in the dorms and Off-Campus Court trying cases in sorority and FHO houses.

Let's Get Serious

Reform Can Breed New Crimewaves

By GERRY DOBSON

Conservatives look with interest, but not a little dismay, at Jack Kennedy's "New Frontier." The question that arises in their minds is "Can these programs espoused by our President do more harm than good?"

It is inherent in the nature of "reform" that the "evils" the reform is supposed to correct are much more in the public eye than the possible repercussions of the reform itself. It's the nature of the "reform" beast.

ONE MIGHT SAY that conservatives believe in evolution—any changes based upon past observations, while liberals are willing to strike out in any direction seeking solutions; they are "activists" . . . or "experimentalists" . . . they enact a reform and then observe the results. It is unfortunate that often the results of such programs are worse than the evils they attempt to cure. And just try to undo the reform! Once the government enacts a program, it's here to stay. I defy someone to name a bureau or organization which has voluntarily gone out of existence when the need for it had disappeared—or has even voluntarily taken a cut in appropriations.

To illustrate the dangers inherent in bad reforms, even the good ones — one might consider the government regulation of narcotics.

BEFORE DOPE was regulated and "outlawed" in 1914, a dope addict merely had to enter a drug store and say "a pound of opium, please." Dope was plentiful and cheap, because being unregulated, it was subject to the laws of supply and demand, and there was a good likelihood that a dope fiend could support his habit himself without injuring his fellow man.

Then the reformers repealed this facet of a person's right to destroy himself if he so desired. Dope was made illegal —was subjected to government regulation. The only way dope addicts could obtain the object of their desire was through illegal means; Of course, organized crime was most willing to meet the need. The syndicates could set their own prices—the cost of being a dope addict went up drastically — which meant that many more persons were forced into crime, or other practices injurious to their fellow men to meet the price.

Another unforeseen result was that organized crime, seeing the tremendous profits which could be derived from the illegal sale of dope tried to "hook" other people on the habit, pushing dope on young children, or anyone else they could sucker into its use. In the old days when there was no particular profit in dope, no one tried to get people to use it to the extent that organized crime does today.

DID OUTLAWING dope solve the problem in the forty-seven years which have passed since the "corrective" measure was enacted?

It is to be hoped that President Kennedy will carefully consider the consequences of the programs he would enact, keeping in mind that their dangers are not as evident as their benefits, and that any "reforms" undertaken by the Kennedy administration are probably irrevocable.

Sweet Old Ladies And The Countdown

By LESLIE POWELL

Watch out for sweet old ladies.

The sweeter they appear, the more they bear watching. The sweeter they look, the more you can bet that they've done and seen everything within their means.

They may paint Christmas Cards in their dotage, but back in 19-ought-10, they were painting the town.

OLD LADIES KNOW everything. They know all about you before you've had the chance to figure it out for yourself. Oh no, they're not psychic, but there are so many of them, and they've been figuring the odds for generations and accumulating a staggering number of statistics that would make the big insurance corporations file their charts and graphs in the cellar in shame.

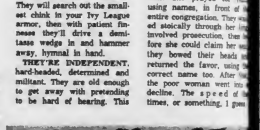
Like, if you've lived in a small town, you know how it goes on wedding days. First, all the little old ladies put on a sweet smile and a sweet bonnet. Then they go out and buy the bride a gift. After this chore, they go to the cemetery, then back downtown to buy a calender and start the countdown. New citizens had better not arrive more than two days on either side of a previously selected date as set by the matriarchs . . . or mummy's name will be Mrs. Mudd.

Little old ladies are like that. They will search out the smallest chink in your Ivy League armor, then with patient finesse they'll drive a demitasse wedge in and hammer away, hymnal in hand.

THEY'RE INDEPENDENT, hard-headed, determined and militant. They are old enough to get away with pretending to be hard of hearing. This puts any adversary at a distinct disadvantage. For they never know if you made a point or not. Generally, the opposition will be that the most telling remark possible is "Yes Ma'am."

One little old lady can put out against progress and moralize a neighborhood. It's those that insist on driving and driving their Wobblies until the executors dispose. Worse, the dogpoop Molly. A will run when the last glitterbugs from Detroit see even start. Either the girls outsmart the aged, have broken its will.

Once, when Marilyn Monroe was news and had the cinema world by the wishbone, I sat behind a couple of old ladies come to view the star.



"LOOK AT THAT," said, as Marilyn swished along the roadway. "Now we didn't I look like her? I could've used that."

"Yes, well," the other answered, "She isn't Mary Pickford is she?"

"Thank God!"

"Yes, well Mary would have driven a film from Niagara Falls, don't know?"

Personally, I have seen an old lady stymied once, and that was a first. This occurred after a Sunday School tiff between the girl in question and a couple of kids. She prayed for them using names, in front of the entire congregation. They stood stoically through her litany involved prosecution. Then before she could claim her scalp they bowed their heads and returned the favor, using the correct name too. After that the poor woman went into a decline. She died of old times, or something, I guess.

Tune In Another Channel

TO THE EDITOR:

Below is a letter which I submit for publication in the Flambeau.

Last week's letter attacking the TV lecture series of the Written Communications program was well thought-out.

The freshmen taking Written Communications suffer from an ailment common to many who take course work on television: whether they consciously think it out or not they tend to compare the educational program of the regular entertainment program, note the obvious difference in melodrama, glamorous faces, fast-moving action, technical precision in the use of studio facilities, and then come to the puerile conclusion that one is not as entertaining as the other, hence one should be done away with.

The process of learning is under no obligation to be entertaining. If a person is inclined to fall asleep during the process, it is more likely its fault. Some of the most informative and exciting lectures are inevitably dull to the dull mind. Either you get something of what we bring to a subject.

Ill results in our high schools all over the nation reflect the too-strenuous effort to make course material entertaining: (1) dilution of subject matter (2) superficial students, who aren't made to work hard, who keep wondering why teacher isn't as delightful as Jack Benny.

If the writer of last week's letter wants to be entertained, it is suggested that he go home and tune in on a different channel.

Speaker Is Misinterpreted

TO THE EDITOR:

The Flambeau does FSU a real service in its inclusive and clear coverage of the important lectures on the campus. There is always a danger of the columnist misinterpreting the speaker and it seems to be that this rarely happens. There is another possible source of misrepresentation to be considered. It is the practice of having someone other than the columnist write the headline for the article. This makes misrepresentation all the more possible. It would seem that a very close consideration would be necessary to prevent misinterpretation.

I refer you to Bonnie Freeman's article on Dr. Anderson's lecture (Perspectives on Religion Series). It was an accurate summarization of Dr. Anderson's main points. However, the headline was grossly in error. The composer of the headline must not have read the article or else did not comprehend what he read. Whether this error was due to a personal bias of the composer or just his carelessness, it remains a grave misrepresentation. To "create" a headline "Anderson Claims Religion Necessary for Development" from the article . . . "The individual, to develop healthily, must fill certain needs which are felt in a belief religious" or—"Religion seems to fill needs in man" individuals, to have a committee to call upon in successes and failures, and to set out edicts" speaks very poorly for the composer's comprehension and also for his responsibility to the public. Let's not insult the local sheet downtown please.

The Primitive Era

Only fourteen years ago the green, rolling campus the western end of College Avenue was entirely pop- ed with crinolines and pony tails, which are indeed sant things to have a green, rolling campus popu- with.

t all this came to an end when frugal legislators decided to ash the green, rolling campus and the animal pen in Gaines- ur both sexes. Men who sought escape from the den in the of the state migrated to Tallahassee and girls who liked if the odds were right, left town.

men, came athletics.

The first team in Florida State University history was some- of a farce. it lost all five games decidedly. Very little is about this particular agregation except that it has been ad that the team was filled with so much dissention that the was split over what formation to run. The team was violently over the T-formation and the single wing and the coach ot settle the dispute. So FSU has two teams; one ran the wing when it played and the other ran the T.

he next year Dr. Don Veller made his first appearance as oach of the upstart grid team. He changed the team's ame to and won 24 out of the first 28 games.

the Seminoles were invited to the Cigar Bowl in Tampa urning back that city's own University decisively. This is the owl game FSU has ever won. In this victory, the upstart gave a slightly favored Wofford squad from Spartenburg, make their mark in FSU history.

ams Better Than Surroundings

During this period, the teams were better than their surround- FSU at that time had to practice on the grassbare practice on the West Campus which has since been converted into a recreation pit. Here they dressed in an old band shell built like Mabry Air Force Base.

The first collegiate games in Tallahassee were played in old Doak Field, where the high school staged their contests.

Physical properties of the FSU athletic department were not their peak

It was that old bus that the circus had until last year for ramps." Veller recalls. "One time we were going down to a ball game and one of the fellows was late to catch the bus. I had a strict rule about being late so we left without him.

He grabbed his gear later and began hitchhiking to the game. In the meantime the bus had broken down and the rest of the team was sitting beside the road when this fellow gets out of a car to say hello. He then catches another ride and beats the to squad to the game."

During this primitive period, Florida State played one of its unusual football games.

This memorable tilt was scheduled with the University of the Commonly called Sewannee, which is located on a mountain overseas.

During this particular game, a heavy fog began to settle on the Tennessee mountain while the clash was in progress. When the intermission at half time was finished, the Sewannee players took the field for the second half. However the fog was so thick that FSU did not even see them on the field.

New Stadium And Subsidation

In 1950, the new stadium was finished and named after the President of the University, Doak S. Campbell.

The Florida State broke their new home in properly by finishing the season undefeated; the first and only Florida college team to accomplish this feat.

The Capital City National Bank brought out a special check commemorating the occasion and townspeople were excited about the future in athletics. They started to push for a subsidized team. They wanted to be in the big time.

This drive was successful because in 1951 the University had voted for athletic subsidation but wouldn't use it. The gridders had to work at a rate of $1-an-hour to earn their scholarship money during this season—but townspeople continued to pressure the University for a big time, subsidized program.

This brought to a close "simon pure" football at FSU and paved the way to subsidation in 1952.

And it brought to a close a gloriously primitive era when Florida State University was a terror on the gridiron.

Two Tank Titans Tilt Tomorrow

Strong Seminoles Invade Florida's SEC Champions

By MARK HILLIS
Flambeau Sports Writer

Florida State's once-beaten tank team will travel to Gainesville tomorrow to meet their arch-rival, the University of Florida, in the Gator pool.

Florida, the Southeastern Conference Champion, has already fallen to the Seminoles once this season The Tribe shellacked the UF invaders 64-31 in the Florida State pool earlier in the season and the Gators will be out to revenge the humiliating defeat.

The powerful mermen of Gators have just recently been crowned SEC champ for the third consecutive year. In the championship three-day meet, the Gator mermen amassed a total of 139 points to down the runner-up University of Georgia Bulldogs by a 40-point margin. All total, the Gators won 10 of 14 events and established a new SEC meet record in the 400-yard medley-relay with a time of 4:04.0. However, the Seminoles have been clocked under this time in the past.

The sophomore-studded UF squad will be headed by Jeff Oromaner, 100-yard Backstroker; Harry Wilder, 100-yard freestyler; Terry Green, 200- and 440-yard freestyler; and Eddie Reese, 200-yard individual medley contender.

One of the evenings most colorful events will be the clash between All-American diver Curt Genders, of FSU, and SEC champ Steve McBride, of UF.

Genders has defeated McBride in every meet in which they have both competed during his entire collegiate career. During that span, Genders has defeated only once and that was by teammate and fellow All-American Bob Weber. The senior diver has copped All-American honors every year since his sophomore season.

In taking eight of the 11 scheduled events in the previous FSU-UF meeting at Tallahassee, the Seminoles established 16 various records. Four school records, five FSU pool records, and seven FSU-Florida meet records were reset.

Sophomore Pete Davis and All-American Buck Hiles each set three individual records. Junior Paul Thompson was the top individual performer as he erased four previous standards and played a major part in three others.

For four of Florida State's swimmers this will be the last dual meet of their college careers and the final one against the Gators. Coach Bim Stults was high in praise of his senior members of the Seminole squad.

"Buck Hiles and Curt Genders have been the backbone of the team this year and the nucleus of the squad for four years. Carl Butler has also been a contributing member and point-getter during his swimming career. Although he didn't compete on last year's team Paxton Briley has helped the team tremendously," added Stults.

The Seminoles are now sporting a streak of seven straight victories in dual meet competition With one loss at the hands of SMU. the Tribe's record stands at 9-1.

Coach Stults is optimistic about the up and coming season finale with Florida. He had these remarks to make.

"The University of Florida team has improved considerably since our meet with them and it will be very close. We will be hard pot to beat them again and I don't look for us to beat them as badly as we did last time."

Florida State Tracksters Invade UM In Quest Of First Dual Win

By BRAY and WARDEN
Flambeau Sports Writers

Florida State University's cindermen open their dual meet season tomorrow at 1:30 p.m. when the Seminoles meet Miami's Hurricanes at Miami.

This will be the first meet of the season for the Hurricanes while the Seminoles have already seen action in the Coliseum Relays at Montgomery, Alabama, and at Memphis, Tennessee, in the Memphis Jaycee Indoor Relays.

Coach Mike Long feels that many of the first places will be fairly evenly contested. However, the Seminoles strength should be evident in the high jump, the low and high hurdles, the broad jump, the 440, and the half-mile.

The Hurricanes promise to be strong in the pole vault, the discus and shot put, and the shorter sprints.

In last year's meet, the Seminole, defeated the Hurricanes in Tallahassee with a score of 95-41. Long feels that this year's meet will be a good one with the Seminoles taking it as a result of their greater depth.

The Seminoles Bill Davis, Quentin Till, Steve Long, and George Smith have been key performers in the two previous meets this season.

Davis and Till have contributed heavily in the relays in both meets, and Steve Long and George Smith have been key performers in the two previous meets this season.

Davis and Till have contributed heavily in the relays in both meets, and Steve Long and George Smith tied for first place in the high jump at the Memphis Jaycee Indoor meet. These Seminoles should be at their best against Miami Saturday.

The probable entry list for FSU will be:

Shot Put—Don Ostergaard, Barry Topper, and Jeff Clark.

Discus—Clark and Ostergaard.

Javelin—Jim Higgins, Topper, and Bill Welch.

Pole Vault — Ed Hays and Franklin Ford.

Broad Jump—Herb Kraft, Keith Crawford and Ford.

High Jump—Steve Long, George Smith and Mike O'Brien.

Mile Run — Don Roberts and Kent Mills.

440—Quentin Till, Terry Long and Tom Houston.

100—Craig Johnson and Crawford.

880—Bill Davis, Brent Haley, and Jack Brockomith.

220—Till, Johnson and Mike Hamilton.

Two Mile Run—Mills and Roberts.

Low Hurdles—T. Long, Dave Ellis and Welch.

High Hurdles—Welch, Ford and Ellis.

Mile Relay—Johnson, Houston, Davis and Till.

Gators Beat FSU Golfers

By MIKE HAZELWOOD
Flambeau Sports Writer

The Florida State Seminole golf team lost its first match to a tough University of Florida team.

The Seminoles lost to Florida 21½ to 5½ on Florida's home course Monday afternoon.

"The play on the greens made the difference," said Coach Bill Odneal. "Our boys had been putting on fast greens and theirs were slow, also they knew how to putt them and could read the breaks."

We are the only team that Florida does this to. Against any other team they play, they are just an average team, but against us everything is pitted," continued Odeneal.

One thing that hurt the golf team was the Gainey's torrid shooting. Florida as a whole finished 13 under par. This means that each of the six players on their team was two under par on the average.

The outstanding man for the Seminoles was Downing Gray. He had seven birdies.

"Downing played the steadiest and putted for more birdies than anyone else, including our opponents.

One other thing that hurt the golf team was the fact that the three Florida foes each had a best ball of 65. The best ball for any of FSU's three teams was a 66 scored by one team of Downing Gray and Frank Malara.

The second team, composed of "Dickie Dunlap," said the coach leigh, had a best ball of 69. Manning Nordone and Chuck Keating made up the third team and had a best ball of 71.

Dickie Dunlap," said the coach "played tremendous golf, he outdrove all of the opponents by at least 50 yards."

Wednesday afternoon the Seminoles golf team will be competing against the University of Florida, University of Georgia and Rollins College in the Florida Intercollegiate Tournament at Ocala, Florida.

Two approaches to the "man's deodorant" problem

If a man doesn't mind shaving under his arms, he will probably find a woman's roll-on satisfactory. Most men, however, find it simpler and surer to use Mennen Spray Deodorant. Mennen Spray was made to get through to the skin, where perspiration starts. And made to work all day. More men use Mennen Spray than any other deodorant. How about you?

One of the best investments you'll ever make...

You know what you invest in advancad ROTC . . . two years of classroom time and outside study.

But just see how handsomely your investment pays off.

First and foremost, there's the proud moment in Graduation Week when the gold bars of a Second Lieutenant are pinned on your Army uniform . . . and deep inside the warm sense of accomplishment at having made it.

There's immediate help in meeting expenses . . . a subsistance allowance of $535 for the two-year advanced ROTC course. Uniforms and military textbooks paid for. $117 for your six-week summer camp training, plus travel allowance. And when you're commissioned, a $330 uniform allowance.

You discharge your military obligation with the traditional rank, pay, privileges and responsibilities of an officer in the United States Army.

And later, when you're starting your climb up the civilian ladder, advancad ROTC will still be paying off. Success in the executive areas of business and industry comes earlier and more substantially to the men who can lead. Few are born leaders: but leadership can be learned. And advanced ROTC is a great place to learn it.

Talk with the Professor of Military Science at your school. Learn more about advanced ROTC. Ask particularly about the ROTC course in Leadership, with its practical experience in command responsibilities.

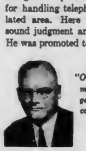
"I DON'T THINK THERE'S ANY END TO THE OPPORTUNITY IN THIS BUSINESS"

When Gene Segin got his B.S. in Business Administration at the University of Illinois, he was in touch with 8 prospective employers.

Gene joined Illinois Bell Telephone Company because: "The people I talked to here made it very clear that I would not be shuffled into some narrow specialized job. I thought this job offered the greatest opportunity for broad experience."

On his first assignment Gene was sent to Springfield where he conducted courses in human relations for management people.



His next move was to a traffic operations job in Rock Island. On this assignment he was in charge of all personnel who are directly responsible for handling telephone calls in this heavily populated area. Here Gene earned a reputation for sound judgment and skill in working with people. He was promoted to Traffic Supervisor.

Today, Gene's chief responsibilities are in management training and development, and company-union relations. The latter includes contract bargaining and helping settle labor disputes.

How does Gene feel about his job? "It's a real challenge. I'm in some of the most vital and interesting work in the country." And about the future—"Well there aren't any pushover jobs around here. It's tough. But if a man has what it takes, I don't think there's any end to the opportunity in this business."

If you're looking for a job with no ceiling on it—a job where you're limited only by how much responsibility you can take and how well you can handle it—then you'll want to visit your Placement Office for literature and additional information on the Bell Companies.

"Our number one aim is to have in all management jobs the most vital, intelligent, positive and imaginative men we can possibly find."

LUCKY STRIKE PRESENTS:

DEAR DR. FROOD:

DR. FROOD'S THOUGHT FOR THE DAY: In college, it isn't who you know that counts—it's whom.

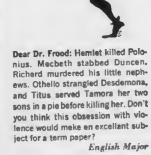
Dear Dr. Frood: I have a confession. All my life I have been trying to learn how to whistle. I just can't. Please, will you tell me how to whistle?

Puckered

DEAR PUCKERED: Watch the birds. Notice how they gather a pocket of air deep within the breast, then push thin jets of this air into the throat, through the larynx, up and around the curled tongue, and then bounce the air from the roof of the mouth out through the teeth (which act like the keyboard on a piano). Practice this. In no time your friends will be amazed at the beautiful, warbly trills that flow from your beak.

Dear Dr. Frood: I just can't seem to get in step with the rest of the students here. They enjoy parties, dancing, folk singing and dating. None of these things interest me at all. Am I behind the times or what?

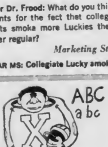
Left Out



DEAR LEFT: You're in the right times; you're just one of our squares.

Dear Dr. Frood: What do you think accounts for the fact that college students smoke more Luckies than any other regular?

Marketing Student



DEAR MS: Collegiate Lucky smokers.

Dear Dr. Frood: Hamlet killed Polonius. Macbeth stabbed Duncen. Richard murdered his little nephews. Othello strangled Desdemona, and Titus served Tamora her two sons in a pie before killing her. Don't you think this obsession with violence would make an excellent subject for a term paper?

English Major

DEAR ENGLISH: No, I don't, and my advice to you is to stop running around with that crowd.

Dear Dr. Frood: My coach is writing this letter for me because I am illiterate. We want to know if I got to learn how to read to get into college. I am the best football player in the state.

X

DEAR X: Every college today will insist that you meet certain basic entrance requirements. I'm afraid you're just out of luck, X, unless you learn how to read diagrams and count to eleven.

ARE YOU READY FOR THE FLOOD? Most students today live a carefree, devil-may-care existence—buying their Luckies day to day. Only a handful have had the good sense to set aside an emergency cache of three or four Lucky cartons, wrapped in oilskin. When the dam breaks—they'll be ready. Will you?

Blackwell Expresses Views During Personal Interview

By BONNIE PERRY
Flambeau Feature Editor

"Like Santa Claus coming every day," is Gordon W. Blackwell's expressed impression of Florida State University, as he has learned about it since his arrival.

The new university president said he had had many "pleasant surprises" during his learning of the University, and of the "strengths we have."

Dr. Blackwell said he had been "shocked at the budget" and the crowded facilities. But he felt that FSU had "very few problems that money wouldn't solve.

REACTION GOOD

"The reaction has been good," said the President of his travels around the state seeking aid for FSU and explaining the need FSU fills in the state.

"I have made an impression on the state, and I hope on the Legislature, of our extreme need of funds (for the University) and faculty needs," the mild-mannered President pointed out.

Getting back to his feeling about FSU students, Dr. Blackwell said there were several differences he noticed here. He felt that students were "generally more attractive" in their interpersonal relations.

ENJOY LIFE

"They enjoy life somewhat better because of the weather. This environment just leads to the joys of living," he said.

The President is a "bug" on fishing, his only problem being that he doesn't have much time to go. He did say, however, that he hopes to do some fishing over this weekend.

Continuing with his feelings about FSU students, Dr. Blackwell said there is "excellent student leadership, which is not always true in my experiences."

He did comment that he was a little disappointed at student behavior at football games, but declined to elaborate further.

INDEPENDENCE OF MIND

Asked what qualities he felt students should develop at college besides scholarship, he said "independence of mind, a desire to think through matters themselves." The President explained that students should learn the exercise of responsibility between the ages of 18 and 22. "And college should provide the opportunity," he said.

As to the advice the President gave his own children; he has two in college, Gordon at Harvard and Randy at Furman, he told them "they should have a balanced experience, but not to neglect their studies."

Both of his boys have been active in athletics. Fraternity and leadership, the President explained with pride.

SOME FAMILY HERE

He was sad, however, that the boys won't be on hand for his inauguration. Members of his family that will be here are the President's stepmother, Mrs. B. L. Blackwell of Spartanburg, S. C.; two cousins, Robert Gilliam of Spartanburg, and Edgar Blackwell of Greenwood, S. C. Mrs. Blackwell's mother, Mrs. J. B. Lyles, also of Spartanburg, will be present.

Dr. Blackwell said he wasn't sure if he would teach in the future or not. He said he had been invited by the Sociology Dept. to teach a seminar, but was undecided as yet.

FEELS GUILTY

Teaching a regular class, he explained, would be unfair to students as he had to be out of town so much. He said he felt guilty when he had to miss a class.

Asked what his special dream for the University was, Dr. Blackwell said it was in two parts. One was that FSU "become a distinguished university overall; in graduate study, in research and as a service to the state.

"FSU can and should provide leadership for the development of the state and the entire South. The South is the nation's greatest area for further development."

Byrd Runs Unopposed For Student Body President

Student Body Vice President Bobby Byrd is unopposed in his bid for the presidency in the March 21 election in which two candidates are vying for the vice presidential spot.

Keo VanAssenderp, chairman of the Lobby Committee, and Duncan Moore, secretary of student welfare, will clash in the vice president's race.

Byrd's campaign committee is proceeding with the campaign work, however, because they have not ruled out the possibility of a write-in candidate, campaign manager John Beranek said. The campaign will also be a part of the drive to build up enthusiasm for Student Government, Byrd said.

Mygnon Champion and Jeanie Ferlita are running for women's vice president. Carl Kutler is unopposed for men's vice president.

Gordy Smith and Dan Wallbolt are running for chief justice of Honor Court.

Five students have qualified for the three Board of Publication posts. They are Eva Skelton, Ray Allen, Joan Abbott, Bill McLemore and Barbara Syfrett.

Supreme Court Rejects Appeal

Two Florida State University students face a $300 fine or 60 days in jail the U. S. Supreme Court rejected their appeal Monday on charges convicting of disorderly conduct following a sit-in demonstration last spring.

If Roland Eves or Derek Lawler choose jail, a possible recourse is a petition for a writ of habeas corpus to the U. S. District Court in Jacksonville, Tobias Simon, spokesman for the Florida Civil Liberties Union, told the Flambeau in a telephone conversation yesterday.

Eves and Lawler, who were two of five Florida State University students convicted of the charges following an integrated sit-in demonstration at Woolworth's lunch counter on March 12, 1960, do not know at this point whether they will be "jail birds" or pay their fines.

They have not communicated with Simon on the manner, as he actually has not received a mandate from the Court.

One of the demonstrators, Stephen R. Poe, paid his fine last summer. Two of the others are no longer students at FSU. Jeff Poland is presently a student at San Jose State College, California, and Robert Armstrong is employed in New York City.

A sixth student, Oscar R. (Bob) Brock, pleaded nolo contendere (no contest) and was judged neither innocent nor guilty. He was placed on two years probation in custody of his father. He was unrepresented by counsel and stated his own case to City Judge John A. Rudd.

It was Rudd who passed sentence on the five defendants.

NO LEGAL QUESTION

Simon, who defended four of the students in Tallahassee Municipal Court, said that there was no not a legal question involved in the case and the court agre felt there was "no contest they wanted to consider."

The appeal concerned t plication of the law and law itself.

The Florida Civil Li Union spokesman pointed the constitution of the st Florida places the final late jurisdiction in cases from municipal courts to cuit courts.

The first goal of the corporation will probably be to finance the swimming pool to be built in conjunction with the proposed new Student Union.

Tom Adams

Tom Adams, Sec. Of State To Talk Here

Secretary of State Tom Adams will speak to Florida State University students at 7:30 tonight in the Library Lecture Hall.

Speaking in the current "Know Your State Government" campaign sponsored by the Young Democrats Club and the Leon County Legislative delegation, Adams will discuss the functions of his office.

One of the youngest members of Gov. Farris Bryant's cabinet, he was elected to his first term last fall, defeating seven other candidates. He succeeded R. A. Gray, who, after many years as secretary of state, did not seek reelection.

Adams served in his first session of the Legislature in 1957 and was elected "Most Outstanding Freshman Senator" for that term.

While in the Legislature, he was chairman of a number of committees.

Sen. Smathers Is Contacted For Union Aid

Senator George A. Smathers and former Florida Governor Millard F. Caldwell are working in an effort to receive a waiver of the down-payment requirement for construction of the Student Union, Student Body President Carl Butler reported.

Sen. Smathers has conferred with the commissioner of the Housing and Home Finance Agency, Sidney H. Woolner, in Washington, D.C., and is now negotiating with the regional office in Atlanta.

Women's Vice President Martha Bedell, Vice President Bobby Byrd and Butler discussed the problem about obtaining the loan with Caldwell who wrote letters to the members of the state Congressional delegation on behalf of the project.

A loan of $2,800,000 is being sought for union construction, Butler said. In order to borrow this amount the university must have $700,000 for a down-payment. However, by the end of this year only about $500,000 will be available, consequently unless a waiver is obtained construction of the union might be delayed for several years.

If the loan is obtained plans for the building could be completed and construction begun by next year.

'Legend'

THE LEGEND '61 will not be distributed until tomorrow according to the publication's editor, Leslie Lowell.

Due to a delay in the Duplication Department, THE LEGEND '61 was not distributed as planned yesterday.

Copies may be obtained in back of Westcott Bldg. and at the Student Center by presenting an ID card.

Dr. Cairns Examines Mystical Experience

"Religion often stands or falls on mystical experience. The idea of a mystical experience seems to be related in all religions." Dr. Grace Cairns, said.

The assistant professor of philosophy spoke on the idea of a transformation, or mystical experience, in her comparison of the great religions of the world for the Perspectives on Religion lecture Friday night.

Dr. Cairns limited her topic to this basic idea, which, she said, "helps man overcome his feeling of finitude."

In the Hindu religion, she said, there is a belief in a supra-intellectual experience in which one can realize the unity of all things.

According to Radhakrishnan, one of the greatest Hindu religionists, "Religion is not a particular way of life, it is the way of all life."

The Hindus believe that the ultimate goal of the cosmos is the evolution of spirit; when death and time are conquered, the kingdom of eternal spirit will be established, she explained.

Mahatma Gandhi, in an interview, was asked, "What is your religion?" He answered "My religion is Hinduism, which for me is the religion of humanism."

Dr. Cairns remarked that in many ways the Hindu religion is more profound than Christianity, with respect to its emphasis on helping one's fellow men.

In Buddhism, Dr. Cairns continued, the philosophy of life is negative. Their principles are the four holy truths, which are (1) Life is suffering, both mental and physical, (2) Suffering is caused by craving. (3) Craving can be overcome. (4) The way to overcome craving is by following the right paths—paths of right conduct, right action, right thoughts, etc.

Meditation is essential to freedom from the sufferine of life, and meditation will bring the transformation of realization of unity. The transformation also is supposed to ultimately result in perfect knowledge, she said.

Taoism, another Oriental religion, believes in the interaction of opposites to form the unity of of the world. Yin and Yang are their positive and negative forces, Dr. Cairns said. There is the belief that the universe has no beginning and no end, and if one can attain unity with the universe, one will also be eternal.

In the Moslem religion, the idea of a new being is expressed in the one who lives in unity with A creative altruism is encouraged.

Building 'A' Has 'Strange Sounds'

By MARY ELLEN HARRIS
Assistant Feature Editor

On the third floor of Classroom Building A is a small green room with walls plastered with maps and travel posters and an atmosphere that is a garbled combination of strange sounds and phrases.

Students, with furrowed brows and determined gazes, huddle in small glass booths and hunch themselves over a mass of recording equipment.

No intelligence center is this; no radio station. Rather, it is the home of the language lab.

'HEARING' LABORATORY

This "laboratory" gives language students a chance to hear the correct pronunciation of a language as well as to hear themselves speak the language.

Through the use of tapes following the first year French, German, and Spanish textbooks, language students can hear any particular lesson they choose. Special tapes are available in Russian as an aid to pronunciation. Thus far, only written work is available for more advanced students.

The system, initiated this year, depends upon a series of tapes recorded from a master tape and then broadcast to the individual booths. Blank tapes in the booth pick up the broadcast voice and the voice of the student.

Through this method, the "student has a chance to hear how he sounds and to compare his pronunciation with that of the speaker." said Karl Wentz, student assistant in the lab.

The tapes will form the nucleus for an extended language lab in the future, Wentz said.

Law Society

J. Worth Owens, secretary of the Tallahassee Bar Assn., will speak to the newly formed Florida State University Law Society at 8 p.m. Thursday in the Longmire Club Room.

Owens' topic will be "The FBI as a Career in Law Enforcement." Members and other students who expect to attend law school are invited. Proper dress is coats and ties.

After Four Weeks

Senate Passes Academic Honor System By 34-1

By TONI DI CARLO

After four weeks of concentrated study and debate, Student Senate passed the Academic Honor System Wednesday with a vote of 34 to one.

If Student Body President Carl Butler signs the bill, it will go to the Faculty Review Committee for approval.

"I will sign it if it is complete," said Butler, "I agree with the spirit of the bill."

Butler plans to meet with Attorney General Roy Mathis, Judiciary Chairman Linda Reams, Student Body Vice President Bobby Byrd and Senate Secretary Marianna Girtman to discuss details of the bill and make sure nothing has been left out.

If Butler and the Faculty Committee approve, students will vote on the bill in the Spring elections.

Only violations of academic honesty (cheating) will be included in the new honor system. Violations of social regulations and any other infractions will not be part of the system.

Lying and stealing will still be Honor Court offenses but will not be part of the Code of Academic Honor.

Senators voting for the bill were: Clark, Bedell, Champion, Eilertson, Elum, Ferlita, Finlay, Macklem, Powers, Rich, Robinson, Boyd, Boykin, Buerke, Currie, Doomar, Eastridge, Adair, Hannan, Hume, Ingram, Kutler, LeGate, Sauer, Simpson, Stevens, Talley, Thigpen, Worsham, Baldwin, Gandy, King, Palumbi, and McMillon. Dobson voted against the bill.

Twenty students enrolled at FSU will take the following oath: "I pledge myself to uphold the highest standards of academic honesty and to support the Student Honor Court any infractions of academic honesty which come to my attention."

Any student who helps another student cheat or fails to report infractions which come to his attention will be considered guilty of academic dishonesty.

Guilty persons will be recommended for suspension from the university for a minimum of one semester "except in extraordinary cases," and students guilty of a second offense will be recommended for expulsion.

During examinations, academic dishonesty will include referring to written or oral information "not specifically condoned by the instructor."

Plagiarism is considered cheating unless otherwise specified by the instructor. This will include letting another student "compose or rewrite" a written assignment.

Stealing, buying, selling or referring to a copy of any examination before it has been administered is also considered academic dishonesty.

Infractions of the Code of Academic Honor will be tried before the Honor Court within six school days after they have been reported, and the results will be published in the Flambeau (by case number only) within a week of the trial.

The court will will 24 hours after the report has been received, giving the student a chance to turn himself in. If the student does not report himself, he will be subpoenaed immediately.

Under the new system, instructors will "not remain in the classroom for the purpose of proctoring," except in the case of tests prepared by agencies outside this university which may require proctoring.

The final provision in the controversial bill provides for an Honor System Committee, composed of an equal number of faculty members and students, which will be appointed by the university president, to continue studying the effectiveness of the system, make recommendations and keep the faculty and students informed.

In the discussion of the bill as a whole prior to the roll-call vote, Sen. Gerry Dobson was the lone dissenter.

"Students are using minor errors in the system as scapegoats. The loopholes are in their standards of morality."

Dobson recommended a temporary system if student proctoring until the "widespread cynicism" about an honor system could be dispelled "I am definitely in favor of an honor system, but I don't think that a few minor changes in the system will change student opinion."

Sen. Carl Kutler argued that, "If just a few people benefit from this it is worth it." and Sen Mygnon Champion reminded the Senate that, "If this bill fails, it does not mean we have no honor system; it simply means that we are under the old one."

Sen. Dick Hume expressed his hope that, "in future time this system will be effective and the student body will find it an acceptable bill."

Voluntary ROTC Not Likely In Near Future Says Butler

An end to compulsory ROTC appears improbable in the near future. Student Body President Carl Butler has concluded.

After conferring with the administration, Butler reported he received little encouragement on the possibility of replacing compulsory ROTC with a voluntary one.

After a year-long study of the problem, a student committee recommended a voluntary system. Student Senate endorsed the proposal and asked that Butler confer further with the administration.

The choice seems to be whether to have ROTC at all, Butler explained. He said an elective program was tried here several years ago but failed to work.

A proposed new Air Force ROTC program and its effect upon the Army programs were studied, he said. The Air Force has tentative plans, which must be passed by Congress, to adopt a new program in the next two or three years for juniors and seniors only.

Under this set-up, Army ROTC would have to take all freshmen and sophomores. Those who continued ROTC after the first two years would choose between the Army and Air Force programs.

The Air Force feels this would be a less expensive way to obtain better men and satisfy their commission quota at the same time, Butler said.

ARMY BURDEN

But this would put an increased burden on the Army program and endanger the Army quota, he pointed out.

The Air Force feels it can meet its quota of commissions without a compulsory program, while the Army does not, Butler said.

He pointed out that the Army's national quota is 14,000 men while the Air Force needs only 6,000.

Some universities have tried the voluntary program and given it up, Butler continued.

If the upper division ROTC program failed to attract enough men from the lower and second years on a voluntary basis, the ROTC programs would be withdrawn altogether, he said.

In addition to Butler and Men's Vice President Marion Clark, Dean of Arts and Sciences J. Paul Reynolds, Dean of Faculties Werner Baum, Col. Wilfred K. White and Col. John K. Arnold studied the matter.

Butler said he will continue to work for an elective program, although he felt that ROTC seemed to be a necessary inconvenience for the nation's welfare.

Cast Reading

The professional cast of ASSIGNMENT IN JUDEA will present a reading of a full-length play described as a "counter-argument," at 8:15 p.m. Thursday in Conradi Theater.

Khlich Dhiegh, one of the professionals, is the author of THE REO BEARO, which also deals with characters and events involved in the crucifixion of Christ.

Dhiegh said the play was not written especially as a counter-argument, but puts one of the principal actors in a different light.

Louise Allbritton, Frederic Tourre and Eddie Dowling will join Dhiegh in giving the reading.

Tickets may be purchased for $.75 for students and $1.25 for the public at the theater door the night of the performance. Proceeds will be used for scholarships to the Asolo Festival.

Three Races Seen In Vote

Only three major contests will be waged in the coming March 21 Student Elections, for which campaigning begins at 5 p.m. today.

The vice presidency has two contenders, Ken VanAssenderp, chairman of the lobby committee, and Duncan Moore, secretary of student welfare.

The two candidates for the Women's Vice Presidency are Jeanie Ferlita and Mygnon Champion. Gordy Smith and Dan Walbolt are running for chief justice of Honor Court.

The three Board of Publication seats are being sought by Barbara Syfrett, Bill McLemore, Joan Abbott, Ray Allen, and Eva Skelton.

Running unopposed are student body president. Bobby Byrd; men's vice president, Carl Kutler, and clerk of Honor Court, Diane Goodwin.

Polls will be open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. next Tuesday at the Student Center, Westcott, Bryan Hall, and the Library. The West Hall poll will open at noon. The Sophomore Council and Freshman Flunkies will operate the polls.

Secretary of Elections J. P. Jones said that Radio Station WTAL will carry the election returns. Jones also said he did not believe a run-off would be necessary.

A Well Made Investment

For $13 student government is making a wise investment. This sum, spent by student government for the charter which will create Student Enterprises, may well be termed its most significant investment.

A charter of incorporation will enable Student Enterprises to enter into business contracts without making the individual members of student government personally liable. The Board of Directors will have the power to borrow money and to devise ways of financing exira services, such as a swimming pool. bus line. or parking facilities.

THE INCORPORATION of a portion of government in order to enable it to make money for additional services. is an idea completely new to this area of the country. It has worked with remarkable success on the West Coast, and there seems to be nothing to limit its benefits here if it is adequately carried out.

Any additional funds that student government would receive from the university would merely be to provide the existing services for an increased enrollment. The Student Enterprises would, on the other hand, provide additional and expanded services.

BY FORMING THIS CORPORATION, student government is assuming more responsibilities, trus increasing its actual and potential power and influence within the university system. We commend those government leaders who had the initiative to sponsor this action which provides a broader program for student government service.

Generalities Destroy Law

The March 8, 1961 issue of the Florida Timea Union carried a news story on page thirty-two dealing with a proposed law on obscenity that would, to quote the Timea Union write up, include the illegality of: "obscene, lewd, lascivious, filthy, indecent, immoral, sadistic, or masochistic book, magazine, periodical, pamphlet, newspaper, comic book, story paper, written or printed article, writing, paper, card, picture, drawing, photograph, motion picture film, image, figure, phonograph record, or wire and tape recording."

Which is to say anything not meeting the personal taste requirements of duly appointed individuals will be illegal.

AND WHO WILL police the "police" . . . . the perennial question that has never been solved, leaving a loophole for the wheels to drive the Queen Mary through loaded down with lewd stag films. strippers and anything else that might prove inflaming to the peon public who pay for the blowouts.

Somebody was right when they termed the proposed bill "the broadest ever in Florida History." It is so broad that it chases itself through the same muck it pans.

It is so broad that any motion picture, TV film, phonograph record or even dummies in shop windows can find themselves thoroughly censored.

One wonders if the reference to wire or tape recordings would include those style made by various agencies of law enforcement. If certain words or ideas should happen to be expressed that would be detrimental to the ears of a courtroom, might not those same tapes, etcetera, be subject to heavy censorship in the public interest? Certainly they should be if they were lewd, lascivious, filthy and so forth.

ART CLASSES AT this university could be curtailed if any heavy handed censor cared to push the idea. It would appear that this could easily be accomplished under the "picture. drawing, image. figure," portion of this elephantine monster bill.

It is to be doubted that most of the articles which this bill has drawn a bead on are contraband items, but books, papers, prints, records and such that are openly available in stores everywhere. Yes, there are enough publications and other items that could go and not be missed to any extent, but once the hand of censorship gets a firm grin. it is seldom content to weed out the trash and content itself with "police" action thereafter. It is prone to censorship behind every smear of ink. every frame of film and in every facet of communication.

The pity is that some of this imagination hasn't been put into boning up the Highway Patrol to the point that the patrol could have adequate personnel to enforce existing laws and maybe get stiffer laws passed to deal with the death dealing drunken driver and the time bombs that infest the state highways. Murder is still immoral too.

We Need An FSU Tea Party

By LESLIE POWELL

"What this campus needs," Coma said, "is a good old-fashioned tea party just like the one in Boston some time back, only rather than throw the tea in Lake Ella, maybe we could toss in a few dorm directresses.

"THOSE GOOD LADIES are quick to tell you that they're not there to attend to your business for you, but they proceed to do just that.

"Apparently, the directress set is bitter at a life which has curbed their directive talents to the meager demands of staging obnoxious, mandatory tea parties for bored coeds. They'd be much happier directing the university administration or campus traffic or Assignment in Judea.

"Everybody knows it takes exceptional skill to direct floorcomings and goings of the inmates of a Murphree or Magnolia and similar way-stations on the road to of-age. Not everybody is capable of calling a police posse to scout the area and pick up some locked out coed at eleven-o-one p. m. as if she were a common criminal.

"OF COURSE, a locked out girl can always turn herself in to the night director and get forty weeks restriction . . . if she can tear the night director away from the loving chore of polishing the tea service.

"The way the coeds, a herd of recalcitrant coeds at that, are herded into some ugly, drafty, gymnasium type room to partake of the companionship of aggravated comrades and the sherdlu teacups takes a high degree of determination. Of course. the matrons may be expecting Grover Cleveland to drop by unexpectedly, but if he ever does, it will be the liveliest tea party ever sponsoreously staged at FSU, with in-the-know coeds leaping out every available window.

"THE BIGGEST favor," Coma said, "a burgler could do the coeds of FSU, as she packed her loot carefully so, leeting a skeleton key. crowbar and hammer, "would be to steal the tea services or break all the blasted cups."

"You know, maybe this tea party bit was meant to inculcate manners into a lot of savage female semiholes, but I doubt if it ever develops past the lipstick stain on the rim of the cups," Coma added. "And frankly, that is a dreadful waste, except maybe in Gaines'' . . . the tea parties are really Coed!"

PULLING ON her gloves and rubber soled shoes, Coma went on. "Besides, nobody ever caught a bad case of manners from some firebreaker who thinks 'good morning' is wildly impertinent."

As she climbed out the fourth story window, tools clinking in the bag over her shoulder, she shouted back "Frankly, I'll be O.K. with me if all the directoresses stick their heads in elevator shafts with the machine descending. We'll give a memorial tea and weep in our cups." And she dropped into the night singing "The Littlest Burgler" all the way down.

From Inside-Out

Student Body President Is Only Elected Position

By MYGNON CHAMPION

Of the numerous student Government officers to be elected next Tuesday and later this spring, only one position is in the executive branch.

In one sense, this is peculiar, since many more students hold positions in the executive branch than in both of the other two branches combined. Except for the President, each of the approximately 500 students involved in various duties of the executive branch are appointed, rather than elected.

IN A DEEPER SENSE, however, this arrangement is quite rational. The President, as chief executive and administrator, is responsible for the performance of the entire executive branch. To hold him responsible for this necessitates giving him control over the many sub-divisions. committees and individuals who work together as a team to get the work done.

Directly below the president are 10 Cabinet members to whom are delegated specific responsibilities in particular areas. Each of them has at his command several student committees to work with him.

ATTORNEY GENERAL Roy Mathis handles all legal matters and advises the President and other Student Government officers on the Constitution and the Statutes. In practice, he is also the President's "right hand man."

Secretary of Elections John Paul Jones is responsible for conducting campus elections and for enforcing campus election regulations. Secretary of State Mary Lee Bone is the official campus hostess for such occasions as Circus Weekend and the Inauguration.

The Secretary of Finance, Don Alexander, is responsible for supervising all campus fund-raising projects and, more important, preparing the annual Student Activities Budget, which involves appropriations for student publications. Student Government, and various student organizations and activities.

Last year, this budget totalled more than $85,000 and it is expected to be much larger this year. After its preparation by the Secretary of Finance, it must be submitted to Student Senate for approval. It usually undergoes a number of changes.

SECRETARY OF STUDENT EVENTS Barbara Youmans is responsible for the Student Artists Series, Campus Chest, and the Rally Committee. The Secretary of Inter-collegiate Affairs, Linda Hobbs, is in charge of all conferences with other universities, such as the coming SUSGA convention here.

Dottie Chazal, Secretary of Campus Communications, serves as editor of the Student Government publication, The Statesman, and is in charge of publicizing Hall of Fame selections. She is also responsible for the weekly Student Government breakfast over WTAL each Wednesday night at 11 p.m.

BILL GREEN, Secretary of Public Relations, is in charge of the student Lobby Committee, Speaker's Bureau, and the Educational Analysis Committee. John Beranek, Secretary of Campus Union, is responsible for planning for the proposed $3½ million building to be constructed in the vacuity of the present Student Center.

Secretary of Welfare Duncan Moore has a wide variety of duties. He is responsible for handling student employment and housing problems, for handling the Student Insurance program, and has recently completed a study of the campus infirmary.

IN ADDITION to these Cabinet positions and the committees under each of them, the President is also responsible in one way or another for approximately 30 other committees. In some cases, he serves as a member; in other cases, he is responsible for making appointments to them, either on his own authority or upon consultation with President Blackwell.

In conclusion, from a purely public administrative standpoint, our executive branch compares most favorably with, and even surpasses, the executive branches of our state and national governments. Its rational organization lends itself to a clear line of authority and responsibility.

It's Another Call-Girl Film

Fair Warning: If you saw Butterfield 8 and were satisfied with that screenplay, you'll do well to forego the doubtful pleasure of Go Naked In The World which is nothing more than a cornball shadow of the better known college efforts.

Go Naked offers little other than the title and three well known stars of Continental cinema: Gina Lollobrigida, Tony Franciosa and Ernest Borgnine are the terribly distressed stock characters: Bad Girl Who Sacrifices Herself For Love, Good Boy Trying Hard To Be Bad But His Heart Isn't In It, and The Father That Got There First.

SON MEETS GIRL, falls for girl, takes girl to the parental anniversary party where Father angrily tells son that girl is notorious from one end of New York to the other. Father knows because Mother is aged, ugly and has the nauseating habit of inquiring if Father still loves her, and Father, who can afford the best in outside entertainment, takes advantage of his position.

The dialogue would have been thrown out of a Disney production. Sample: "Don't you dare touch me, I'll get mad at you." from actor Borgnine to his about-to-be-estranged wife, played by some nice old lady who would fit nicely into the FSU stable of theater staples, and has no business trying to reform Marty gone sour.

WHAT COULD HAVE been a terribly sad film filled with comic irony is botched with the desire to cash in on the call-girl phase quickly. There are some scenes that verge on better than average drama, but they are spaced at wide intervals.

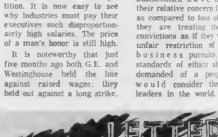
One good point about Go Naked is that it manages somehow to catch the air of dejected boredom that surrounds tired sex for sex's sake.

Don't watch it, but, if you have anything else to do with your sixty cents. Lollobrigida playing beginners only manages to combine the worst features of both.

Ethics Or Profit: A Modern Dilemma

By BILL TROTTS

The conviction of 44 high business executives by Federal District Judge J. Cullen Ganey in his Philadelphia Court last month has brought the sharp focus of public attention to the concept of ethics in business.



For many years the businessman has represented from enterprise and capitalism to the American public. By his material successes he has gained high status in our society. As a group, the businessman exercises a great deal of power over the public which holds him in respect. Through his hired researchers, he can determine what the public will buy; through his hired advertisers he has created a buying public when none had existed. Through the hired news media he has further entrenched himself as the responsible, ethical citizen who knows what is best for the less successful citizens. With his income he has been able to lobby for favorable legislation with marked success, and his wealth has been able to buy those whom he could not overcome. The most powerful organizations operating within these United States are groups of men whose sole aim is to gain profit.

LAST MONTH THE federal Justice department once again stepped into the business world to reveal the type of injustices which occur when power is accrued beyond the responsibility of those who possess that power. The executives found to the convicted men were hired out to General Electric, Westinghouse, and 27 other major companies, for the purpose of increasing net profits. They were paid salaries up to $125,000, and they more than earned these high salaries by fixing prices and eliminating competition in bids on government and private contracts. The cost to their customers amounted to uncountable millions in unfair profits, and the consumers were deprived of the one thing which they believed their enterprise assured them—competition. It is now easy to see why industries must pay their executives such disproportionately high salaries. The price of a man's honor is still high.

It is noteworthy that just five months ago both G.E. and Westinghouse held the line against increased wages they held out against a long strike, and they gained the sympathies of the public at large preventing a rise in the cost of living. However, in years prior to this noble concern for the cost of living these same companies had raised the taxes of every American by overcharging Federal projects which date back to the Tennessee Valley Authority hydroelectric installations. Electric consumers, the millions were to bear the excessive costs to private utilities on the price-fixed electrical equipment.

IT WOULD BE naive to consider that this is an isolated case in the business world. The choice of ethics or profits has always faced the potential business executive and this case has just made more evident that when the choice is made ethics must be discarded to exist in the business enterprise. To believe that the men fined and sentenced to jail by Judge Ganey are the true culprits in this case is an easy out. The men who were sent to jail are mere hirelings of men whose power is virtually limitless. According to the heads of G.E. and Westinghouse the only action against these men by the companies will be a few or some salaries. The reason for this permissive attitude is because the court once again stepped into the business world as "harsh." As leading representatives of our business economy in America the heads of companies have announced that they consider a 30 day jail sentence and a fine of several thousand dollars to be a "harsh" punishment for the theft of millions of dollars perpetrated in the name of business. It is possible that the convicted are being kept silent by the payroll of these powerful companies in order to secure their continued loyalty, as the threat men are not likely to give evidence of even greater frauds which the Justice Department has not been able to uncover.

The important thing to remember is that our foremost businessmen are willing to risk their relative concern for profits as compared to loss of ethics. They are treating the convictions as if they were an unfair restriction of business pursuits. If standards of ethics should be demanded of a people, we would consider these leaders in the world.

Watch Those Manners!

TO THE EDITOR:

The Women's Senate Committee for Social Standards in the freshman booklet, Knowledge for College would like to bring to your the FSU student body's attention a certain procedure that appears in this pamphlet.

"Always show consideration for the artist and audience by arriving sufficiently early to be seated before the program begins and by leaving only at intermission or at the close of the program. Under no conditions enter the auditorium until the performer completes a number. It is inconsiderate to talk or rattle programs during a performance. It is proper for the audience to rise when a prominent person comes before or is presented in the audience. This is done for such as the governor of a state, an ambassador, a retired states senator or any other persons whose contribution to mankind is worthy of acclaim."

We have noticed that ushers keep seating people throughout the program and this is irritating to those sitting in the audience trying to enjoy the concert, play or lecture.

Any action taken on this matter would be greatly appreciated.

Step In The Fire

The decisive changeover, the move of Florida State into the ranks of the subsidized athletic schools, was a painful one. The Tribe suffered severe burns while making entry into the fire of big time football.

The first year was a barbeque.

Florida State suffered the worst season of their young career during the 1958 season, their debut as a subsidized squad. It was a season which accounted for a 1-8-1 worksheet, a record humiliating for a squad who had two years before become the first Caucasian university in the state of Florida to go undefeated during a football season. And it was a change of pace for a school that had won 24 games their first 27 conflicts.

But the Seminole supporters got the better competition that they longed for. Florida State was beaten by some of the best.

Louisiana Tech, the first adversary, was not one of the best but they were better than FSU and set the note of the Seminoles' season by belting the tribe 32-13. Louisville followed and did the same. The Kentucky school, led by one John Unitas—lanky offspringer Colt fame—launched enough fire power to defeat Florida State by a 41-14 count.

Virginia Military Institute managed only a 28-7 shellacking the following week and North Carolina State's Wolfpack could only whip the Tribe by a 13-7 count. The season began to look up the week later as Stetson and FSU drew 6-6.

Then the roof caved in again.

Mississippi Southern administered a 50-21 beating, which was the worst setback in the history of Florida State to that date. Auburn followed with a 9-0 win and FSU was back on the losing end.

And theo they faced the paramount task, tackling the mighty Yellow Jackets from Georgia Tech.

This was the first in a series of murderous opponents FSU has meddled since the day they started subsidizing.

The Engineers at that time were riding on the crest of a long string of victories. The Associated Press ranked them number two in the nation while the United Press rated the Yellow Jackets number one across the nation.

FSU started crying.

Pop Hogan, now chief in charge of building up the Seminole football program, solemnly predicted with tongue in cheek: FSU 14-Tech 13. But he added reverently, "Dodd Have Mercy."

Tech Establishes A Tradition

The Georgia Tech tilt established a tradition. Since the big game in 1952, FSU has played one or more major college teams every year.

In 1953, it was the University of Miami, who set them back 41 at the Orange Bowl.

In 1954, it was Auburn who clipped the tribe by a 33-0 mark for the powerful x and y teams which led the Tigers to a national ranking and a berth in the Gator Bowl conflict of that season. Georgia, another SEC power, also topped the tribe 14-0.

In 1955, Miami again supplied the power which rolled the Seminoles 34-6.

Both Georgia and Miami were on the docket in 1956 and both teams set back the upstart tribe who couldn't buy a win against major college opposition. The Bulldogs won 3-0 over the Seminoles while the Hurricanes set the Tribe back 20-7.

Auburn was again on the FSU worksheet in 1957 and the powerful Tigers slammed the Florida State gridders by a 20-7 mark.

The frustration of defeat was alleviated by such satisfying scores as a 59-0 posting of Unitas-led Louisville in 1953 to revenge an earlier defeat, a 33-14 victory over Virginia Military Institute, a 20-13 victory over Louisville, and a 32-13 victory over the Villanova Wildcats in 1954.

In 1956, the tribe again defeated Villanova but this time by a score of 20-13 and Ohio University 47-7 and in 1957 Florida State defeat Abilene Christian 34-7 to revenge an earlier loss to the Texans

A Coming Of Age

The 1958 season brought to an end the era of Florida State frustration and established the Seminoles as a power to be reckoned with and immediately consistent winner. It brought to a close the days when Florida State could be regularly considered a breather trip school in the Southeast.

During this season, Florida State, dotting its I formation which was the innovation of Tom Nugent who succeeded Dr. Leo Veller as football coach, managed to defeat the University of Tennessee volunteers for their first victory against an SEC opponent.

This season too had its frustrations, but they were pleasant ones. Georgia Tech whipped the Seminoles 17-3 but only after the Engineers had called the engineers to a 3-3 tie at the end of the first half. Georgia bested Florida State 28-13 in Jacksonville's Gator Bowl, but FSU went into the game slightly favored, the first time this had occurred against a SEC team.

The Seminoles followed up their jubilant victory over Tennessee with another impressive victory, 17-6 over the Fran Curci-led Hurricanes of Miami. This was the first time that FSU had been able to defeat their strong football-mad rival from south Florida. And as for the stage for FSU's biggest battle, the Florida State University-University of Florida tilt.

Florida State threw a scare into the Gators when Bob Renn booted the kickoff and returned it 73 yards. Florida went on to win but only by a 21-7 score, which was not indicative of the tightness which has since come to characterize this traditional struggle.

With this battle, Florida State finally established themselves as a major college. For the first time, Florida citizens began to utter the names of the two schools in the same breath and began to compare the athletic programs of the two state universities.

Florida State began to get an equal amount of the race track money and high school athletes began to prefer to come to FSU, even if they did have an offer from the University of Florida.

In short, FSU had arrived.

It was a while in coming and it took the intense patience of FSU supporters to last out the dearth of victories between the era of the small college powerhouse and the major college power.

The latter has yet to be established positively but the 1958 season paved the way to that goal in the future.

Georgia Faces Hurlers Davis, Daniels In Two Game Series

By BILL VERIGAN
Assistant Sports Editor

Florida State's baseball team kicks off its 1961 season when it clashes with the Georgia Bulldogs tomorrow and Thursday at 3:30 on the Seminole baseball field.

Tribe coach Danny Litwhiler was hesitant about commenting on the outcome of the contest but he remarked that the Bulldogs should provide a stiff test since they have been in a rebuilding stage for the last two years.

After 22 games with the Bulldogs, Florida State holds a 13-9 record in the series. Last year FSU smashed the SEC opponent in two games, 10-1 and 9-2, while bowing to them once, 11-8.

Possibly five lettermen will start for the tribe each day with veteran pitchers, Frank Davis and Jim Daniel, scheduled to put in performances on the mound on the two game stand. The two sen ior moundsmen will be backed by lettermen, Jack Dull, on second base; Doug Walker, at first; Jimmy White, in the outfield, and Neil Martin playing right field.

The rest of the lineup will be rounded out be sophomores, including Dwight Smith, left field; Roger Zimmerman, short stop; George Fergurson, third base; and Buddy Teagle, catcher. If a lefthanded pitcher faces the tribe Gary Elliott will carry out the chores in center field.

Five Georgia lettermen will face the FSU team including Phil Ash, catcher and team captain; Milledge White, third base; Jim Rodgers, right field; Joey Miller, shortstop, and Tom Vandiver, centerfield. A sophomore, Ronnie Braddock, is set to start for the Bulldogs with lettermen, W. L. Hall and Mike Tulley, standing by to relieve him.

This year's sophomores for the Seminoles came up from a freshman team that had an outstanding 8-1 record last season. The talented sophomores also gave out with what has been termed one of the best hitting seasons in the history of FSU last year as freshmen according to Phil Hunt, freshman baseball coach.

A 23-game regular season schedule is on tap for the diamond men plus five tournament contests.

Seminole Linksmen Play In Fla. Intercollegiate Tourney

Tomorrow the Seminole golfers journey to Ocala to meet Rollins and try to even their season record at 1-1 after a stinging defeat at the hands of cross-state rival Florida.

Florida State's golfers, overwhelmed in their first match of the season 21½ to 5½ by the University of Florida, will also be seeking revenge when they compete in the Florida Intercollegiate Tournament at Ocala on Thursday.

Besides the University of Florida, Georgia and Rollins College will also be competing for top honors in the two-day competition.

After the opening contest Coach Bill Odeneal praised the play of his team. Downing Gray, who had seven birdies, "played the steadiest and putted better than anyone else," commented Odeneal.

"Dickie Dunlap played tremendous golf," commented the head mentor, and he added that Dunlap's birdies were particularly outstanding. Other players for FSU will probably include Frank Malara, Manning Nordone, Chuck Keating, and Rock Fraleigh.

Last year FSU dropped matches to both Rollins and Florida but was able to defeat Georgia while compiling an 11-8-1 season record.

Florida State Swimmers Gig Gators In U F Pool

By BILL VERIGAN
Assistant Sports Editor

Paul Thompson, Florida State's junior freestyle specialist, grabbed off two firsts in Saturday's season-end swimming meet with the University of Florida Gators to pace his team to a tight 48-40 victory.

Paul Thompson

In copping two events, Thompson set a meet and pool record in the 220-yard freestyle and also won the 440 freestyle. Other swimming wins went to Buck Hiles in the 200 individual medley and Pete Davis in the 200-yard backstroke event.

Seminole All-American Curt Genders took the diving honors to round out a perfect season, and Hiles also finished first in the 200-yard individual medley for his 15th straight triumph.

The partisan Gator crowd of more than 1,000 witnessed an unusual double disqualification in the first event of the evening, the 400 medley relay, which resulted in no points being awarded to either team. The Seminoles had a mao jump before his teammate touched the pool, and Florida, having an apparently automatic win, muffed its chance to go ahead by seven points when a Gator swimmer failed to touch the side of the pool on a turn.

S-1 RECORD

The Seminoles, finishing the season with a 9-1 record, have beat the UF swimmers seven times in a row and have now compiled a 9-2-1 lead in the series with their cross-state rival. Last month FSU easily handled the Gators in the FSU pool and then went on to whip them again in the Georgia AAU meet.

On Saturday the two rivals run into each other again at the University of Florida in the Florida Intercollegiate Championship. A win will give the tribe its third straight Florida Intercollegiate Championship.

Two other post-season championship journeys on the slate for FSU are the NCAA Championships in Seattle, Washington and the NAAU Championships at New Haven, Connecticut.

BABY TRIBE LOSES

The freshmen swimmers ended their season on a sour note against the Baby Gators in a preliminary meet by losing 56-39. The frosh had not previously been defeated in a dual meet, and the loss gave them a 7-1 mark for the season.

Even with the 17-point setback the Baby Seminoles turned in a record-breaking performance by smashing four old FSU freshman records. The existing standards were smashed by Lee Bransford in the 100 and 200-yard freestyle events, Dick Acosta in the 100-yard breaststroke, and Tom Santa in the 100-yard breaststroke.

Earlier in the year the swimming freshmen defeated Florida counterparts easily in their own pool.

Coach Bim Stults has watched his teams compile an astounding record of 89 wins, 18 losses, and two ties in dual competition during his 13-year tenure at Florida State, and his teams have ground out victories in 25 of their last 26 dual meets.

This year his swimmers have rewritten the existing marks. Especially talented have been Genders who was undefeated in 11 meets this season, Hiles who broke five school records and nine pool records, and Thompson who smashed five pool records and two school records.

Florida State University's Seminoles opened their 1961 dual meet season Saturday with a 102-29 victory over the University of Miami Hurricanes.

The Seminoles captured 14 of the 15 first places, the only loss going to Miami's Bill Sharp in the javelin throw. FSU swept all the points in four events — the high jump, the 440 yard run, the 220 yard dash, and the 220 yard low hurdles.

Of the 12 meetings between the two state schools, the Seminoles have won the last eight, giving them an 8-4 edge in the rivalry.

TILL, SMITH VOTED MVP

Juniors Quentin Till and George Smith were voted the most outstanding performers in the meet by their teammates. Till won the 220 yard dash, the 440 yard dash, and ran a leg on the winning mile relay. Smith won the high jump with a lead of 6' 5".

Five meet records and one school record were set by the Seminoles. Bill Welch broke his own school record with a 14.8 seconds clocking in the high hurdles. New meet records were set by Bill Davis in the 880, Herb Kraft in the broad jump, Jeff Clark in the discus, and Craig Johnson, Tom Houston, Davis, and Till in the mile relay.

Johnson also won the 100 yard dash with the fast time of 9.8 seconds.

Other first places went to team captain Don Ostergaard in the shot put, Don Roberts in the mile run, Kent Mills in the two mile run, Ed Hays in the pole vault, and Terry Long in the 220 yard low hurdles.

FSU's next dual meet opponent will be Alabama on March 23 in Tallahassee.

Netters Face Georgia First

By SAM McCALL
Flambeau Sports Writer

The FSU tennis squads, varsity and freshmen take on the University of Georgia netters here in two matches Thursday and Friday.

One of these matches will replace the Georgia half of the usual home and home series. The Florida State contingent handed the Bulldogs last year 5-4, and split another.

The Seminoles go into their first match with the same team as last year, while the Bulldogs have gone considerably stronger due to loss of players by graduation.

The positions for the Georgia matches have not been decided as yet for the varsity, according to FSU Coach Danny Holcomb. The three top contenders for the number one singles position are Rebel Bellamy, Ed Fasula and Gordy Smith, closely followed by Buddy McClain and Paul Scarpa. Several intra-squad matches are remaining and these will aid in determining positions. In the play off for first position in doubles, Bellamy and Smith are competing with Fasula and Scarpa.

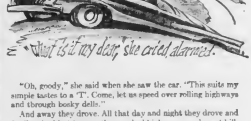
"LOVE IN REVERSE"

They met. His heart leapt. "I love you," he cried.

"Me, too, hey," she cried.

"Tell me," he cried, "are you a girl of expensive tastes?"

"No, hey," she cried, "I am a girl of simple tastes."



"Good," he cried, "for my cruel father sends me an allowance barely large enough to support life."

"Money does not matter to me," she cried. "My tastes are simple, my wants are few. Just take me riding in a long, new, yellow convertible and I am content."

"Goodbye," he cried, and ran away as fast as his chubby little legs could carry him, for he had no convertible, nor the money to buy one, nor the means to get the money, short of picking up his stingy father by the ankles and shaking him till he wallet fell out.

He knew he must forget this girl but, lying on his pallet at the dormitory, whimpering and moaning, he knew he could not.

At last an idea came to him: though he did not have the money to buy a convertible, perhaps he had enough to rent one! Hope reborn, he rushed at once to an automobile rental company and rented a yellow convertible for $10 down plus 10¢ a mile, and with many a laugh and cheer drove away to pick up the girl.

"Oh, goody," she said when she saw the car. "This suits my simple tastes to a T". Come, let us speed over rolling highways and through bosky dells."

And away they drove. All that day and night they drove and finally, tired but happy, they parked high on a windswept hill.

"Marlboro?" he said.

"Yum yum," she said.

They lit up. They puffed with deep contentment. "You know," he said, "you are like a Marlboro—mild and fresh and relaxing."

"But there is a big difference between Marlboro and me," she said, "because I do not have a Selectrate filter nor do I come in soft pack or flip-top box."

They laughed. They kissed. He screamed.

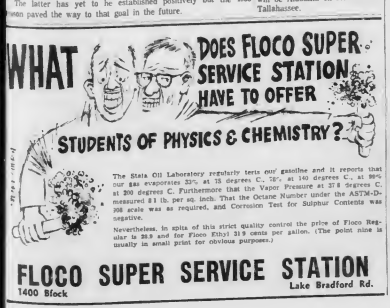
"What is it, my dear," she cried, alarmed.

"Look at the speedometer," he said. "We have driven 200 miles and this car costs 10¢ a mile and I have only $20 left."

"But that's exactly enough," she said.

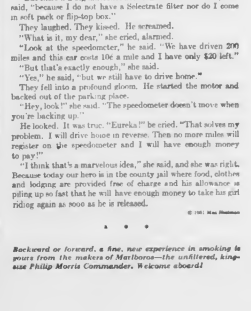
"Yes," he said, "but we still have to drive home."

They fell into a profound gloom. He started the motor and backed out of the parking place.



"Hey, look!" she said. "The speedometer doesn't move when you're backing up."

He looked. It was true. "Eureka!" he cried. "That solves my problem. I will drive home in reverse. Then no more miles will register on the speedometer and I will have enough money to pay!"



"I think that's a marvelous idea," she said, and she was right. Because today our hero is in the county jail where food, clothes and lodging are provided free of charge and his allowance is piling up so fast that he will have enough money to take his girl riding again as soon as he is released.

Court Candidates Voice Own Views For Coming Election Next Tuesday

By BONNIE PERRY
Flambeau Feature Editor

Five students have qualified to run for the Florida State University student courts' election next Tuesday.

Gordon Smith and Dan Walbolt are vying for the one contested position, Chief Justice of Honor Court. Neither is running on the Student Party ticket as the Party does not endorse candidates for Chief Justice.

Unopposed for their particular office are Linda Stearns, Chairman University Court; Bob Sopher, Chairman of Traffic Court; and Diane Goodwin, Clerk of Honor Court. All three have received Student Party nomination.

CHIEF JUSTICE

Honor Court is made up of nine justices, one of whom is chief. Four of the other eight are juniors and four are seniors. All are elected.

The chief justice receives complaints of lying, stealing and cheating. It is his duty to make an investigation as to the validity of the charge, plus gathering the facts for presentation to the court.

In court, the chief justice acts as an impartial moderator. It is also his duty to present the court's decision to the Faculty Review Committee, which has final say.

* * *

Gordon Smith is a junior marketing major with a 2.40 overall grade average. He is presently a justice on Honor Court.

Smith

Smith feels that there "are some things that can be revamped" about the Court. He stated that he would like to see some changes, "as a Student Senate sees fit," that would strengthen the Court's position. Smith feels that the Court should be taken away from faculty power, as it is "definitely a student court," he said.

Smith, presently on the varsity tennis team, has been on the Tally-Ho staff, a member of Alpha Council, vice president of the Intramural Board, and rush chairman and pledge trainer of his social fraternity, Sigma Chi.

* * *

Dan Walbolt is a junior history major in pre-law preparation. Walbolt is presently secretary of Men's Judiciary and has a 3. overall grade average.

Walbolt

"I think the biggest thing that has to be done is to get a healthy attitude toward Honor Court as far as the students are concerned," said Walbolt. "Honor Court is a very integral part of the University, and shouldn't be taken only as a preventive measure."

Walbolt explained that he felt the job is not to "lessen our load" through overlooking cases, but by creating a "better understanding" on the part of students.

Walbolt is vice president of his social fraternity, Lambda Chi Alpha, has been on the varsity baseball team, Executive Council of Ruge Hall, and in Phi Eta Sigma, freshmen moo's honorary.

UNIVERSITY COURT

University Court is made up of Men's and Women's Judiciary sitting together. The Court tries cases not expressly delegated to the other courts, and appeals from House Councils.

The Court sits together when dealing with a case involving both a man and a woman, but sits in separate units when either a man or a woman is on trial.

Linda Stearns, unopposed for chairmanship of University Court, is a junior government and history major, preparing to teach or do guidance counseling work. Miss Stearns is presently a member of Women's Judiciary with a 3.2 overall grade average.

"Politics have always been a basic part of my life," said Miss Stearns. She enjoys campaigns because they give her more opportunity to talk to and with people. She feels that students who run for student government positions, and the courts in particular, have to be interested in student problems and be willing to devote much time and energy to the position.

Stearns

The responsibility and self-discipline of each individual are most important, said Miss Stearns. Each individual should take more pride in the university and uphold the rules which they have accepted by coming here, she added.

Miss Stearns is a Junior Counselor, was a Student Senator last year on the Joint Judicial Rules Committee, a Sophomore Counselor, a two-year member of the Speaker's Bureau, has served as Pan-Hellenic representative for her social sorority, Chi Omega, and is secretary of the sorority this year, a member of Garnet Key and the Lobby Committee.

TRAFFIC COURT

The Traffic Court is composed of four members, two from the junior class and two from the sophomore class, and the chairman.

The Court hears cases violating the Traffic Code, as established by the Student Traffic Committee.

Bob Sopher, unopposed for chairmanship of the Traffic Court, is a sophomore history and social studies major. He is presently a Traffic Court member with a 2.6 overall average.

Sopher said that he felt that the Traffic Court Chairman should have voting responsibility on the Student Traffic Committee. As it is now, Sopher explained, he can only make suggestions to the Committee. The Traffic Court Chairman has direct contact with traffic cases, whereas the Traffic Committee does not.

Sopher said he felt that there should be "better coordination between the functions of the court and the personnel who enforce the Traffic Codes." There should also be a standardization of the method of selecting the Court's clerk, Sopher stated.

Sopher is treasurer of his social fraternity, Theta Chi, and was song chairman last year.

CLERK OF HONOR COURT

Duties of the Honor Court Clerk are to keep all Court records, assume duties of the Chief Justice in his absence, and make all Court decisions available to the student body.

* * *

Diane Goodwin, unopposed for Clerk of Honor Court, is a sophomore home economics education major. She is presently sophomore representative to Women's Judiciary and has a 3.1 overall average.

Miss Goodwin felt that because of her experience in the past she wanted to serve the University in the capacity of Honor Court Clerk.

Goodwin

Having worked with Judiciary this year, she said she would like to see cases concerning dormitory house violations be kept to House Councils, so as to alleviate Judiciary. She said this could be done rather easily with Judiciary's compilation of past cases as a precedent.

Miss Goodwin is a member of Pi Beta Phi social sorority, is on the Tally-Ho staff, and was vice president of Dorman Hall last year.

FSU Computing Hall Shows Electronic Age

By PATSY GUTHRIE
Flambeau Staff Writer

The FSU computing center, presently housed in the Business Bldg., all but rivals the library in universality of use by academic divisions.

Physics, statistics, education, chemistry, geology, mathematics, meteorology, sociology, economics, business, and psychology, in descending order of hours used, all utilized the computing center during a recent three month period.

The total usage of the center for this period, as measured in hours, reached a figure of 777. Although a small amount of time was granted other groups, the academic divisions listed accounted for nearly 95 per cent of the total time used.

Some academic work was done for Florida Southern College and Florida A&M University, in addition to non-academic work for the business office and the Florida State Development Commission.

IBM HEART

The heart of the computing center is an IBM 650, a medium-high speed digital computer which the university obtained three years ago.

The 650 does everything from figuring the deductions on university paychecks to calculating the spin of a subatomic particle, according to Dr. E. P. Miles Jr., director designate of the computing center.

The speed and capabalities of the machine are indicated by the fact that it can take the square root of a 10 digit number, accurate to nine or ten figures, in .152 seconds. About 60 operations are performed in the process. It has a 2,000 word "memory."

Information is sent in and out of the machine by punched cards.

One of the 650's recent jobs was deriving state percentile ratings for the 80,000 students participating in the state-wide Ninth Grade Testing program, both for separate tests and composite groupings of tests.

One graduate student, currently working on his master's thesis project, has utilized the machine for 50 hours thus far.

PHYSICS MOST

Physics is presently the number one user of the 650, in spite of the fact that the needs of two research projects for a larger computer required making outside arrangements at Eglin Air Force Base and Oak Ridge, Tenn.

To alleviate the necessity for off-campus computation and to permit planned expansion in such areas as nuclear science and molecular biophysics, computing center officials hope to receive an IBM 709 digital computer in September.

The 709 is a much faster and larger machine than the present computer. Its various computing or logical commands are performed at rates from 16 to 2,400 times as fast, and it has a 32,000 word memory.

According to Dr. Miles, the National Science Foundation has made a tentative budget recommendation of $200,000 toward expansion of the FSU computing center, but the recommendation carries the clause that matching state funds be made available.

The commercial price of the 709 at installation would be over one million dollars, but the machine may be obtained by the university at a discount price of $254,700

NEW QUARTERS

Quarters for a larger machine are included in the Mathematics-Meteorology Bldg. now under construction.

The 709 would make it possible to solve in 25 seconds a problem that would take 15 years by the pencil and paper method. In one second it can perform 40,000 additions and subtractions, or 5,000 multiplications and divisions.

Dr. Miles pointed out that high-powered computing facilities, contrary to the notion that machines are putting man out of business, open up new job possibilities.

THE BRAIN . . . of the FSU Computer Center which is presently located in the Business Building is this IBM 650, a medium-high speed digital computer which does everything from figuring deductions on FSU paychecks to calculating the spin of a subatomic particle. Two computer workers are checking the delicate machine over.

Bright idea with a glowing future

At Gen Tel, research is put to work to advance communications through sight as well as sound.

The dial of our compact STARLITE® phone, for example, utilizes an entirely new source of light that marks a milestone in visual communications. Called PANELESCENT® (electroluminescent) lighting, it produces light without heat, has no bulb to turn on and off, and costs less than 1¢ a year for electricity.

Pioneered and developed by the Lighting Products Division of our subsidiary, Sylvania, this dramatic new light opens up almost infinite product possibilities in sight communication. Already it is being used for clock faces, radio dials, auto instrument panels and road signs.

And, through the development of an ingenious "cross-grid" design, electroluminescent panels are now capable of reproducing alpha-numeric "read-outs" for electronic computers. This achievement, in fact, may one day lead to "flat wall" TV.

It is another example of the way General Telephone & Electronics coordinates the scientific and engineering leadership of many divisions in order to make communications progress on all fronts.

Do all Air Force Officers have Wings?
Decidedly not. In fact most executive jobs are on the ground. Of course, all officers may apply for pilot and navigator training if they meet the eligibility requirements. There will always be a need for piloted aircraft. And it is foreseeable that in your working lifetime, there will be piloted spacecraft—piloted and navigated by Air Force officers.
But right now, there is also a big future for college-trained Air Force officers on the ground. New and exciting technical jobs are opening up. Important administrative positions must be filled as World War II officers move into retirement.
How can you—a college student—become an Air Force officer? First, there's Air Force ROTC. Then for college graduates, men and women in certain fields, there is Officer Training School. The graduate of its three-month course wins a commission as a second lieutenant. Other ways are the Navigator Training program, and the Air Force Academy.
Some benefits that go with being an Air Force officer. Starting salary plus allowances compare with the average in equivalent civilian jobs. Then there's free medical and dental care, thirty-day vacation, the chance to win graduate degrees at Air Force expense, and liberal retirement provisions.
No, Air Force officers do not need wings to move up. There's plenty doing on the ground. Perhaps you could be one of these young executives in blue. Ask your local Air Force Recruiter. Or write, Officer, Career Information, Dept. SC13, Box 7608, Washington 4, D.C., if you want further information about the navigator training or Officer Training School programs.

'Education For World Leadership' Was Topic Of Symposium During Inauguration Events

By TONI DI CARLO
Flambeau Staff Writer

"As the world leans on the United Nations, so the United Nations leans on the universities, for the foundation of the United Nations is in the minds of men."

These were the words of Dr. Frank Graham, first speaker in the inaugural symposium Friday on "Education for World Leadership."

Dr. George Allen, one of 12 declarations of human rights Americans given the permanent should not only be past and hisclassification of career ambassatoric but also a present source dor, Dr. Logan Wilson, chancellor of America's self respect."
at the University of Texas, and Dr. Graham, former president of the University of North Carolina and present mediator for the United Nations, formed the panel.

Dr. Marian Irish, head of the FSU Government Dept., acted as moderator.

Dr. Graham emphasized the need for academic freedom in a university. "Freedom to study the theological implications of the geological earth, the biological implications of the physical structure of fish, the social implications of the economic structure, the democratic implications of a bi - racial structure in society and the international implications of the internal structure of the atom," are all necessary, he said.

In defending the need for the United Nations Dr. Graham commented, "It is true that 'freedom begins at home,' but without stable order and organize peace, there may be no home in which to begin."

TWO PERSPECTIVES

Dr. Graham described the UN from a "vertical perspective" and a "horizontal perspective."

In the "vertical perspective" he included man's past history of savagery and barbarism, stating that "The United Nations can help control this savagery in nations."

The progress of ideas into mechanisms which bring about industrial and commercial revolutions which make the nations of the world inter-dependent call for some sort of international co -ordination, stated Dr. Graham.

In the "horizontal" section, he pointed out that, after a long period of isolation which failed to keep the U. S. out of wars, "we decided that instead of being on the outside drawn into wars, we would get inside the UN and from there seek effective means of preventing wars."

He also stated that "our great

"Organizing of a strong International government with a police force" was one of the issues he listed as more important than communism. "This problem will continue even if communism sinks into the ground tomorrow, which I wish it would."

The only way to hand down a peaceful and civilized society to future generations is to "hand down an organized world."

"The revolution of expectations" is the other issue which Allen stated was more pressing. Through mass communications, modern transportation and advanced technologies, progress in replacing tradition in this generation for the first time in many parts of the world, he stated.

STILL PRIMITIVE

Dr. George Allen, second speaker in the program, stated that, after 30 years in the United States' foreign service, he had "come to a sad and disillusioned conclusion: international relations are as primitive now as if man were just emerging from the jungle."

Dr. Allen cited the recent near-collapse of a pre-summit conference because representatives could not agree on whether a round or a square table would be used as an example of this "primitiveness.

"We in the diplomatic field have made absolutely no progress. Each nation still has a chip on its shoulder, insisting on complete sovereignty."

Although the ideological differences between communism and democracy are important, he suggested that other problems are more important.

Dr. Allen reminded the audience that there have been many instances in history in which nations of very different ideologies have joined forces against another nation, perhaps more similar to them.

TRANSCEND GEOGRAPHY

Dr. Logan Wilson, chancellor of the University of Texas and former classmate of FSU President Gordon Blackwell, states that a university should "generate activities transcending geographical boundaries. Any attempt to differentiate between local, national and international obligations is futile."

In modern society, Dr. Wilson said, "A liberal education must teach the student to be a citizen of the world."

Dr. Wilson suggested that history, literature and other general education courses should be taught from an international point of view, and wanted to emphasize foreign affairs in undergraduate studies.

The speaker also advocated increased facilities for foreign students and more exchange programs.

"The role of the universities in world leadership involves much more than merely more exchanges of students . . . it is a complex and serious enterprise which must elicit our best efforts."

During the discussion period at the end of the program, the speakers discussed various topics of international interest.

Stage Productions To Show In Westcott

Puccini's 'Tosca' Is Tonight And Saturday

By PATTY PACHLER
Flambeau Staff Writer

Tiekets are still available for tonight's and tomorrow night's performances of the Florida State University Opera Guild's production of Puccini's opera Tosea.

Any remaining tickets, which are $1.75 for students and $2 for others, will be sold before both performances which are at 8:15 p.m. in Westcott Auditorium.

More tickets are available for Saturday evening's performance, said the student assistant in the Westcott Ticket Office.

A melodrama that combines political intrigue, revenge and murder in a turbulent love story based on a series of events actually supposed to have happened in Rome, the English translation of Tosca by John Gutman, is directed by Richard Collins, Opera Guild director.

ROME SETTING

Sct In Rome in 1800, the opera tells of Floria Tosca, a celebrated singer, being forced by the cruel police chief, Baron Scarpia, to reveal the hiding place of Angelotti, the escaped leader of the short-lived Republic of Rome, to save ber lover, Cavaradossi, who has been hiding Angelotti.

Collins sings the lead role of Baron Scarpia, a role in which he has appeared in a number of professional productions. Tosca is played on alteroate nights by Ethel Donaldson and Christine Buhrman, both of whom have sung in previous Opera Guild productions.

Cavaradossi, an artist and Tosca's lover, is sung alternately by Leland Fox and Wendell Bartholf. Fox has sung with the Masque and Lyre Opera Co., the Metropolitan Light Opera Co. and was a member of the St. James Boys Choir. Bartholf spent four years in tbe U. S. Army Chorus and has appeared in previous FSU productions.

Others in the cast are Walter Richards and Lonnie Keene, portraying Angelotti, William Poplin as the sacristan, Douglas Therrell as Spoletta, a police agent, Paul Betros, a police officer, and Sisco Dean, the jailer.

A special 30-member chorus from the Blessed Sacrament School has been selected for the "Boys Choir" to sing the "Te Deum" in the opening scene which takes place in the Church of Sant-Andrea.

The chorus will be directed by Dr. Irvin Cooper and G. S. Griffin will direct a men's chorus for the same scene.

The stage setting in Rome in 1800, which includes a cburch and a jail, is being prepared hy William King, technical director, who is also designing the costumes.

FREDERICK WORLOCK . . .as Mr. Zuss in Arcbibald MacLeish's J. B., holds the mask of God which he later puts oa. J. B. is beiog presented by the Artist Series Mooday aod Tuesday nights.

MacLeish's 'J. B.' To Be Monday And Tuesday

The ancient Biblical drama of Job, God and Satan will be re-enaeted in modern dress on Westcott stage Monday and Tuesday when Archibald MacLeish's J. B. is presented by the Artist Series.

A few good seats are still available for both nights, the Westcott Ticket Office reported. Tickets are free to students and $3.50 to the public for the play which begins at 8:15 each night.

Dr. Roberi Lawton, associate dean of Arts and Sciences, will review J. B. at the Eoglish Coffee Hour at 4 p.m. today io Westmioster House.

Dr. Lawton, wbo said he feels the poetic drama bas "profound meaniog," plans to emphasize language and thonght.

"This 'play in verse' about the justificatioa of the injustice of the Universe, weaves thought and language into a dramatie texture of nousual brilliance aod richness," he commeoted. "And it is all good theater."

MacLeish, an American poet, received the Pulitzer prize for his re-telling of the classic theme in which the suffering Biblical Job has become a 20th century businessman, J. B.

Opening with the two vendors in a traveling circus who put on the circus masks of God and the Devil, the drama reveals the tragedy in J. B.'s life.

Frederick Worlock, a Welshman who made his stage debut in 1905, takes the role of God in the road company of the production which ran on Broadway for a year.

Worlock's theatrical career includes appearances with Laurette Taylor in Sweet Nell of Old Drury, with Ethel Barrymore in an Amazing Career, and with Judith Anderson in Medea.

Opposite him in the role of the Devil—the ageless man who scoffs at the world—is John Carradine, whose Broadway roles range from Shakespeare to musicals.

One of his latest Broadway parts was in The Madwomaa of Chaillot. He has also appeared in numerous motion pictures.

Shepperd Strudwick will play the title role of J. B. He appeared last season on Broadway in Only In America and in previous Broadway productions of Chekhov's The Three Sisters and Shaw's The Doctor's Dilemma.

The role of J. B.'s wife, Sarah, will be acted by Olive Dunbar, who has been seen frequently on television.

Director of the production is Elia Kazan, well known for his direction of Tennessee Williams' plays and such movies as On the Waterfront and A Face in the Crowd.

J. B. is produced by Alfred de Liagre Jr.

The play brought MacLeish his third Pulitzer award, the first two being for poetry. Currently Boylston Professor at Harvard, his alma mater, MacLeish was Librarian of Congress in the Roosevelt administration and was the first American member of UNESCO's executive council.

Despite Popular Opinion

SG Infirmary Survey Yields Good Reports

Results of a survey taken by Student Government on the over-all effectiveness of the infirmary indieate more favorable than unfavorable student opinions, according to Dunean Moore, Secretary of Welfare, who conducted the survey.

In an effort to discover the attitude of students toward the infirmary and its operating system, each student admitted to the infirmary in February was given a form to fill out after his release.

The unsigned form was to be sent to Moore, who compiled results in a report submitted to Student Senate and other groups and individuals.

"I consider the survey an excellent idea. It was a very interesting report, and I think such a device is the only way to ever have a meeting of the minds," said Dr. J. B. Shuler, head of the infirmary.

From the approximate 275 forms given out, 82 were tilled out and returned. On the survey form, there were two definite questions and a space for comments, good and bad.

Response to the first question, "Do you feel thst you would be more satisfied if the infirmary were run partially on an appointment basis?" was forty-five per cent positive and fifty-five per cent negative. Thus the majority were against an appointment set-up (pertaining to doctors).

"Did you receive sufficient consideration and attention in relation to the seriousness of your injury?" was the second question, to which 11 students stated explicitly that the cure they received was unsatisfactory. Each gave definite reasons for his answer.

71 FAVORABLE

The remaining 71 answers were favorable, forty-one having attached comments. Some of the comments did include constructive criticism.

Certain suggestions resulted from an analysis of the survey form answers. Many of the suggestions, especially those concerned with physical facilities, have already been changed, according to Shuler.

Others, he felt, were not really valid. Shuler referred to the suggestion that prescriptions be labeled with students' names and the kind of drug.

He said such handling of medicine was done in accordance with pharmacy laws, and that the prescriptions were identified by number. Because of the volume of business the informary has, names on prescriptions would be impractical, said Shuler.

Constructive critieism offered by students included more cleanliness, especially in relation to changing linen, sweeping and cleaning throughout; less wait in balls for doctors, less emphasis on identification cards; more care in food preparation; more seeming competence, as opposed to apathy, among doctors and staff.

Tarpon Club

The Tarpoa Club will have Spring tryouts in the pool at the Woman's Gymnasium at 7 p.m., Tuesday.

No previous syncronized swimming experience is reqoired. Those who are chosen will be trained to participate in the show and will go on tours with the show.

The first scheduled trip is to Jacksonville.

Evaluation Committee Is Passed By Faculty Senate

The Curriculum Evaluation Committee as proposed by Student Body President Carl Butler and approved by Student Senate was endorsed by Faculty Senate Wednesday.

Still pending final administrative npproval the faculty-student committee will consist of 10 student representatives from the various sections of the university and the dean of faculties and a representative from the Faculty Senate committee on academic affairs.

The resolution passed Faculty Senate by a large majority and with little debate, according to the Chairman Lewis M. Killian

Faculty Senate also adopted a committee report setting up policies and procedures for selecting candidates for honorary degrees. The criteria for selection will be a record of outstanding scholarship or achievement.

Recipients of the degrees will be balanced with regard to the fields of endeavor. Nominations including personal history of the nominee will be submitted three months prior to Commencement to an anonymous Faculty Senate selection committee, according to Dr. Killian.

Speech Contest To Start March 21

The deadline for entries in the first of three Florida State University intramural speech contests is today.

"The Kennedy Administration" will be the topic of the first of the annual series.

The contests will cover three phases of public speaking. The first, impromptu speaking, will be Tuesday. After-dinner speaking and persuasive speaking (original oratory) preliminaries will be March 28 and April 11, respectively.

The date for finals in all contests has not yet been set.

Any undergraduate with or without speech experience or training is eligible to participate. Students may register by contacting Dr. Gregg Phifer, Richard Hahn or Marilyn Young in the Speech Dept. in 206 History or by sending entries through the eampus mail.

Dendlines for all three contests are four days before the preliminary round.

In impromptu speaking the speaker will draw three topics concerning "The Kennedy Administration" and will be given five minutes for preparation, after which he will speak for five to seven minutes on one ol the three subjects. For the after-dinner speaking, the speaker must talk as entertainingly as possible for more than six minutes on bis own specific subject in the general field of mass media communications. Persuasive speaking, the last of the areas, requires a speech of no more than ten minutes on any subject related to the United Nations.

Tuesday's contest has ten entrants to dste, and is the smallest of the three. Students have already registered for the remaining two contests and more entries are expected.

A plaque, inscribed with the winner's name, is to be awarded in each event. This remains with the winner for a year and is passed on in turn to the 1962 winner. Suitably inscribed certificates will be awarded in all events.

It's Up To The Student Body

There has been a great deal of sound and fury about an honor system on this campus, but we won't know what it all signifies until after the Tuesday election.

Students used to complain that the Honor System covered so many "Mickey Mouse" house rules and social regulations that they simply negated the entire system as a farce. Actually, their complaint was based on a popular misconception, for the old Honor System never applied to anything but lying, cheating and stealing as defined in the constitution of the student body.

HOWEVER, SENATE, IN a commendable effort to plesse, has spent many hours in sessions, committee meetings, conversations and private thought, trying to write an Academic Honor System, applying only to cheating, which will be acceptable to the students. If the student body truly wants an honor system, this one should be successful.

However, Sen. Gerry Dobson has challenged the student body's "attitude" toward such a system, claiming that "an air of cynicism prevails." The answer to Dobson's charge should come from the polls on Tuesday but, since the concept of "honor" is very popular in our idealistic atmosphere, very few people seem to have any doubt as to whether or not the bill will pass the referendum.

NEVERTHELESS, IN CASTING their votes, students should carefully consider their own willingness to abide by BOTH parts of the Academic Honor System. As long as an "honorable" student is considered a "squealer" by his fellows, an honor system cannot survive successfully.

Any student who would hesitate to report a cheater should also hesitate to vote for a system which he does not intend to obey. Where is the logic in supporting a bill which will make a hypocrite of him?

THERE IS NO finer concept in a university than that of an honor system—if it works. But there is no reason for voting into existence another farce like the one we had in the past except for use as misleading public relations material.

Any student who does not intend to obey both facets of the system should be honest enough to cast his ballot against it. In this way, a true indication can be given of the students' attitude toward an Academic Honor System on this campus. If they endorse it, we enter the cycle again and hope that the results will be better this time. If they decide against it, we will have saved ourselves the trouble, embarrassment and bad publicity which results from the breakdown of such a system.

"Here, Little Boy. Pull The Nice Horsie In With You"

Trials Will Place A Focus On Israel

By BILL TROTTS

With the trial of Adolph Eichmann in April, the attention of the world will once again center on Israel, the small state whose rebirth has caused such politico - religious labor pains. The world will sit in judgment on those who judge Adolph Eichmann.

Only on the legal portion of the case is Eichmann's guilt in question. His moral guilt has already been established by the world at large. He admits to having done his job of supporting extermination as effectively as possible. It is doubtful that the court decision will be anything except "guilty as charged." Once this decision is known the entire world will be waiting for the sentence to be awarded. By the punishment of Adolph Eichmann the Israeli state will be determining its moral pattern of growth for years to come. Even though it may not feel committed by its decision in the Eichmann case, public opinion will establish for Israel the moral values which will be assigned the new nation.

IF ISRAELI citizens are as concerned about human rights and the value of human life as they should be, they will give long consideration to the type of punishment meted out to Herr Eichmann. If they should choose vengeance as their course of action, the body of Adolph Eichmann will mark another chapter in the gruesome story of man's struggle for decency. The morality of the Jewish nation is on trial with Adolph Eichmann; it alone can make the decision between justice and revenge. If revenge is what it desires, then one man's death will not relieve the agonies of millions. To take revenge for the Jews who were executed by the Nazis would require the deaths of 10 million Eichmanns, for Eichmann alone is not considered worthy of one innocent man.

BUT THE unfortunate side of this trial, and the history of Israel, is the presence of two distinct groups in the world of Jewry, which are frequently confused. The first group is composed of those whose total bond is their worship the God of Moses. The concern is religious and they are the persecuted. The second group is known as the Zionists, and though they are many in the Jewish religion, their prime purpose is to establish and maintain a national state of Israel. Nationalism rather than religion is their common bond. Too often there has been no delineation between these groups, and the Jews have suffered for the mistakes of the nationalists. According to an American Jewish Zionist, Lilienthal, in his book "Whose Price Israel?" the state of Israel is primarily a product of Zionism and he quotes Theodor Herzl, a New York attorney, who refers to the Jews as men "who are little concerned with human blood but is not their own."

THIS LATTER group has also shown strong fervor in suppressing any criticism of Israel. A favorite Zionist technique is to brand as anti-semitic any person who dares to question their power-policies. The ambitions of the people of Israel have impressed the entire world, but to condemn them as above criticism is ridiculous. Where criticism is suppressed, power and corruption are usually present; the honest reporting of the situation is in dire need. In the control of the state of Israel will be dedicated to the treatment of Adolph Eichmann.

If the religious aspects of the young nation prevail, Eichmann can expect a severe sentence, during which his life nor can be utilized in restitution, in some small part for the loss he caused the world. But if the Zionistic side of the Israelis have its way, then Eichmann will not be that another victim of World War II, and the state of Israel will have relinquished its claim of human rights to national goal.

It will be a historic moment when the Israeli people decide between the nationalistic demands for vengeance and the strict commandment of the God of Moses.

Candidates Submit Letters

Champion

TO ALL F.S.U. STUDENTS:

This Tuesday you will elect the candidate you consider best-qualified to serve as your Women's Vice President.

We would like to recommend MYGNON CHAMPION to you as the candidate most capable of serving you in this office.

MYGNON'S RECORD is proof of her leadership, dependability and service. She has served as Woman's Vice President Pro Tem for two years. During her sophomore year, Mygnon was elected by Student Senate as "Most Outstanding Senator of 1959-60".

Mygnon has served as chairman of six Senate committees and is presently the only woman senator serving as chairman of a standing Student Senate committee. During her three years in Senate, Mygnon has maintained an excellent attendance record, has introduced more than 40 bills and resolutions, and has been a leader in Senate debate.

WOMEN'S SENATE recently selected Mygnon to represent F.S.U. at the National IAWS Convention in Wisconsin in April. She was even more recently chosen to serve on the Board of Directors of the newly-incorporated Student Enterprises. Her selection Tuesday to Mortar Board and her earlier selection to Alpha Lambda Delta speak for her scholastic achievements.

Mygnon's record speaks for itself. We hope that she, on the basis of her qualifications, you will elect Mygnon Champion as your Women's Vice President.

Student Body Vice President

Moore

DEAR FELLOW STUDENTS:

Next Tuesday, each of you will have an opportunity to select the students who you feel are best able to lead your student government. Since this student government concerns you directly, you should look carefully at each candidate's qualifications, experience, and potential ability to perform in the office which he is seeking.

I am a candidate for the office of Vice President of the Student Body. I feel that both my past experience and proven ability qualify me for the job. However, my best qualification is a personal one. It is a sincere desire to serve the students of Florida State University, and in doing so, do the best possible job.

The office of Vice President of our student body is one that requires a person who is devoted to the students and is a dedicated worker. I therefore pledge myself to the students and to the student government of Florida State University.

I would appreciate your consideration at the polls next Tuesday. Thank you very much.

Sincerely,
DUNCAN MOORE

Van Assenderp

DEAR FELLOW STUDENTS:

During the past two years our Student Senate has rendered unparalleled service and leadership under the guidance of Carl Butler and Bobby Byrd. It is Time to decide if it is to continue to perform a vital function or if it will return to its complacency of the past. In seeking the vice-presidency of the student body my aim is to insure a dynamic senate.

Our university now faces a crucial period. Student actions will determine the success or failure as we meet our problems. This year as Chairman of the Student Lobby Committee, I have been impressed with the necessity of convincing our legislators and the people of Florida that we desire and need quality education. At the same Time, we must conduct ourselves and student government in a manner that will continue to merit the respect and the attention of the University administration and the people of Florida. This is the two-fold challenge facing us during the coming year.

WE CANNOT MEET this challenge with dis-spirited, uninformed or lackadaisical leadership. Nor can we meet it by avoiding decisive, forward-looking action and recognizing only the pleasant, enjoyable functions of student government. Instead, it is Time to make decisions — however unpleasant; Time to take action — however difficult; and Time to devote ourselves to the hard, but necessary task of leadership.

The office of Student Body Vice-president offers a unique opportunity to provide the leadership to meet these challenges. I ask the opportunity to work with and for you in this office. It's Time to Act.

KEN VAN ASSENDERP

DEAR FELLOW STUDENTS:

The recently completed study of the Honor System and the proposed changes which you will find on your ballot Tuesday emphasize a realistic approach to the Honor System. I believe you will find the proposed changes a sound improvement. Because of these changes we have an opportunity to re - vitalize the Honor System and the Honor Court — to make them a realistic, functioning aspect of University life.

HOWEVER, WHETHER or not we realize this goal depends upon the attitude and leadership qualities of the man who will head the court. My attitude toward the functions of the court has been influenced by my participation in athletics, scholastic honoraries, our university court system, a religious student house, and fraternity affairs.

I believe:

That the court must consider every individual innocent until proven guilty beyond a shadow of doubt.

THAT THE COURT must be scrupulously fair to every individual and must earnestly protect his rights as a student.

The court must work quickly and efficiently either to substantiate the charge or clear the student's name.

I will strive to make these principles realities and to develop in our student body the respect for the Honor Code and the Honor system in our university life.

Sincerely,
DAN WALBOLT

DEAR FELLOW STUDENTS:

When you go to the polls this coming Tuesday to vote for the Student Body offices, you will be faced with several important decisions one of which is who to vote for for the Chief Justice of the Honor Court. The answer should be simple. You will vote for the one for the most qualified person, one who has had experience in working with the Honor Court and the Honor System.

I am now an Honor Court Justice, and am very familiar with the integral functions of the court. For this reason, I feel that I am aware of the courts weak points and its strong points. With this knowledge I will be able to give you—the students of FSU—that degree of honesty and justice that the students of a rapidly growing and progressing university deserve.

Remember the Honor System is your system, so be sure that you vote for the most qualified person to enforce your Honor System.

Board Of Publications

Abbott

DEAR STUDENTS:

In an ever-growing and rapidly expanding university the student publications must keep pace with this growth by offering to the students work of increasing quality and volume. One of the main duties of the Board of Publications is to provide for expansion and improvement of student publications and to see that these editions toward high goals of quality in collegiate journalism.

I want to see the publications grow, and I want to be a part of the leadership guiding them in this growth. Therefore, I am running for the Board.

I have served on the Board by appointment this semester. My experiences in collegiate journalism have been on the Florida Flambeau, as assistant news editor for two years and as news editor during the Summer of 1960. I will be news editor of the Flambeau next year.

I also had two years of journalism experience in high school; wrote a weekly column for the Large Sentinel for one year; and was a news trainee at the St. Petersburg Times for two Summers.

If I am elected I would like to encourage other student publications to establish a recruiting and training program such as I'm helping to establish on the Flambeau for next year.

Thank You.

Sincerely,
JOAN E. ABBOTT

McLemore

STUDENTS:

The bureaucracy of Florida State University student publications would amass even the most enlightened student body in this campus. There is not enough of a full salaried business manager for all publications to control advertising offices as well. The publications themselves lack adequate boards of editorial positions with only two hundred students drawing or indirectly involved in the publication. If a responsible editorial graph were drawn of the staggering offices, the Administration Office and Business Manager would appear above the editors with the Board of Student Publications at the top at the very top — a body authorized by the Student Body constitution to "help maintain the best standards in higher education and professional journalism in student publications." The Constitution continues to define its duties as the appointment of editors, appointment of business manager, approving all budgets, removing of delinquent appointees, and hearing the recommendations and needs of the various staffs.

IT HAS BEEN the sad fate in the past that the Board has been much too weak for such a responsible position. It has become a mere rubber stamp of approval for editorial candidates already selected by the various staffs. The Board has failed to show the editors leadership when problems of difficulties were presented to it. Saddest of all, the Board has been unsuccessful in controlling the difficulties which arise between the various editors and the two extraordinary offices of Business Manager and Advertising.

Having been an editor of student publication and an officio member of the Board for the past year, I have become even more aware of the difficulties of the Board and hope that as a voting member next year I will be in a position to redirect its functions for the best interests of the students at this University.

Bermuda Rule Is Ignored

DEAR WOMEN STUDENTS:

Several years ago your Women's Senate took on the task and responsibility of introducing and passing legislation concerning the wearing of bermuda shorts and tailored slacks on the FSU campus. Previous to this time wearing attire could only be worn to certain sports events. We felt, however, that we should be allowed the privilege of wearing bermuda shorts around the campus on Saturday. Therefore, we passed such a regulation.

The regulation is not being observed and for that reason we would like to take this opportunity to clarify the rule for you.

BERMUDA SHORTS and tailored slacks may be worn on Saturdays both on the campus and to business establishments which are immediately adjacent to the campus. At all other times shorts are not to be worn. This means they are

Letter To The Editor

Gymnastics Can Be Revived

An open letter to Student Body President, Carl Butler, Student Body Vice President, Bobby Byrd, FLAMBEAU Editor, Deanna Morris and FLAMBEAU Sports Editor, Ben Sharp, and all students of FSU:

I have been granted a leave of absence from FSU in order to serve as a Fulbright professor at the Universidad Nacional de Colombia, Bogota, Columbia. Before I go, I want to thank you for the support you have given to the gymnastics program. I fully appreciate your encouraging attitude.

Ben Sharp of the Flambeau has said, ". . . the gymnastic supporters (now) face the supreme test of their loyalty. . ." and indeed he speaks the truth! Unswerving loyalty on the part of all of you is needed now and in the months ahead if we are to realize the goal of the gymnastic program which is to provide for a competitive team which will function within the framework of GYMKANA and under the jurisdiction of the Department of Physical Education and Recreation.

THE GYMNASTS themselves, I feel sure, are blessed with this sense of loyalty, but being human, they will need the constant and assuring loyalty of the student body to inspire them if they are to preserve one of the most illustrious athletic records in the United States.

On all sides we hear opinions expressed by the thinking and farsighted men of our day, warning us that we are fast becoming a physically soft nation. The challenge is thrown to you, the student body, to do all in your power to keep us from preventable physical deterioration.

Gymnastics is one means of meeting that challenge. The self-discipline that is required for the mastery of gymnastics is one means of stimulating physical improvement perhaps because gymnastics lends to be a participant-sport rather than a spectator-sport.

THE STUDENT BODY Vice President Bobby Byrd has said that gymnastics "is certainly something we should find ways to finance." It is my hope that President Carl Butler will do his utmost to insure that this is done. Perhaps an appropriation might be made from student activity fees for the purpose of supporting a competitive team. The value of the educational phase of the gymnastics program is generally recognized. However, an adequate budget as well as a graduate assistant to coach the team is needed if the program is to function effectively.

A sport for each individual or sports for all might be the ideal way to enrich the program of physical education and recreation; wrestling facilities for the wrestler; fencing equipment for the fencer; soccer fields for the soccer enthusiast and so on. A successful program of gymnastics might be the opening wedge which might introduce many other sports activities and cause them to florish at FSU and so give us an enviable and outstanding reputation as an even more alert and progressive school.

WHAT IS PROGRESS but a matter of looking far down the road, around the corner, and foreseeing the best course of procedure? An ounce of prevention, goes the old proverb, is worth a pound of cure. Combat physical softness now and we are ready for any exigency. Promote a competitive gymnastics program now, and we shall contribute to the well being of the individual in particular and to the good of our nation in general.

My good wishes I leave with you, the student body, in the firm belief that it is in so seeing group, a capable, willing and eager group in whose hands the welfare of our nation is assured.

To Alexis Demas, Joe Gusic, Bill Beavers, and Ben Sharp, I wish to express sincere appreciation for the splendid cooperation they have given me. Also, to President Gordon Blackwell, Dr. Werner Baum, Dean of Faculties Woodbridge Stone, Dean R. R. Oglesby, and Dr. Kenneth Miller, I express my sincere thanks for the help they have given to me and gymnastics.

RESPECTFULLY,
HARTLEY PRICE

A Look Ahead

Florida State faces a tough task in their future climb wards intercollegiate athletic power. The burden of is on the Seminoles if FSU ever hopes to gain ission to the Southeastern Conference.

and this is exactly what FSU hopes to do.

thletic Director Vaughn Mancha, an ex-All-American with a for winning that always accompanies an athlete of this ow, has a plan for doing just that.

Mancha wants to schedule the big grid squads as opposition as as possible; thereby giving FSU revenue derived from play- ge major battles.

It's a noble aim, though it borders on the suicidal at times, to to play with the best and it appears to be the only way up the der. Playing the best helps fill the cutlers with enough money and recruiting, pay off the debts incurred in enlarging the dium and eventually make football into a paying proposition.

Once the sport is on its feet, when the Seminoles are winning ts regularly and the stadiums are filling up with paying cus- ers, then football will be given the burden of supporting the rest of the Florida State athletic program.

This seems to be a feasible plan; it is advanced by men sin- rely interested in the athletic welfare of Florida State University. But sincere interest could be a pitfall for the FSU program, ore than a catalyst of a healthy athletic program. Frequently college athletic circles the well-being of the football team is ad- ced by dubious means.

All too often, men who begin a program with great expectations, great desires, and great ideals lose the latter in their ardent quest for the first two.

FSU is not immune to the plague of over-emphasis. It can appen here.

Florida State, too, can give in to such illegal practices as pay- ents through at present FSU couldn't do it if they wanted to), study means of getting players, and conducting illegal prac- tices.

FSU can also walk the narrow tightrope of legality and come to a hair's length of doing any of these things. But just inside law is no place to conduct an athletic program for a university straining the framework of NCAA rulings or bending them here there is no way for Florida State University to conduct any ype program.

Not if the administration, faculty, and students want to give the brand of high standards that everyone so eloquently pro- es.

Florida State can not afford to treat its students unequally if e students are to achieve the standard of excellence that an ern university requires. It can not afford to separate athletes students into different categories either academically or dis- ipinarily.

As Florida State faces the athletic future it faces squarely the blem of over-emphasis. It faces the possibility of operating in the shadow of the rulebook under the pretense of "everyone's ing it." It faces a possible future of continual pressure for vic- ry on players, coach, and athletic director.

Instead, the standards that FSU claims to hold could be hon- ed if pressure was continually put on the coaches to keep skeletons of their closet even if they have to sacrifice victory to do it.

Seminoles Open Grid Drills

Garnet-Gold Tilt Set On April 22

By CHARLES INTRIAGO
Flambeau Sports Writer

Some 80 candidates for the Florida State University football team will take the field Monday, March 18, for the annual spring practice session. The Seminoles will have 36 days to get in their 20 practice days.

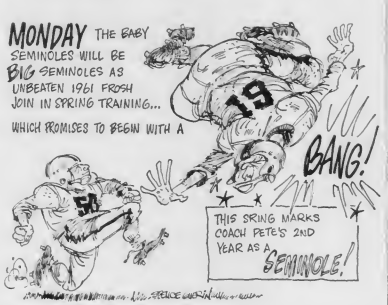
"We hope to practice on Mondays, Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays," Coach Peterson said. "But it depends on the weather and academic schedules."

The team will practice until April 22nd when the annual Garnet and Gold game — the climax of the spring drills — is played.

The first two weeks of practice will be employed mainly for fundamentals with later emphasis defense and pass offense.

22 LETTERMEN

Twenty-two returning lettermen and the undefeated freshman team will join in the drills.



According to Peterson the critical positions appear to be at center, where both varsity lettermen are scheduled for graduation, and at end, where only three lettermen will be returning.

He went on to say that the development of sophomore halfbacks will be of prime concern for the coming season.

WHITEHEAD, ROMEO LEAVE

The Seminoles will be hurting this year from nine lettermen who will not return. They include most-valuable-player Bud Whitehead and captain Tony Romeo. Due to academic difficulties. junior end Bill Lee has withdrawn from school.

Fullback Ed Parker of Leesburg and tackle Marion Bronson have also decided to forego football. They felt it necessary to devote more time to their studies.

FSU Relay Team Goes To Relays

Florida State University's mile relay team enters competition in the Third Annual Hollywood Optimists International Relays, Saturday evening, at Hollywood, Florida.

Three of the team members, Quentin Till, Tom Houston, and Bill Davis, were on the winning mile relay team which established a meet record of 3 22.5 in the Miami meet last Saturday. The fourth component of the team, Dave Ellis, placed in both the high and low hurdles at Miami.

Till will also see action in the 440 yard dash in which he captured first place last Saturday with a time of 49.6 seconds. Ellis will represent the Seminoles in the high hurdles.

Seminoles Slug Bulldogs 9-8 In Hitting Contest

By BILL VERIGAN
Asst. Sports Editor

Florida State's baseball team smashed out a 9-8 win against a tightly fought hitters' battle in Wednesday's game with Georgia to get the 1961 season off to a flying start.

When the preliminaries were completed the Seminoles took the field on their way to a ten- hit victory over the Georgia Bulldogs who garnered 12 hits during the afternoon.

Frank Davis pitched his way to a new FSU career record by bettering the former strike out mark by one and running his school total to 146. Davis was relieved, however, in the seventh inning by Jack Ross after yielding five Bulldog runs in the sixth inning.

Ross, coming into the game with a two-run deficit facing him, got credit for the win and helped his own cause by batting in the tying run in the eighth inning. The losing pitcher, the fourth of the game for Georgia, was Don Woeltjen.

Outstanding hitting for both teams was the main feature of the day with both teams putting on a hitting spree. George Ferguson and Buddy Teagle both racked up two hits in four tries to pace the Seminoles. Ferguson punched in two runs, and Teagle knocked in one on a long double. A triple by Doug Walker was the longest hit for the tribe, and it gave him two runs batted in.

After a tight eight innings the winning run seemed a bit ironic when Kyle Spitzer, who was on first, took a steal in the bottom of the ninth. The Georgia catcher's throw went wild and Spitzer was able to tear all the way home to cap the game.

Yesterday veteran pitcher Jim Daniel was slated to face the Bulldogs in the second of the two-game series.

FSU Hosts Auburn

On Monday and Tuesday the Tribe has a three-game series against the Auburn Tigers at Seminole Field. The record against the Tigers currently stands at 11 wins for FSU and six for Auburn.

The first game starts at 3:30 p.m. Monday and a double-header begins at 1:30 p.m. on Tuesday.

Last year the Tigers beat Florida State three times out of five games, and an experienced squad returns to make up the bulk of the Auburn team.

Gymnastics

The Florida AAU Open Gymnastic Championship will take place in Tully Gym Saturday.

Competition starts at 10 a.m. for the novice competition (12 and under), at 1:30 p.m. for Juniors and 7:30 p.m. for Seniors.

A social will be held immediately following the Senior competition, sponsored by the Gymnastics Fraternity. The social will be open to all competitors, coaches, judges and their guests.

Newman House Paints Walks A Kelly Green

"It's a great day for the Irish" today—and for the Catholic Student Center's annual celebrations.

St. Patrick is commonly referred to as the "Apostle of Ireland" although his birthplace was probably in Britain. At 16 he was captured by Irish marauders and taken to Ireland where he spent his captivity as a herdsman.

After six years of slavery, he escaped to Gaul. Ordained deacon at Auxerre some 14 years later, he returned to Ireland and proceeded to the conversion of Ulster.

IRISH SYMBOL

His use of the shamrock as an illustration of the Trinity led to its being regarded as the national Irish symbol.

As a part of the celebration at the Center, Newman Club members Dick O'Brien and Bill Keogh painted green shamrocks down the sidewalk from Westcott to the Catholic Student Center last night.

The annual St. Patrick's Day party at the Student Center will be held at 8 p.m. tonight. Entertainment will be supplied by the Irish and semi-Irish students and refreshments will be "Kelly Green."

Everyone is invited and admission will be $.50. Dress will be informal and green.

Wagon Burned By 'Prankste

The Sigma Nu's won't be having any hayrides for awhile.

Wednesday night about 10, the Sigma Nu wagon parked on the Alpha Phi lot burned—and caused quite a bit of excitement.

According to Walt Stephens, the hay in the wagon was set on fire. He spoke of it as "just a prank!"

The wagon is used by the Sigma Nu's for parties, publicity, and decorations. It is also for use by other campus groups.

Stephens said that the Sigma Nu's had had the wagon quite awhile and that it was "pretty old."

The only damage done by the fire was the loss of the hay, the scorching of the wagon's lot and surrounding buildings mained unharmed.

Ferlita

like to see a closer relationship established between the women's vice president and women students, so that they will feel free to call upon her (women's veep) at any time and express their views concerning rules and social standards.

"It is my desire that women students be made to realize that the women's vice president is not just another elected officer with specific duties to fulfill," stated Miss Ferlita. "But one who, because of her participation in many phases of campus life has qualified herself to coordinate women's activities on campus, serve as advisor to the student body concerning co-educational problems, preside over women's senate, and represent the women of Florida State University in a favorable manner at all times," she concluded.

MEN'S VICE PRESIDENT

Duties of the Men's Vice President are to coordinate men's activities on campus and serve as advisor to the student body concerning co-educational problems.

He also presides over Men's Senate, sitting separately from Student Senate, and to preside over Student eSnate in the absence of the president pro tem. He will also serve as vice president of the Student Enterprises Corp., and vice chairman of the Board of Directors of the Corp.

• • •

Carl Kuttler, unopposed for the office of Men's Vice President, is a junior government and general management major with a 2.9 overall grade average.

Kuttler is a day student senator, president pro tem of Men's Senate, chairman of the Labor-Student Services and Education Committee, chairman of a special committee to investigate drinking at football games, chairman of the Pinellas County Student Lobby Committee, and a member of Lambda Chi Alpha social fraternity.

Kuttler

Kuttler transferred from St. Petersburg Junior College where he was freshman class president and student body president. He has worked in Washington, D. C., in the House of Representatives, Senate and White House for a summer in a government internship program sponsored by the Florida Citizenship Clearing House.

Kuttler said he felt that Men's Senate should be a relative inactive organization in relation to Women's Senate, because of the lack of rules for men students on campus.

Kuttler said that more emphasis should be placed on the quality of legislation passed by student senate, instead of quantity. Senate "should concern themselves with more academic things," Kuttler pointed out. "There is too much emphasis on extra - curricular; there should be more academics.

"The only way the university can become great is to put more stress on academics," he said.

SECRETARY OF SENATE

Duties of the secretary of senate are to keep minutes and senate records; the secretary is a non-voting member.

• • •

Kitty Miller, unopposed for the post of secretary of senate, is a sophomore physical education major with a 2.31 overall grade average.

Miss Miller has been secretary of the freshman class, secretary of the sophomore class, secretary and treasurer of the Physical Education Association, Sophomore Councilor, a member of the gymnastic honorary, Lobby Committee, Student-Senate Relations Committee, and activity chairman of her social sorority, Zeta Tau Alpha.

Miller

She was a member of the Military Ball Court last week, in the Gymkana Court and is currently a candidate for Greek Goddess.

Miss Miller stated that she had had a great deal of experience with secretarial work. "I can type 60 words per minute and have had two years of shorthand. I have acquired adequate knowledge of Senate procedures through participation in the Lobby Committee and Student Senate Relations Committee" she stated.

BOARD OF PUBLICATIONS

Purpose of the Board of Student Publications is to help maintain the best standards in higher education and professional journalism in student publications.

• • •

Joan Abbott is a junior English and government major with a 2.9 overall grade average.

Miss Abbott has worked as assistant news editor on the Flambeau for two years, has been Summer Flambeau news editor and has been appointed news editor for next year.

Abbott

She has worked two summers on the St. Petersburg Times as a news trainee, has written a weekly column for the Large Seatinal for a year, and is currently appointed to fill a vacant position of the Board of Publications.

Miss Abbott said she wanted to be on the Board because she "feels the Flambeau needs active representation. I am interested in inter - communications between publications, and the Board offers the position for bettering these relations." said Miss Abbott.

"The Board can definitely be a beacon light for publications. Publications should expand with the University, and the Board should provide dynamic leadership to publications in their growth," she concluded.

• • •

Ray Allen is a junior advertising major with a 2.5 overall grade average. He is presently assistant advertising manager for the Flambeau.

Allen is a member of Alpha Delta Sigma, advertising honorary fraternity for men, serving his second term as social chairman of his social fraternity, Kappa Sigma, and has worked a summer for an advertising agency in Miami.

Allen

"I have an earnest desire to do my part toward giving the students of FSU really good publications," Allen stated. He said there should be better understanding between advertising and publications. There is presently one advertising staff for all publications.

Allen expressed the need to make students more cognizant of publications and of the Board's efforts.

Bill McLemore is a junior ancient history major with a 3. overall grade average. He is presently editor of Smoke Signals.

McLemore has had six years experience with publications, has been editor of a special service newspaper in the Army.

McLemore

to the best interests of students at FSU."

• • •

Eva Skelton is a sophomore secretarial science and business major with a 2.3 overall grade average.

Skelton

She is a member of the Tally-Ho staff and assistant treasurer of her social sorority, Pi Beta Phi.

Barbara "Bobby" Syfrett is a junior English major with a 3.7

Syfrett

overall grade average. She has been editor of Pew Wow, is presently a member of the Board, and has had experience in newspaper, yearbook and literary publications.

Miss Syfrett is a member of Angel Flight, was in Sophomore Council, Alpha Lambda Delta, Sigma Tau Delta, Senate Social Standards Committee, Wesley Foundation Deputations Team and a member of Kappa Alpha Theta social sorority.

"My editorship of the Pew Wow has made me more capable of understanding the needs and concerns of the editors with whom the Board works directly. I thus offer this experience plus my familiarity with the workings of the Board as an ex officio member this year, my interest, and enthusiasm for consideration," she said.

Washington Wins Civilian Tournament

Marty Washington, smallbore rifle shooter, topped six past National Rifle Champions to take honors at the Sawgrass Rifle Championships in Miami last week.

The FSU student took the lead in the 50 meter match with a score of 400-31 out of 400 possible points. He slipped from second place by the end of the first day but recovered the next day to place second in the match and win the high civilian championship.

First place was won by First Lt. Presley W. Kendall, of the U. S. Army Advanced Marksmanship Unit, who also has been on the U. S. Pan American Team.

Washington scored 3148-209x out of 2200 to average 99.62 out of 100 for the prone matches. Kendal shot 3192 out of 3200.

The matches drew over 150 competitors from all over the U. S., including members of the U. S. Air Force International Team and the U. S. Army International Team.

Washington attributed his success to the help and coaching of Lt. Kendall, the only one who defeated him.

In the position matches, Washington again placed second to win the civilian championship while Kendall won the overall and high military. Washington score for the four positions (prone, sitting, kneeling and off-hand) was 3512 out of 3600.

The FSU student spends about 10 hours every week in practice dry firing or actual firing. He is also a member of the Tallahassee Rifle and Pistol Club.

Dowling Offers Support Of College Theater Circuit

Dowling said "most of the good writers are from the South and the South hasn't done a thing for them," although the region cannot be blamed for it.

The plan of presenting plays in the university theater would help give southern writers a start.

Dowling thinks the plan will be copied by midwestern and eastern schools if it succeeds well in Florida.

To follow-up the offer, Dr. Minnick said brochures will probably be prepared on the Assignment in Judea experiment to use in securing financial backing for the circuit.

Dowling was the first president of USO and established the Star Spangled circuit of theaters, the largest circuit in the world, in 1941.

Reviews 'J.B.'

Always A 'Job' Says Lawton At Coffee Hour

By TONI DICARLO
Flambeau Staff Writer

"There is always a Job, all through history," said Dr. Robert O. Lawton, associate dean of Arts and Sciences at the English Coffee Hour Friday.

It is around this theme that Archibald MacLeish won the Pulitzer Prize winning play, J.B., he continued.

J.B. is a modern adaptation of the Old Testament Book of Job, to which the main character is a twentieth century banker and industrialist.

Set in the modern era, when an entire race was committed to the gas chamber and a hydrogen bomb was dropped on a sleeping city," the play raises the age old question of why there is so much injustice in the world.

As Mr. Nickles (played by John Carradine), one of the characters in the play, says, "Never could there have been so many who suffered more for less!"

MacLeish, according to Dr. Lawton, follows the original Job closely but "puts the stress on emphasis" in stressing the prologue and the action, and changes the ending.

STAGING BRILLIANT

The play opens in one corner of an empty circus tent with a single light bulb hanging above a ladder on a platform. "The staging," said Dr. Lawton, "was a brilliant job."

Mr. Zuss (Fredrick Worlock) and Nickles, two broken circus actors who are reduced to selling popcorn and balloons, see the platform and decide to act out the story of Job. Mr. Zuss plays part of God, Nickles portrays the Devil, and they decide that "there is always a Job."

J.B. appears at first as a "rather complacent being," Dr. Lawton related, but he develops rapidly as the many troubles befall him.

In the Bible, Job's loss of his children is merely stated, but in the play, "these scenes are brutally depicted," said Lawton.

The audience sees two drunken soldiers tell J.B. and his wife Sarah that their eldest son was needlessly killed in a training exercise after the war's end.

The revelation that the youngest daughter was raped and killed by a teenage dope fiend of moronic intelligence is another of the "brutal" scenes portrayed, the speaker said.

then HE calmed ME . . . forgave me for the world . . . . Is God to be forgiven?" Because of this and the fact that Satan still thinks his faith can be broked, J.B.'s health is taken away and he is afflicted with a skin disease.

Sarah leaves her husband with the intention of committing suicide but changes her mind and returns to J.B. who has meanwhile been cured.

Unlike Job, in J.B. it is the woman who has the last word. "Blow on the coal of the heart, the candles in the churches are out . . . the wit won't burn and the wet soul smolders." . . . Blow, on the coal of the heart and we'll know, we'll know."

Tickets are still available for tonight's performance of Archibald MacLeish's Pulitzer-prize play J. B.

Student tickets are available with activity book coupon no. eight; others are $3.50.

The play will be at 8.15 p.m. in Westcott Auditorium.

HOLDS FAITH

J.B. holds to his faith, but Sarah becomes bitter and cynical. He says, "Even desperate we can't despair . . . God is there too, in the desperation," but she answers, "Curse God and die . . . if God is just, our slaughtered children stand with sin."

After this series of catastrophes, God appears to J.B. in the whirlwind and the speeches are taken verbatim from Job, "But watch the noting," said Lawton. There is an "intentional ambiguity" in the presentation of the speeches.

Zuss (God), in discussing the conversation with Nickles (Satan) says, "J.B. just sat there . . .

Charles Laughton To Appear April 5

Stage, television and lecture platform star Charles Laughton will appear in Westcott Auditorium in a Student Artist Series program at 8.15 p.m. April 5.

Tickets for the performance go on sale the latter part of this week and will cost students with activity coupons $1.75 and the general public, $2.50.

Laughton will present a session of readings, demonstrating his many poses, his ironic face and hand movements, his bitter, angry, docile, angelic, and sincere dramatic emotion, the combination of which has made him "one of the foremost actors of our time," according to contemporary critics.

"Charles Laughton's performances as Captain Bligh in Mutiny on the Bounty fixes him in my mind as by far the best of living actors," said Mark Van Doren.

Alfred Hitchcock evaluated Laughton's acting. "Directors can't direct a Laughton picture, the best they can hope for is a chance to referee."

MASK FACE

"Mr. Laughton's face is one of the most expressive masks that I have even seen in the theatre. His hands and feet and his whole body are ever willing and expressive instruments of the things he has to say . . . He can be crose with peppery violence, carnal with a grossness that is repellent, merry with the expansiveness of Falstaff, cruel with a hideousness that is sickening and afraid with a whimpering terror that is almost unendurable," stated John Mason Brown.

For a dozen years, Laughton has been touring the nation, leaving behind him 60-100 miles of college auditorium, lecture platforms, and town hall.

Born in Scarborough, England, in 1899, Laughton early enjoyed performing for adults or in school plays, but was trained to take over the family business—managing hotels.

World War I interrupted his plans, and upon returning from the war, he gave up his share in the family business and decided to act.

While attending the Boys' Academy of Dramatic Art, he began to play professional engagements, for which he received immediate acclaim in London When in 1929 he co-starred with Elsa Lanchester, who later became his wife, the two were very successful and appeared soon afterward in New York.

Thus was a long film career begun. Spartacus is Laughton's most recent picture.

Although Laughton's performance as Henry VIII won for him an academy award, he claims as his favorite the performances of the world's most perfect manservant in "Ruggles of Red Gap."

In the picture he recited Lincoln's Gettysburg Address which earned the germ of his later success as a reader. His current tour stems from that event.

STUDENT BODY PRESIDENT

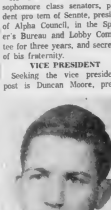
Bobby Byrd, after three successful annual campaigns for ...dent government posts, is unopposed for the president's job. ...Write-in contention has been ...ttered.

Byrd

With the completion of this campaign, Byrd has said he doesn't want to run politician any more. Now he has a job to do, and "I need people's support; it's the job bigger than me!"

Byrd's stated intention is to "pull people out of the dorms" to help him with his new undertaking. In his past three years in student politics, Byrd has felt that some people "haven't done the work" that could have been done.

Byrd's expressed change will be to "get people who can do the job. I need people who can deal with hard cold facts and get the job done. I want thinkers, and I want their ideas," he stated.



The presidential candidate's campaign platform offers planks such as 1. staggered lunch hours for university offices and services 2. an exchange program with a foreign university 3. a tutoring service open to all students 4. a more reasonable student textbook purchasing program 5. a council of dormitory presidents, inter-fraternity council members, and nonhellenic members to advise the student body president 6. a means of handling special problems of married students and graduate students (Byrd said this entails trying to get special rates on activity books for student wives to some artist series, and special library rights for student wives).

Byrd is presently vice president of the student body, a junior government major with a 2.3 overall grade average, and a member of Kappa Alpha social fraternity.

He has been freshman and sophomore class senators, president pro tem of Senate, president of Alpha Council, in the Speaker's Bureau and Lobby Committee for three years, and secretary of his fraternity.

VICE PRESIDENT

Seeking the vice presidential post is Duncan Moore, present

Moore

Secretary of Welfare. Moore has the Student Party nomination.

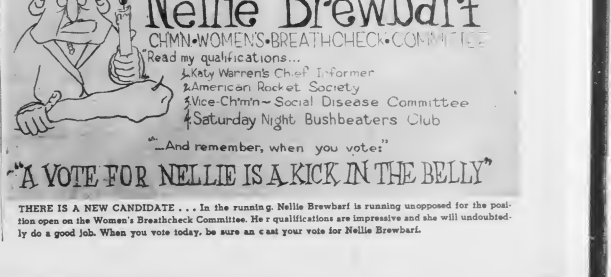
"I feel that there are no existing problems," said Moore of student government, "However, I would like to see much more student interest and concern in Senate and the action which Senate takes.

"I am running," Moore went on, "because I know that I am the better qualified and more able candidate. I enjoy student government work and activities and would like to continue working in student government," he said.

"In order to accommodate the present growth and program that the University is now experiencing, we must have a student government that will grow and progress, also," Moore concluded.

Moore is a sophomore business and English major with a 2.5 overall grade average. He has been in Alpha Council, is a member of Pershing Rifles military bonorary. has been on 11 different student government committees and chairman of five, and is a member of Phi Delta Theta social fraternity.

van Assenderp



Ken van Assenderp is presently under-secretary of public relations and chairman of the Lobby Committee.

"I seek the privilege to serve in this office because I believe that my closeness to FSU and my past experience qualify me for the task of developing FSU's potential into reality," stated van Assenderp.

"It is time to become cognisant to our needs and to our ability and duty to satisfy them," van Assenderp went on. "It is time to prove to ourselves, to our administration, to other universities, to the state, and its government that FSU is ready, able, willing, and destined for unparalleled service," he stated.

"I am firmly convinced that my public relations work has afforded me the best possible means of striving toward this end, and of developing the potential of the vice presidency," van Assenderp concluded.

Van Assenderp is a sophomore international affairs major with a 2.6 overall grade average. He has been a member of Alpha Council, is librarian of the University Singers, and an Army ROTC Squad Leader.

THERE IS A NEW CANDIDATE . . . In the running, Nellie Brewbarf is running unopposed for the position open on the Women's Breathcheck Committee. Her qualifications are impressive and she will undoubtedly do a good job. When you vote today, be sure an cast your vote for Nellie Brewbarf.

It's Up To The Electorate

Just to keep up old traditions, FSU's junior politicians have done it again. As usual, the major student government positions will remain unopposed. Despite the ability of the candidates who seek office, the fact that there is no opposition speaks poorly for the student body. It is impossible to believe that out of a student population of over 9,000, there is not more than one person eligible for the position of president.

There were those who had every good intention of seeking the position, but when faced with an obstacle, turned tail and quit. There are too many students on this campus who do not like to enter a race that they might lose. There are too many self-centered political personalities who lack personal confidence in those same abilities that they claim to have and want others to back. There are too many students who are just words and no deeds.

IN OTHER MAJOR contests, there are two actual races—that for Student body vice president and that for women's vice-president. The major contest of the day's election will be for the positions available on the Student Board of Publications. Here the student body is presented with a choice between extremely capable candidates and those who would like the position merely to influence and somewhat control the printed material in student publications.

Campaign promises always come into the picture at this time. Politicians begin to look into student government and campus life and find faults which only their "talents" can correct. Where were these same students and these same faults all during the year? Unfortunately, for the good of the student body, they have either ignored the faults or have saved them to form the basis for some candidate's far-sighted, loyal interest in his university.

THERE IS AN UNUSUAL flurry of activity on the cabinet and in the student senate. This indicates that either both of these groups are just beginning to learn their jobs or that the actions now being taken and publicized are merely political maneuvers and not prompted from a sincere desire to fulfill presently held position. Committee reports are making their way into the news, bills are being pushed just a little harder, and new investigations are beginning—at this late date.

The campus popularity sheet, the Student Party slate, has listed its nominations for these posts. Even on this "no-party" campus, the lack of a student party nomination can change the stoutest heart and influence the most "qualified" candidates to drop out of the contest. Some of these nominees have extremely good qualifications but there are others who are on the list merely because somebody owed them a favor.

A POLITICAL FAVOR IS no FSU innovation, but it becomes an FSU plague when the "favored" are allowed to run completely unopposed—especially when they are usually those who haven't the ability to see their responsibilities for the aura of self-importance with which they have surrounded themselves.

There is one element of the elections that seems to have been forgotten, and that is the ability of the electorate. Unfortunately, FSU does not usually have any good percentage of students turning out to vote, and a majority of those who do don't seem to be prompted by an interest in student government. As a matter of fact, some of the Greeks vote only to appease their hunger pains, for an ID card without a hole punched in the right place means no breakfast.

The strength of the future student government lies in the position of the student body. If this student population can match some brain exercise with the numbers on the IBM ballot, it can build a dynamic student government. If this is impossible, then there is only one group to blame—the electorate.

Coma Interviews Nellie

By RICK SHENKEL
and LESLIE POWELL

Coma bustled into Magnolia, notebook and pencil at the ready. She walked up six flights of stairs, climbed a tasteful arrangement of empty orange crates and stood, in disheveled poise before the penthouse apartment of one Nellie Brewbarf, leading candidate for Chairman of the Women's Breathcheek Committee.

Within minutes, after much knocking and bellowing back and forth, Coma and Miss Brewbarf were exchanging credentials, and Nellie introduced Coma to famed evangelist, Toora Loora Goldfarb, one time front-running candidate for Chairman of the Social Diseases Committee.

"I'M HERE ON behalf of the Flambeau," Coma said. "I have been assigned to do an expose . . . er, ah, pardon. I mean an interview of outstanding candidates seeking outlandish posts."

"Well, Toots, You're welcome to a story. I'll spin you one now, or later. You want a beer? How's about you Toora?"

Over a chilled brunch, Coma, Brewbarf and Goldfarb got down to particulars. "Miss Brewbarf, I have read your qualifications, and I think you are a shoo-in, considering nobody else is running. As a member of the American Rocket Society, I think you are Everyman's candidate. Now, if you had a reputation as a scholar of the humanities, you'd be doomed to early retirement. But I'm still not quite sure exactly why you have chosen to run for this particular office."

"WHY THANK YOU', Coma. That's what Toora was telling me earlier, that my earthiness is the best qualification I could possibly have. Why, as a prominent member of the Saturday Night Bunkheaters Club, I am more familiar with the sparkling lots on this campus than anybody else. I am terribly familiar with you, and especially in the Social Disease area. My father, God Bless his soul, used to look at me and say 'Nellie, you're my only vice; the one mistake I ever made. He was a lovely man, my father, only I don't remember him too well since he ran away when I was three.

"About the office. I think that with my qualifications, prodigious size and what all this office is not only desirable but necessary to the fulfillment of my particular talents. I can say the same about the necessity of the Social Disease Committee that Toora ran for last year. We are essential."

"Coma, don't you believe that 'informer' smear that's going around on Nellie," Toora Loora chimed in. "She never informed on anybody all last week."

"THAT'S RIGHT," Nellie said, "I sure didn't. I was flat of my back in the infirmary. She yanked out a switchblade of mezzanine proportions and began to clean her nails. Noting Coma's quizzical look, Nellie explained her compact little arsenal.

"I think every girl should be able to protect herself," Nellie said primly, picking at the gargantuan mole on the end of her nose. "Why, gracious, there might be saber-toothed freshmen lurking under every flagstone," she added, punctuating her sentence with business-like jabs of the blade in Coma's direction. "Honey," she said to Coma, "You nervous? Come on down off that high globe and let's get this interview off the ground."

Mopping her brow with the limp pages of her notebook, Coma muttered another exclamation or two. "Miss Brewbarf, is this your first try at a student office?" "Nope," Nellie said. "I been running steadily since 1932, but something always goes wrong. Once I had stuffed a special ballot box with a winning margin, but tripped and broke my leg on the way to get them counted.

"I RECALL another time when the story came out that I collected belly buttons. I did once, but I was young and didn't know that was cruel. That's when I was the neighborhood bully in Coonbottom and everybody else was collecting bottle caps and butterflies. I always liked being different."

Coma was pale green. "I think I have enough now to write a feature for the next issue."

"But my slogans," Nellie said, "Aren't you interested in my campaign slogans?"

"Yeh," Toora lilted, "Why don't you do something with Nellie's slogans. 'Students Thrike Back!' and 'A vote for Nellie Is a Kick in the Belly.'"

"I was thinking of something to do with them," Coma said. "I just don't know how to begin."

"We'll See How Tough The New Cop Is"

From Inside-Out

Incorporation Is A Reality

By MYGNON CHAMPION

It's official now.

Papers chartering the incorporation of Student Enterprises were notorized and filed with the Secretary of State in the Capitol last week. This occasion marked a truly historic moment for Student Government and the Student Body of F.S.U.

As President Carl Butler expressed it, "This is the most significant accomplishment of the year, probably the most important achievement of several years. Yet it has received much less public attention than many other less significant things."

The issuing of the corporation's charter marked the end of much work and a great deal of study. More important, however, it heralded the beginning of much more work and a new era in Student Government programs.

THE PURPOSE OF incorporation is to enable Student Government (through Student Enterprises) to borrow funds for various programs to benefit the students. The first proposal is construction of a new swimming pool, however the prices is far from limited to potential of Student Enterprises.

In a sense, Student Enterprises can be regarded as a creature of Student Government. One of the problems which faced the Student Senate committee that studied the possibility of incorporation was whether to incorporate the entire Student Government or to incorporate only a particular section of it.

IT WAS FINALLY decided that only Student Enterprises should be incorporated. This decision was based upon technical legal reasons, but the basic purpose was to limit the liability of the incorporation.

The idea of incorporation was born last fall at the annual Student Government Retreat during a discussion between President Butler and this writer. Shortly thereafter, a Senate committee was established to study the idea and the executive branch began working.

MANY LONG HOURS of conferences with attorneys, businessmen, and the administration resulted in a bill presented to Senate in February providing for incorporation. The bill passed unanimously. Mr. John Dillinger, attorney for the business school, prepared the papers. Finally, members of the Board of the Board of Directors were appointed to carry out the official filing for incorporation.

Under the terms of the charter, the eight-member Board consists of the Student Body President, the Men's Vice President (Marion Clark), three members of Student Senate appointed by the President of Senate, and three other members appointed by the Student Body President.

A Misplaced Letter

Editor's Note: Miss Ferlita's letter appears in this issue only because of a misunderstanding and the resulting misplacement of her original letter.

DEAR FELLOW STUDENTS:

Today you must elect the candidate who will represent Florida State as your Women's Vice President. It is most important that you select someone who will set a good example for the women of our university at all times.

My membership on the Public Relations Committee has given me invaluable experience in working with adults as well as students. Serving as Class Senator and as a member of ten major Student Government committees has given me the necessary experience to preside effectively over Women's Senate.

I AM AWARE of the needs of women of this campus and have shown an interest in helping to secure improved laundry services and food machines that I am willing to work to fulfill these needs. More important, however, is that our women have someone to whom they may voice their complaints about rules and social standards. After all, the Women's Vice President should be a liason between the students and the administration and should strive to solve any problems or explain to our students why a situation must remain unchanged. As you can see, it is my desire to establish a closer relationship between our women students and their Women's Vice President.

I have expressed my interest to activities outside the Student Government hunt through my active participation in the Rally Committee, Pow Wow Committee, and a religious organization. My overall scholastic average is 3.

I hope you will consider my qualifications as well as my sincere desire to serve you when you vote today.

Sincerely,
JEANIE FERLITA

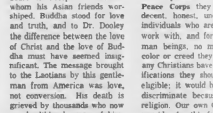
Can Peace Corps Be Christian?

By BILL TROTTS

Fifteen thousand people crowded the Miami Beach Convention Hall to attend Billy Graham's Greater Miami Crusade; they heard him issue a call for all members of the new Peace Corps to be dedicated to Christianity. According to the Christian Science Monitor, Billy said, "Unless these young people are deeply dedicated to Christianity the Communists will make mincemeat of them. They could possibly do more harm than good." This statement comes from a man who has crusaded for Christian conversion all over the world. Thousands of people flock to watch him when he performs. Many in his audience hold him in awe.

ANOTHER AMERICAN of equal vigor and ambition has also recorded some views on the Christian conversion program in other nations. The late Dr. Tom Dooley, who was awarded the highest Laotian decoration (the Order of a Million Elephants) for his efforts in establishing seven hospitals in four nations and bringing medical care to many Laotians, differs with Billy Graham on the value of Christianism in the nations he has served. Dr. Dooley, by way of a T.V. program filmed before his death in January, indicated that Christianism has been equated with colonialism by the people he knows.



According to his experiences, we would be playing right into the Communist designs if we were to send representatives into other nations with the idea of changing their religions. Dr. Dooley dedicated his short dynamic life to the improvement of health standards of thousands of Asian people. He was an ex-Catholic, but he found room in his heart to accept the Buddha whom his Asian friends worshiped. Buddha stood for love and truth, and to Dr. Dooley the difference between the love of Christ and the love of Buddha must have seemed insignificant. The message brought to the Laotians by this gallant man from America was love, not conversion. His death is grieved by thousands who now are healthier because of him, but his life stands as a monument erected in the name of decency and devotion to [illegible].

THE RELIGION of the Laotians is Buddaism, founded after Gatauma Buddha preached in India 500 years before the time of Christ. Buddha brought the message of peace and love to his people, and this concept of love has carried through 2500 years of history. Even today the Laotians can not carry on an effective civil war because they will not seriously attempt to kill their fellow Laotians.

The caste system was originated for the Buddhists because he taught that a man is judged by his truth and righteousness, not by his position or family. A Buddhist would not try to convert a Christian for him to do so would be the arrogant violation of his own religion which teaches respect of all things, even another man's beliefs.

IN OUR YOUTHFUL way we might be moved by Billy Graham to seek out the non-Christians of the world and offer them the chance to be saved. But are we prepared to tell them what it is that they are being saved from? "If we have only a shallow faith why are we prepared to destroy a nation of 200 million people, and why are we able to maintain relations with another nation of one million people?", they might ask.

Maybe the organization of the Peace Corps who have more than a missionary zeal, who need members who possess the consideration and understanding which the people of the world have shown the likes of Albert Schweitzer and Dr. Tom Adams of America. Certainly people who are willing to help as well as "teach." for the Asiatic culture has much to teach the arrogantly dynamic Caucasian. When we select representatives for the Peace Corps we should select decent, honest, understanding individuals who are willing to work with, and for, other human beings, no matter what color or creed they possess for any Christians have these qualifications they should also be eligible; it would be unfair to discriminate because of their religion. Our own Constitution provides for this fair arrangement which we call freedom.

Students Display Ignorance

TO THE EDITOR:

Many students have been referring to The Legend as "nothing but a hamburger wash." Little are they aware that they are actually displaying their own ignorance. They forget that their words are the expression of their thoughts and intelligence (?) except for the hopeless few.

Many probably spoke with an unconscious sense of jealousy of envy as either find self-esteem in belittling others or their abilities. Also, many students, many of whom had not even opened the magazine if I may call it such, upon hearing others degrading the publication, gladly joined the "band wagon," not thinking for themselves or reaching their own conclusions, but just conforming to the general "breeze" of many unthought-through expressions of words and sounds.

I HEARD ONE freshman, having admitted he had not read The Legend, say that he was not interested in the writings of a "bunch of college amateurs." Do we consider Edgar Allan Poe an amateur? Yet, he won the Gold Medal which I consider a great power of literature—while he was in college. At one time he was an amateur, and his writings were worth reading.

President Blackwell said in the foreword to The Legend which a publication is important in providing an opportunity for the work of young writers and artists to find their way into print. This in itself is stimulating to creative activity. It is significant, for it is an enhancement to the intellectual climate of the campus." I am inclined to believe that a few students and intellectuals on campus.

It is good to have criticism good or bad, but it should be based on a little thinking and reasoning.

ALLAN DERMOTT

Writers Merit Commendation

TO THE EDITOR:

I would like to commend the people who have made written contributions to your sister publication, The Legend '61. Though such writers, The Legend would not be as highly rich in written character as it is.

It takes time and thought to be able to write a good poem or story of literary interest. Those students who have made the effort and have given their contributions deserve congratulations. They represent the best of the university who took the interest in writing.

DESPITE THE splendid work of the writers, many students have been disappointed in the publication. The legend, better known to many as literary anthology, is not a Smoke Signals nor an Orange Peel. I feel that many students expect it to be another Orange Peel. When there were no pictures or jokes, the flavor of enjoyment left the mouth of many.

The Legend does not depend on pictures. It is a magazine of words, not pictures. It should be thought of as such.

This year there was a change in the name of the periodical from Literary Anthology to Legend. The change was not to denounce the former name of the publication, but, rather to give "emphasis to the magazine in keeping with the Florida State University's tribal mascot, the Seminole Indian."

Though the name has changed, the publication will remain a literary anthology and should be treated as such.

An Olympic Plan

The Rev. Bob Richards, a former Olympic champion pole vaulter, has outlined a comprehensive six point plan for regaining American superiority in the world's showplace of athletic ability.

Richards, in a by-lined article for Sports Magazine—the nation's sports monthly by a dozen lengths or so, says that something must be done to regain America's superiority in the Olympic Games. The earth should know.

The pole-vaulting parson has been taking in these spectacles not being a competitor in the contests himself and in most cases dealt closely with American athletes on the Olympic team.

During his long association with the games, Richards has opposed the Soviet Union move into the champion's spot in athletic competition, replacing the United States as the best for the unofficial Olympic team title. He has watched Soviet sports rise from 22 gold medals to 44 and the Americans drop from 40 to 34. And he has become alarmed about the unmistakable signs of the Olympic tide.

"To some purists," says Richards, "the team score and the emphasis for national domination remained meaningless. But to athletes and most people everywhere, victory at Rome signified tremendous propaganda weapon. Russia came away in control of weapons.

"I see high-ranking Soviet Olympic official said, "We are winning because we are willing to sacrifice everything for our country. We compete for the glory of the Soviet Union. You Americans compete only for yourselves. In the end, we will win everything."

"True, the Russian athletes compete for the glory of their country but it is the glory that their country will heap upon them. We compete for the here and now. They will achieve with Olympic glory. They compete for themselves even more than the American, for all the Communist propaganda and words of equality can not change the fact that the Soviets are every bit the status seekers they condemn Americans of being.

A Winner Or Loser Gets Little

"In contrast, neither a winner nor a loser in the United States gets much of anything. Americans figure that their fellow Americans will give up the luxuries they enjoy in order to receive an appearance on the Ed Sullivan Show and the satisfaction of competition.

"They refuse to allow their athletic representatives to receive more than the barest expense money and will not allow them to have any benefits from the sacrifice they are required to make. The athlete like weight lifter Paul Anderson would be making a handsome salary in the USSR but in the good ole USA he is given out of amateur competition and forced to scratch out a living in lower himself to professional wrestling to put bread on his table. Anderson is not the only example. Many other Olympic champions have been forced out due to economic considerations.

"For long-range success, we need a federal organization that will take immediate action, starting on the grass root community level to revamp physical fitness programs. For the upcoming Olympics in Rome we must get behind Kenneth "Tug" Wilson, president of the U. S. Olympic committee, and start recruiting young men with the ideas to get a high-power athletic program underway.

"A committee appointed by President Kennedy to take positive action in meeting the challenge of the Soviet Union for athletic supremacy. 2. A single standard of governing amateur athletics the world over. 3. Public recognition for the American amateur athlete and an easing of his severe financial burden. 4. An immediate increase in the grass roots community program to develop track and other Olympic sports starting at the grade-school level and leading to a Junior Olympics. 5. A system of summer camps, starting this year, in which Olympic hopefuls would instruct the outstanding American schoolboys in the various Olympic sports. 6. An annual collection of $10,000,000 to $15,000,000 for the summer camps, equipment and for increased interest for the summer camps, equipment and for increased interest in competition at all levels in all olympic sports.

"It is unfortunate that the Olympic Games, designed to promote peace and goodwill among nations, must be prefaced with nationalism to a degree that success in them is of dire national concern. This is part of the other-directed attitude that has made us "keeping-up-with-the Russians" more important than "keeping-up-with-the-Joneses" in today's society.

"American athletes have got to have the same advantages if we are to achieve the same standards of excellence that is required of their Russian counterpart.

Genders, Hiles Thompson Go

Seminole Tank Trio Travels To Seattle

By MARK HILLIS

Flambeau Sports Writer

All-American Buck Hiles and Curt Genders along with Paul Thompson will compete in the National Collegiate Athletic Association Championships March 23 through the 25th in Seattle, Washington.

Coach Bun Stultz and his three highly-touted swimmers will be seeking national recognition in the top swimming meet of the year. Last year at the NCAA meet in Dallas Curt Genders and Bob Weber were the only two Seminoles to place in the championship matches.

Florida State's strong swimming aggregation copped the Florida Intercollegiate Swimming Championship this past weekend while rolling up 1314 points at Gainesville.

Providing competition for the Seminoles were the University of Miami and the University of Florida. The Southeastern Conference champion Gators placed second with 99½ points. Right behind were the Hurricanes with 76.

FSU in defending its title saw four of its members break school records. Paul Thompson established two new marks. Buck Hiles and Glen Mitchell also broke previously existing records.

Buck Hiles

Thompson swam the 200 yard freestyle in 1:53.3 and the 400 yard freestyle in 4.14.7. These times were set in the preliminaries.

Mitchell set the record breaking pace in the 100 yard backstroke and won the event in 1:05.5, regulating a new school record.

Hiles was the only other Seminole to have a part in the rewriting of the record books. Hiles' time of 56.4 in the 100 yard butterfly event erased previous school and pool records. In two other matches Thursday and Friday, the first match the Seminoles swam this afternoon at 2:30. In case of rain the matches will be held in Tully Gym as they were for yesterday's Tech match.

Florida State Meets Auburn After Stopping Georgia Twice

Florida State's baseball team confronts the Auburn Tigers today in a double header at Seminole Field after sweeping its first series of the season against the Georgia Bulldogs, 9-8 and 11-3, for a 2-0 record.

Hitting power was the key to the FSU wins with a total of 12 hits being collected in the first game and 16 smashes being garnered in the second contest. Top tribe batters include Neil Martin, who has hit four for eight, and Roger Zimmerman, who is batting a .500 clip with three for six. Other leading hitters are Buddy Teagle, George Ferguson, Bob Smith, Doug Walker, and Jimmy White.

Other starters may be Jack Dull, Kyle Spitzer, and Gary Elliott.

Winning pitchers for Florida State now include Jack Ross and Jim Daniels who went the route in the second game. After jumping off to an early lead in the second game, the tribe was sent into trouble as it coasted to its 1-3 victory. This was the fourth time in the last five games that the Seminoles have defeated Georgia, and the Bulldogs will be out for revenge when they run into FSU again at Athens, Georgia next month.

Yesterday the Seminoles opened their series with the Tigers on a rain-soaked field, and the twin bill slated to start at 12:30 p.m. today will conclude the series. The two talent-laden teams have played a total of 18 games with the tribe taking 11 of the contests.

The experienced Auburn squad faced Frank Davis yesterday, and probable Seminole starter today will be Jim Daniel and Ray McShane.

Last year Florida State met Auburn five times and were only able to capture two wins. Leading the Tigers this year are several senior lettermen, to fill up the infield positions. Re-'vrs are returning to second b first base, shortstop, and catcher.

Netters Beat Georgia Twice

Net Tribe Hosts Two Today

The Seminoles play Southern Auburn this morning at 9:30 and the Seminoles will meet the University of Georgia and the Seminoles.

Today the golf team is meeting Georgia Tech and Vanderbilt. Tomorrow the Seminoles will meet the University of Georgia and Vanderbilt. The roughest team that they will play in this meet is Georgia, as they were above the Seminole golfers at Ocala this weekend.

This weekend the Florida State golf team came in fourth in a field of eight at the Florida Intercollegiate Golf Tournament. The three teams above the Seminoles were: first, Houston; second, Florida; third, Georgia.

The only two players to finish in the top ten individual players were Frank Malara and Downing Gray. Malara finished seventh and Gray ninth.

So far this year the team record is 1-1. The win was against Rollins College and the loss was to the University of Florida. "We hope to improve this record greatly," said Coach Bill Odehead.

Rebel Bellamy, the number one man, trimmed Griffin (6-2) (3-6) (6-3), and on Friday he took Griffin (6-1) (7-6) (4), Ed Fasola defeated Griffin (9-7) (6-2) and Manderson (6-3) (6-2).

Gordy Smith was defeated by Bryan (6-4) (6-2), but came back to beat Henson (6-0) (6-3). Paul Scarpa defeated Henson (6-0) (6-3) and Bryan (6-3) (6-1).

Buddy McClain handled Benedict (6-3) (6-4) and Hobbs (6-4), Jamesion lost (6-2) (6-2 to Hobbs but trimmed Benedict (7-5) (6-4) (6-4).

Thursday in the doubles match the team of Bellamy and Smith defeated Manderson and Henson (6-4) (4-6) (6-1), Fasula and Scrapa trimmed Bryan and Hobbs (6-3) (9-7). McClain and Jamesion took Benedict and Cowart (6-4) (3-6) (6-3). Friday in the doubles Bellamy and Smith beat Bryan and Hobbs (6-3) (6-4). Fasula and Scrapa lost to Manderson and Henson (6-3) (6-4). McClain and Jamesion again went to three sets but took Griffin and Cowart (7-5) (4-6) (6-4).

In the freshman competition the Seminole frosh won only one match against the Bulldogs when Bill Saunders trimmed Newton (1-4) (6-3) (6-4).

Assistant Coach Danny Holcomb says of his boys: "They played much better than I expected, especially the second day."

FSU Gymnasts Grab AAU Title

Hatano Bests Cicio, Beavers To Garner All-Around Event

By SAM McCALL

Flambeau Sports Writer

Florida State's Gymkana team regained the Florida AAU championship Saturday night beating entries from Georgia Tech, Navy, Georgia Southern and Miami.

Yashiro Hatano, graduate student from Japan, paced the Gymkana squad by taking first in the all-around competition, beating former national champion Chick Cicio and regional champion Bill Beavers. Ellanor Daniells took first in the Senior Women's all-around competition.

The Florida AAU, sponsored by Gymkana and the Gymnastics honorary, featured the novice and under, Junior and Senior divisions. The novice division was won by the Tallahassee Tumbling Tots coached by Bob May and Bill Beavers.

The lots took first and second in trampoline and all the honors in tumbling.

In the Junior division, Tri-G of Miami, coached by Chick Cicio, swept the men's individual events to take the team championship.

In the Senior division. Florida State Gymkana was never seriously threatened as they placed high in every event.

Jerome Edwards ended his career in rope climbing with his best performance of 4.3 seconds to take a second place against a 4.2 from Vickery of Georgia Tech.

Chick Cicio took first in free exercise, followed by Rick Miller and Bill Beavers in second and third respectively in competition. Free exercise Ellanor Daniells placed second.

Cicio took another first on the parallel bars, followed by Hatano and Beavers.

Ellanor Daniells copped first place in the uneven parallels as she soundly defeated highly-touted Nancy Stevens.

FSU Gymkana took all three places in the balance beam competition with Daniells again placing first and Frances Gregory and Sharon Harris, second and third respectively.

Bill Beavers in a fantastic performance on the side-horse took first place, followed by his teammate Hatano, and Chick Cicio.

Frances Gregory, Junior AAU vaulting champion, placed second and Ellanor Daniells third in women's vaulting

All around champion Hatano took first place honors in the still-rings event followed by Rick Miller and Chick Cicio.

In what proved to be the tightest event of the meet, the long-horse, Hatano barely out did teammate Rick Miller and Pete Saponaro of Miami.

Jack Ryder, nationally-ranked gymnast and title-holder, brought the meet to a climax as he executed his nearly perfect tumbling routine taking first place. Sophomore Joe Greene placed second.

Dan Morris of Georgia Tech beat out the Gymkana competitors Gary Kidwell and Jerome Edwards, who tied for second place in the flying rings competition.

Kitty Grubbs and Jane Steele took the honors in women's trampoline.

The surprise of the evening was in the last event, men's trampoline, as a fourth grade student on the Miami squad took a first, followed by Gene Merriman of Navy and Joe Greene of Gymkana. Jack Ryder, who was favored to win, placed fifth.

The Gymkana squad's next meet is with Georgia Southern, March 25, in Statesboro. The Gymkana Troupe will present their roadshow following the meet.

Thinclads Face Alabama, Shine In Optimist Relays

The thinclads of Florida State University host the University of Alabama at 2:30 p.m. March 23 in Tallahassee in their second dual meet of the season.

The Seminoles recent victory over the hapless Miami Hurricanes contributed greatly to the morale of the team and Coach Mike Long feels that his cinder-men will come out on top Thursday.

The meet promises to be a thrilling one. Alabama had an early season victory at the Gulfsetim Relays in Montgomery, Alabama, and they placed second at the Memphis Javcees Invitational in Memphis, Tennessee.

Alabama's strength should be evident in the sprints, the mile and 2 mile runs, and in the field events. The Seminoles' depth in all events makes them the favorite in this first home meet of the season.

The meet will open with the field events and the first running event is scheduled for 3 p.m. The meet will be held at Florida High track.

Probable entry list:

Shot put—Don Osterzgard, Jeff Clark, and Barry Topper.

Discus—Clark, Osterzgard, and Tim Edney.

Javelin—Jim Higgins, Edney, and Franklin Ford.

Mile run—Don Roberts.

440-yard dash — Quentin Till, Tom Houston, and Terry Long.

100-yard dash—Craig Johnson, Mike Hamilton, and Keith Crawford.

High hurdles—Dave Ellis, Bill Welch, and Ford.

880-yard run—Bill Davis, Jack Brocksmith, and Brent Haley.

220-yard run—Till, Johnson, and Hamilton.

Low hurdles—T. Long, Ellis, and Welch.

2-mile run—Kent Mills, and Roberts.

Mile relay—Hamilton, Houston, Davis, and Till.

Pole vault—Ed Hays, Ford, and Edney.

High jump—George Smith, Steve Long, and Mike O'Brien.

Broad jump—Herb Kraft and Ford.

Last Saturday at the Hollywood Optimists Relay in Hollywood Florida, Florida State's mile relay team composed of Houston, T. Long, Davis, and Till captured a first place with a time of 3:19.7. Till also won the 440 with a time of 49.2 seconds. These Seminoles should be at their best when competition comes this Thursday.

I WAS A TEEN-AGE SLIDE RULE

In a recent learned journal (Mad) the distinguished board chairman (Ralph "Hot-Lips" Steadson) of one of our most important American corporations (the Art Mechanical Dog Co.) wrote a trenchant article in which he pinpointed our gravest national problem: the lack of culture among science graduates.

Mr. Sigsbee's article, it must be emphasized, was in no sense derogatory. He stated quite clearly that the science student, what with his grueling curriculum in physics, math, and chemistry, can hardly be expected to find time to study the arts too. What Mr. Sigsbee deplores—indeed, what we all deplore—is the lopsided result of today's science courses: graduates who can build a bridge but can't compose a concerto, who know Planck's Constant but not Botticelli's Venus, who are familiar with Fraunhofer's lines but not with Schiller's.

Mr. Sigsbee can find no solution to this hideous imbalance. It, however, never was before—and a very simple one. It is this: if students of science don't have time to come to the arts, then we must let the arts come to students of science.

He will know that he is a fulfilled man...

For example, it would be a very easy thing to teach poetry and music right along with physics. Students, instead of merely being called upon to recite in physics class, would instead be required to rhyme their answers and set them to familiar tunes—like, for instance, The Colonel Bogey March. Thus recitations would not only be chock-full of important facts but would, at the same time, expose the student to the aesthetic delights of great music. Here, try it yourself. You all know The Colonel Bogey March. Come, sing along with me:

Physics
Is what we learn in class.
Einstein
Said energy is mass.
Newton
Is highfalutin
And Pascal's a rascal. So's Boyle.

Do you see how much more broadening, how much more uplifting to learn physics this way? Of course you do. What? You want another chorus? By all means:

Leyden
He made the Leyden jar.
Trolley
He made the Trolley car.
Curie
Rode in a surrey,
And Diesel's a vessel. So's Boyle.

Once the student has mastered The Colonel Bogey March, he can go on to more complicated melodies like Death and Transfiguration, the Eroica, and Love Me Tender.

And when the student, loaded with science and culture, leaves the classroom and the Colonel Bogey March, how much more he will enjoy that filet, that flavor, that pack or box! Because there will no longer be an uneasy gnawing at his soul, no longer a little voice within him repeating that he is culturally a dolt. He will know—know joyously—that he is a fulfilled man, a whole man, and he will bask and revel in the pleasure of his Marlboro as a colt rolls in new grass—content, complete, truly edumsted—a credit to his college, to himself, and to his tobacconist!

© 1961 Max Shulman

And while he is rolling, roll-wise, in the new grass, perhaps he should stop long enough to try a new cigarette from the makers of Marlboro—unfiltered, king-size Philip Morris Commander. Welcome aboard!

A Typical Week With Our Student Body President

By BONNIE PERRY
Flambeau Feature Editor

The stage is Longmire. The scene is room 214; office of the Student Body President. The time is a typical week.

But "play" is not among the official activities conducted by President Carl Butler or his two secretaries.

The role of chief student public relations representative, administrator and chairman of the board of the newly formed Student Enterprises Corp., is a very serious one to the President. Upon him rests the responsibility of the student's welfare.

CANDID IDEA

To get a candid idea of just what being student body president entails here is an itemized account of the President's calendar last week, which Butler describes as "typical."

Monday. From 9 to 11 a.m. every Monday, Wednesday and Friday, Butler answers his correspondence and has appointments. A 2:30 p.m. he had an appointment to discuss what was to be included in the next issue of Statesman, the student government paper. At 4 p.m. he held a cabinet meeting at which time about 18 general reports were made, corporation papers were completed, and work was done on next year's budget, which has to be ready for presentation in Senate April 12.

Monday nights Butler prepares for his Wednesday night radio program.

Tuesday. Butler was at the Governor's office from 8 to 8:30 a.m. Tuesday morning. From 8:30 to 11 a.m. he met with Wendell Jarrad, chairman of the Development Commission, to talk about the proposed swimming pool. At 11:30, he was back at the Governor's office to assist in the Ormicron Delta Kappa tapping ceremonies. At 12:30 he had an appointment to discuss Student Union plans. At 1 p.m. he helped some senators draw up a bill.

At 1:30 p.m. Butler was helping to plan an installation banquet with Gil McArthur, under-secretary for FSU-U of F relations. He also worked in some correspondence congratulating the new student body president at Gainesville and a letter to Sen. George Smathers.

At 3:15 p.m. Butler met with Dean Oglesby, and from 4 to 5:30 they met with University President Blackwell at his home. At 10 p.m. Butler worked on the speech he presented to the Faculty Senate the following day.

CORPORATION PAPERS FILED

Wednesday. Buck Hiles, John Beranek and Butler filed the Student Enterprises Corp. papers at 9 a.m. This reporter "snagged" the president at 10 to get the details for this story. At noon Butler met with Dr. Blackwell and Dean Oglesby to see about an increase in the budget for next year.

Letters and plans occupied the president's time until his meeting with the Faculty Senate at 4 p.m. At 10:30 Butler was on his way to make his weekly radio broadcast.

Following the show he drove with several other students to the University of Virginia, in Charlottesville, for a Student Union Planning Conference, where he stayed until Sunday night. Butler has been to five such weekend conferences this year.

IN ADDITION

In addition to scheduled student government business, Butler practices from four to six hours in the pool to keep his position on the FSU swimming team.

Butler explained that he does his studying from 7 to 10 p.m. at night, if he's lucky. And if he's luckier, he gets his average of 5 or 6 hours of sleep nightly.

But Butler's studying and sleeping are competed with by persons seeking night appointments to discuss their problems.

Butler explained that he has only carried 12 hours per semester since he has been student body president. Of these hours he averages cutting three a week, yet maintains a 3.2 overall grade average.

The job is rough and the pay is only $80. monthly, not to mention the extra drain of laundry expenses and eating out. But the President said he had few regrets.

A TRANSISTOR-LIKE DEVICE . . . to small it has to be handled with tweezers, is used at FSU to separate and classify the charged particles flying out of an atomic nucleus at the logal end of the tandem accesorator. Dr. G. M. Temmer, left, head of the tandem program at F, says it works very much like a fruit-sorter. H. Richard Bludeo, right, is handling the country. Other graduate students, (l. to r.), are Kenneth L. Warsh, Gerald Roy and In Picture a health education class that borrows babies.

Health Education 225, Child and Family Health, is a course in practical family health that meets twice weekly in the education building. Practical experience in caring for "borrowed babies" is only a part of the course, however.

The course is "based on the sociological and psychological as well as the physical health needs of the family," said Mrs. Odelia M. Williams, instructor of the course.

PREVENTIVE ASPECTS

As such, it "stresses the preventive aspects of health for the entire family," she added.

The course is not intended as a preparation for earning money in the care of the sick and of children, she said, but is limited to family care.

At present, the course involves the care of the ill and bedridden in the home. The next unit of the course will include the psychological preparation for marriage and children and the care of infants and mothers.

This is the second semester the course has been in existence, said Mrs. Williams. It is offered for three hours credit.

Students who take the course are eligible for both the Red Cross Home Nursing Certificate and for the Child Care Certificate.

Recognition Given To LAE Here By SG

The first Southern chapter of Lambda Alpha Epsilon, national professional law enforcement fraternity, received official recognition as a campus organization from Student Senate Wednesday.

There are approximately 15 such chapters in the nation, a majority of which are located in California where the organization was chartered in 1964.

Membership in the FSU chapter now stands at 25. Students who have been or are presently enrolled in the law enforcement program within the Criminology and Corrections Dept. are automatically eligible.

In addition, several individuals in the state who meet the requirements of a college education in police administration are members. Duval County Sheriff Dale Carson and James Halligan, director of the State Crime Laboratory in Tallahassee are among this latter group.

Lambda Alpha Epsilon objectives include elevating "standards of personnel, training, procedure and ideals within the areas of the administration of criminal justice." It also works to foster understanding between agencies and departments and to promote public understanding of problems and objectives in these areas.

A Chain Pulls, A Whistle Blows—The Time Is Told

By TONI DICARLO
Flambeau Staff Writer

Every morning a sound amazingly reminiscent of the "Queen Mary" sends hundreds of students running for their 8 a.m. classes. Clocks may be slow or fast, but the Queen Mary always sounds at 7:40 and 8 a.m., and students have been going to class by it for many years.

Although most students think that it is the 175 foot red brick radial smoke stack that blows, the whistle is actually on top of the heating plant beside it.

The steam whistle is the official timepiece of the campus maintenance department and is used as an alarm if anything goes wrong at the plant. It also sounds at midnight on New Year's Eve and to begin numerous charity drives.

"PHALLIC SYMBOL"

The stack often referred to by students as "the campus phallic symbol" was built with the plant when it was burning coal brought in on the now-vestigal railroad tracks across the street from the Student Center.

Very little smoke is released now but the chimney is used as an exhaust for the gas and oil that is burned. "We burn whatever is cheapest," said S. T. Kinard, plant superintendent.

The heating plant adjacent to the well-known smoke stack supplies all the hot water on campus, including laundry, dining areas, infirmary, dormitories, classroom buildings and Florida High.

400,000

The four boilers, dating from 1949, 1937, 1930 and 1927, provide heating, hot water and steam-absorption air-conditioning. The plant can supply 400,000 gallons of softened hot water per day.

Temperatures in the fire-box which heats the boilers can reach 3300 degrees Fahrenheit, while the steam exiting through the maze of underground pipes is at about 350 degrees.

Many students seem tempted to descend into the tunnels all over campus which house the eight inch steam lines from the heating plant.

The tunnels look adventurous, but the pipes are many years old: there are 125 pounds of pressure per square inch on them, and the steam is above 300 degrees.

"If anyone is curious enough to want to see a tunnel," offered Kinard, "they can come over to the plant and I will show them one."

The pipes were laid before West Hall, Kellum Hall or Tully Gymnasium were built, but planners were foresighted enough to lay some of the lines in the directions in which the campus would expand.

The steam condenses in the pipes and is sent through the boilers again in an endless cycle with a minimum of loss.

NO SERIOUS ACCIDENTS

Kinard, pointing to a record of no serious accidents in his plant, demonstrated the nine safety devices on each boiler. In addition to all the electronic "watch-dogs," there is always some member of the staff on duty 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

There is an ominous sign posted on one of the boilers which reminds the nine plant employees:

"Every year there occur in the United States between 1200 and 1400 serious boiler accidents, of which 300-400 are violent explosions . . . these accidents kill between 400 and 500 people and do half a million dollars worth of damage."

GRIM REMINDER

"This is a grim reminder," said Kinard, "to stay alert. If we remain alert to the dangers involved and know our jobs, we are not likely to have a serious accident."

Referring to the plant as "a very important part of the university, especially during the winter," the superintendent urged house managers to call him when they want more or less heat. "All we have to do is turn a switch" to turn any building's heat on or off. The number is 2235.

Kinard has worked with boilers for over 30 years both on land and on navy vessels during the war.

'Operation Abolition' To Be Shown Thurs.

Operation Abolition, controversial film of student demonstrations in San Francisco last May, will be re-shown here by the Florida State University Political Union at 7 p.m. Thursday in Longmire Auditorium.

Tape - recorded interviews with college students involved in the demonstration will be presented along with the films.

The disturbances depicted in the film climaxed a protest demonstration against a hearing of the House Committee on Un-American Activities in San Francisco at that time.

Committee members are shown declaring that university students were "toying with treason" as the dupes of a communist drive to destroy the committee and wreck the national security system.

Opponents of the committee charged the film was a dishonest distortion of the facts and pointed out various instances of what they called intentional distortion in the pieced-together 45 minute film.

This is the position taken by the students in the recorded interviews which will be played.

An earlier showing of Operation Abolition here was sponsored by student government. The recorded interviews were not presented at that time.

The Political Union meeting is open to all members of the student body and faculty.

Greek Week Starts Mar. 23

A banquet in the Suwannee Room Thursday night at 7 p.m. will be the first function of this year's Greek Week.

Fraternity presidents, house mothers, faculty advisors and Greek Goddess candidates will attend the banquet. Sororities will be represented by the president, Panhellenic representative, house mother and faculty advisor.

Friday in Westcott Auditorium at 4 p.m., the Greek Goddess contest will be held. Sixteen sorority girls, nominated by fraternities will compete in shorts and sweaters and in evening gowns for the crown. Entertainment will be provided while the girls are changing. Bill Greene is master of ceremonies.

STREET DANCE

A street dance in Westcott Circle will be held at 7 p.m. that night. Music will be by the Ramblers and the five finalists in the Greek Goddess contest will be announced.

The climax of Greek Week will be Saturday night in Tully Gymnasium from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. Hank Ballard and the Midnighters will play for this annual dance. The Greek Goddess will be announced and crowned at this function. Late permission is granted for the occasion.

Circus Stars Appear On TV

Four members of the Florida State University Circus will appear on "I've Got a Secret" Wednesday at 9:30 p.m.

The quartette adagio, Susie Smith, Bill Arnold, Steve Frasier and Brick Mason will attempt to foil the panel with the secret, "We play catch with a 100-pound girl."

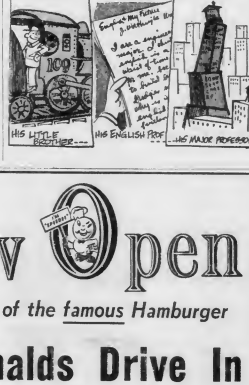
The three men will appear first, playing catch with a basketball. After the panel has finished guessing, they will demonstrate the secret by "playing catch" with Susie Smith.

The circus itself will appear on television in May.

Smorgasbord Open To All

The FSU Food Service and the Hotel and Restaurant Management Dept. offer Smorgasbord and Gourmet Dinners which are available to all faculty, staff and students.

The smorgasbord is served by the FSU Food Service, Monday through Friday at the Longmire Soda Shop from 5 to 7 p.m., and Saturday at the South Seminole Dining Room from 5 to 7:30 p.m. for $1.25 per person.



Dinner music by the G-Bach Strings, a three piece orchestra composed of music professors, is a special feature of the Saturday night smorgasbord, a further addition to the atmosphere created by soft candle lights and white tablecloths.

Food is served buffet style. A typical menu offers a variety of meats, carved to order, salads and desserts. Customers may have seconds except on meats.

Gourmet dinners are served on Tuesday and Thursday evenings in the Hotel and Restaurant Managment Dining Room on the second floor of the Seminole Club.

Reservations must be made by 5 p.m. on the preceeding day by calling extension 2137. The price is $1.25 per person.

LITTLE MAN ON CAMPUS

Now Is Last Chance For U To Better Latin Relation

By PATTY PACHLER
Flambeau Staff Writer

The present time is the last chance for the US to better its relations with L America, said Dr. Gonzalo J. Facio in a speech on "US-Latin-American Relat

Dr. Facio of Costa Rica spoke at Florida State University Sunday through the courtesy of the Hispanic Institute, the Tallahassee Rotary Club and Sigma Delta Pi, national Spanish honorary.

Dr. Facio used developments in Cuba as an example of how the US has fallen into disfavor in Latin America. He said that Castro's group felt that the US methods of democracy and aid would not help Cuba reach its goal of social reform.

Until now, he said, the spirit of democracy has been present in Latin America. Although it may have been violated. The battles against dictators have shown the desire for freedom. Latin American revolutionaries have based themselves on the US revolutionary fathers but have unsuccessfully sought US help.

The US support of dictators and false democracies has seemingly made a mockery of the US claim to be the leader of democracy in the free world, continued Dr. Facio.

The Latin American democratic movements have sought a change in social structure because with economic growth and no social change a few will be wealthy and the majority will be poor. The movements have sought to accomplish this change democratically and by a dynamic approach to the problems, said Dr. Facio.

Instead of encouragement, he said, the people have found indifference, if not open hostility, in government and business circles. The fervid desire of the people to free themselves from the chains of poverty allows them to be lured dangerously by the Communists. Conditions are so poor that any changes seem for the better.

Logically the US should lead, not oppose the democratic movements, said Dr. Facio. Understandably the US has not lately been in a revolutionary mood because as a rich country it tends to be conservative. But, he emphasized, Latin America has a great deal to change and the change cannot be made slowly.

THREE STEPS

Dr. Facio outlined three steps which the US should take to better its relations with Latin America and fight the growth of Communism.

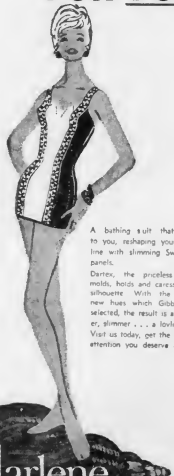
The US must make it very clear that it supports political democracy throughout the world and must fight the extensive, erroneous belif that US foreign policy is aimed only at protection of business abroad.

Secondly, he said, the US must extend as much support as possible to the program for social change. This is consistent with President John F. Kennedy's program for aid to social progress, pointed out Dr. Facio.

The third point stressed by Dr. Facio is that the U. S. in association with Western Europe and Japan must outline a program for economic cooperation with Latin America. This would include stabilization of prices of primary products of the Latin American countries, long-term loans, and encouragement of private in ments.

PRIVATE INVESTMEN

Private investments are tant, said Dr. Facio, as the only bring capital but tec and administrative know emphasized that the must come with the idea operating in the develop the country, not just with of making profits.



Only when these steps ha initiated can the US hope support against Castro, said Facio. "The way in which Kennedy administration has gun to convert good words good deeds makes me have said Dr. Facio. "I have hop the US will become the fo force of liberation."

Van Assenderp Pulls Surprise Win Over SP Candidate Moore — 1981-968

By BONNIE JO MOORE
Flambeau Staff Writer

Ken Van Assenderp, independent candidate, rode to victory in the student body vice president's race Tuesday on the crest of a landslide of 1,013 votes over Student Party nominee Duncan Moore.

The victor garnered 1,981 total votes to 968 for his opponent.

Van Assenderp, chairman of Lobby Committee, campaigned on the policy that his public relations work would enable him to fulfill the task of developing FSU's potential.

Van Assenderp is the first candidate without fraternity affiliation to win the student body vice president's post since 1953, when Gene Lawler was elected.

Student Body Vice President Bobby Byrd gained 2,427 votes in his unopposed quest for student body president.

Byrd's platform offered such ideas as staggered lunch hours for university offices and services and a more reasonable text book purchasing program.

CHAMPION WINS

Mygnon Champion, a senator for three years, won the race for women's vice president against Jeanne Ferlita, also a senator. Miss Champion received a margin of 818 votes, 1,843 to 1,025.

Dan Walbolt, secretary of Men's Judiciary, defeated Gordy Smith for the post of chief justice of Honor Court. Walbolt tallied 1,489 votes to Smith's 1,196. Smith is presently a justice on Honor Court.

Carl Kuttler, president pro tem of Men's Senate, ran without opposition for men's vice president. He is the fourth Lamido Chi Alpha in four years to hold the post. Kuttler obtained 2,503 votes.

Kitty Miller received more votes than any other candidate running in this election. Miss Miller, secretary of the sophomore class ran without competition for secretary of Senate, receiving 2,529 votes.

HONOR COURT CLERK

Diane Goodwin, sophomore representative to Women's Judiciary, ran without competition for clerk of Honor Court and received 2,446 votes. Miss Goodwin would like to see cases concerning dormitory hours be kept to house councils and thus alleviate the heavy judiciary docket.

Linda Stearns, presently a member of Women's Judiciary, obtained 2,460 votes in her unopposed campaign for chairman of University Court.

In the race for Board of Publications, five candidates strived for the three available posts. Winner Ray Allen, assistant advertising manager of the Flambeau, received 1,520 votes.

Bill McLemore, editor of Smoke Signals, garnered 1,501. Eva Skelton, member of the Tally-Ho staff got 1,378 votes to win the third elected position on the Board.

Sen. Jim Miller received 122 write-in votes for student body president. Miller opposed Byrd in both the vice presidential election of last year and in the Student Party Convention this year. Miller sought the party nomination for president.

Nellie Brewbarf, this year's sole candidate, received 110 votes for student body president. Miss Brewbarf's posters stated that she was running for chairman of the Women's Breathcheck Committee.

Noted Psychiatrist Will Talk Monday

By GLENDA POWERS
Flambeau Staff Writer

Dr. Dana Farnsworth, noted American psychiatrist and presently director of Harvard University Student Health Services, will speak on "Student Hopes and Dilemmas' 'in Longmire Auditorium Monday at 7:30 p.m.

The address will be followed by a brief discussion period and a reception in Longmire Lounge.

Dr. Farnsworth, author of the books, Mental Health in Colleges and Universities and Living, has been invited to the Florida State University campus by President Gordon Blackwell and Dean of Students R. R. Oglesby to be a consultant for the university on plans for the new infirmary and to make suggestions relative to the FSU Counseling Service.

"We are hoping that Dr. Farnsworth will be able to help us in extending the services of our Counseling Center on campus in the direction of mental health," said Dr. G. Harold Massey, coordinator of counseling for FSU. Dr. Massey emphasized that "mental health" includes many areas of individual problems.

TWO-DAY VISIT

During his two-day visit, Dr. Farnsworth will meet with Dr. Blackwell and various administrative officials. He will tour the infirmary and observe its operation and also the FSU clinical facilities. He will meet with Student Body President Carl Butler and his cabinet and with the Board of Control before leaving campus Tuesday afternoon.

Earlier this week, Dr. Clair Thompson, an officer from the Public Health Service in Atlanta, visited FSU to discuss the role that the counseling service might play in a growing University community.

"We hope that the contibutions made by men like Calhoon and Farnsworth are two among many that will help us project a program aimed at the individual interests of students and a program which will help keep counseling facilities in the main stream of campus life," said Dr. Massey.

PROFESSIONAL PERSONNEL

Dr. Massey expressed the desire that the FSU counseling service will permeate every phase of University life. Dr. Massey hopes professional personnel will be available for leading discussions and organizing group dynamics in such things as career planning and interpersonal relations.

Although the FSU Counseling Service, located in Westcott, now advises and assists dozens of students weekly, Dr. Massey expressed concern that many groups or individuals on campus are not taken care of at present due to an unawareness of the service, or a lack of adequate facilities.

The primary functions of the Counseling Center now include providing testing, interpretation, discussion, referral and reporting, and conducting interviews; coordinating an effective program of educational advisement and counseling for students of the Basic Division as well as on a higher level; the development of an effective foreign student program; and planning and promotion of the Orientation program.

Dowling Offer Well Received Says Fallon

Response to Broadway producer Eddie Dowling's offer of financial support for a university theater circuit of Florida colleges to try-out prospective new plays has been favorable and enthusiastic, said Richard Fallon, a director of the University Theatre.

The idea has caught fire and may eventually spread, continued Fallon. The "wedding" of the educational and professional theater is significant for the mutual purpose of creating interesting and exciting productions, he added.

Something of this sort had to happen to adjust the tensions limiting the new playwright in the professional theater, said Dr. Arthur Dorlag, co-director of the University Theatre.

The plan is one of the major accomplishments of the educational theater in the past twenty years and the possibilities are quite tremendous, Dorlag commented.

Definite commitments to join the circuit have been obtained from four universities, said Fallon. The other universities and colleges are being contacted, he added.

The play produced on the FSU campus would be one of the regular productions of the University Theatre. The other five productions would play here several nights and would be in addition to FSU's productions, thus increasing the theater activity on campus, said Fallon.

Details of the project which has been incorporated are being worked out, continued Fallon. Enthusiastic support has been received from the professional actors' council of equity added Fallon.

Theater Group Will Hold 'Inherit The Wind' Tryouts

The University Theatre will hold tryouts at 7 p.m. Monday and Tuesday in Conrads Theater for Inherit the Wind, fourth production of the season.

Presented on Broadway in 1955, the play has a cast of 30 including both men and women. The director will be Richard Fallon who has also directed Juno and the Paycock and Assignment in Judea this year.

Although based on the 1925 "monkey trial" in Dayton, Tenn., when a school teacher was on trial for teaching Darwin's theory of evolution, the play is not actually history.

"The events which took place in Dayton, Tennessee, during the scorching July of 1925 are clearly the genesis of this play. It has, however, an exodus entirely its own," authors Jerome Lawrence and Robert E. Lee said.

Only a few phrases of dialogue have been taken from the actual transcript of the trial and although some characters are related to colorful figures involved, they have names of their own.

The University Theater has written to John Scopes, the accused school teacher. He has offered to furnish any information that might be needed for the production.

The actual trial pitted against each other William Jennings Bryan, orator and politician, for the prosecution, and Clarence Darrow, famed for his defense of unpopular cases, defending Scopes.

Two major characters in the play, Drummond and Brady, are patterned after Darrow and Bryan. Paul Muni played the Drummond role in the original Broadway cast, while Ed Begley played Brady.

The authors have written of their play:

"The greatest reporters and historians of the century have written millions of words about the 'monkey trial.' We are indebted to them for their brilliant reportage."

"The collision of Bryan and Darrow at Dayton was dramatic, but it was not a drama. Moreover, the issues of their conflict have acquired new dimensions and meaning in the 30 years since they clashed at the Rhea County Courthouse.

"So Inherit the Wind does not pretend to be journalism. It is theater. It is not 1925. The stage directions set the time as 'Not too long ago.' It might have been yesterday. It could be tomorrow."

Laughton Ducats

Tickets, selling at $1.75 for students and $2.50 for the public, can be purchased at the Westcott Ticket Office beginning at noon today for the Student Artist Series production of Charles Laughton.

The stage and film star will present a program of readings April 5 at 8:15 p.m. in Westcott Auditorium.

Sophomores!

All sophomores in the Division of Basic Studies who plan to enter the upper division next semester should have declared a major with their faculty advisors by now.

Dr. G. Harold Massey, director of counseling, said the necessary reassignment to an appropriate department cannot be made until the major field of study is declared.

Those who have not done so may declare their intended majors in the Counseling Center, Room 307 Westcott Bldg.

Fraternities, Sororities Receive Awards At Banquet

Awards for the Sorority of the Year, Fraternity Activities, Best Host and Hostesses and IFC Scholarship were made last night at the Greek Week Banquet.

Kappa Delta was presented the Sorority of the Year award by Delta Tau Delta fraternity. In second place was Zeta Tau Alpha sorority, with Kappa Alpha Theta third.

The eighth annual presentation was made on the basis of points for group participation, individual participation, student government honoraries, student publications, campus organizations, group sponsored activities and religious group membership.

Lambda Chi Alpha was awarded the Fraternity Activities award presented by Alpha Xi Delta, because they "were most outstanding in group participation," said Zebbie Smith, sorority president. Phi Delta Theta placed second.

Sigma Chi fraternity was awarded the IFC scholarship trophy.

Alpha Gamma Delta was presented the Best Hostess award by Kappa Sigma fraternity. The sorority was selected by a vote of all fraternities.

Lambda Chi Alpha received the Best Host award presented by Sigma Kappa sorority. They were selected for the second year in a row by a vote of all sororities.

AFTER THE RETURNS . . . were in and Bobby Byrd was officially declared next year's Student Body President, a hungry-looking but friendly "mob" got together to give Bobby a pool party at Westcott fountain as their method of congratulations. (Flambeau photo by Lloyd Hines)

The Biggest Pig Is A Frat

A fraternity on this campus is going in for some of the most low-down, depraved and sadistic entertainment that FSU Greeks have ever "enjoyed".

The latest fret-man's plaything is a "pig" party, and what the fraternity doesn't realize is that those who propose the party are more pigs than the dates they brought could ever hope to be. In a recent chapter meeting, after several members spoke against the idea, there were still enough votes to make this type of party a possibility.

FSU FRAT BOY! — and I don't mean men—then raided the campus and the neighboring drive-ins and the bowling alley for the girls who best fitted their description of a pig. The frat boy who showed up with the biggest "pig" was the winner of a fifth of liquor.

When you consider that the liquor was paid for with the pride and feelings of a group of girls, many of them of high-school age, for the purpose of entertaining a group of sadistic juveniles, then that fifth must have contained the most bitter-tasting, cheap drink in town.

The base actions of just one such organization on this campus lowers any of the claims to prestige that any other groups of its kind might pretend to share.

There can be no excuse for "pig" parties. We can only commend those members of thet fraternity who had the decency to refuse to participate. Unfortunately, they were in the minority.

The Taxpayer Won't Like It

With a state cebinet suggesting cuts in our budget, particularly in the maintenance area, there arises a serious problem.

We have not been able to maintain the physical facilities that we have et present, and the question arises as to how we will maintein the new facilities that ere now under construction.

INSPECTION OF almost every room in the History Building will reveal ceilings that are peeling and plaster that is gally falling on the heads of students. The Science Building, on the interior, gives the impression that a careless smoker could turn the entire building into a raging holocaust.

Money is the chief reason behind the lack of repairs. We just don't have enough now to take care of what vitally needs renovation. Yet we can efford to spend large sums in landsceping and re-landscaping the campus. We can transplant trees out of existence, and we can build side walks to protect the grass. But, there seems to be nothing that we can do for the classroom facilities.

WE ARE BUILDING new buildings, one of which is the mathematics building. This latest addition to the campus is nearing completion, and it has been built as great cost to the university. The equipment that is contained within this one building alone will take an enormous portion of our meintenance fund. If we are to care for it first, then we will we have to ignore some of the areas that we have so long ignored because of a lack of money.

Our new budget contains provisions for constructing more buildings and physical facilities. Perhaps the state expects these buildings to remain forever fresh and new. Perhaps they are not supposed to deteriorate as over 9000 students use them consttently. We can't help but know that this is grossly unrealistic.

By not providing enough funds to enable FSU to keep up the feciilties thet it presently hes, the state is merely openng itself to spend more money in the future replacing buildings which it, not the university, has allowed to go into ruin.

And the taxpayers won't like that.

"Well, I Took You All The Way To The Top"

Village Boosts A Two-Party System

By BILL DOXEY

You all know what Tannyson said about "Spring" and a young man's "fancy". It appears that on this campus the poet is being ignored for a group of young men (and women) have momentarily put aside all thoughts of moonlight and have thrown themselves, body and soul, into the anything-but-romance-scented field of politics.

I guess that almost everyone thinks that student politics is a "good" thing. Almost everybody, that is, except this writer. Oh, I've heard all that baloney about how student government "builds character for the future" and about how "student participation in government trains the leaders of tomorrow."

EVEN THE MOST dedicated student of politics will have to agree with me when I say that Student Government is ridiculous. If you don't, check the record. What's been done? Nothing! And it really isn't the student's fault because there isn't anything he can do.

But there must be something behind all the fervor. Maybe it's a good chance for ego reinforcement. At any rate, it is a good opportunity to acquire something to put beside your name when you graduate. (Wouldn't it be terrible to appear in the yearbook with just your name and the degree you labored four years to get! Why it would be like walking down the street naked!)

STUDENT GOVERNMENT has been attacked from many quarters in many ways. Aside from the obvious fact that it accomplishes nothing, I've also heard people say that it breeds complacency because there is only one party, the Macedonian.

This is no doubt true. But in a rather remote part of campus, Alumni Village to be exact, the entire question of government is being so heatedly contested that conditions tantamount to riot prevail.

At first the issue was quite simple. The people lived a rather primitive but happy life completely divorced from any form of "civic life. But, as always happens, five or six members ee the community, not happy with their uncomplicated existence, banded gether and decided that thing was wrong. After deliberation they hit upon "wrong." They had no government!

TO RECTIFY THIS se defect they drew up a co tution and, summoning a cross-section of the Village, teen to be exact, they brought approved the splendid ment.

Next on the agenda, course, was an election. appointed a committee to dia the details, and selection date. Soon thought, all would be again.

However, certain other bers of the community h of these plans and quite critically proposed the slate against those who initiated the idea of gov ment. On the designated of elections all . . . broke

In order to alleviate somewhat tense condition then prevailed the mea proposed to defer elec until the following week during this time the candida have been actively cam votes.

THE FACTION WHICH ed the whole mess (which shall refer to as the Wa Mitty Party) sprang up perfectly "Won-der-ful" in their platform. In fact, good most of the "planks" in the Housing Office, but beside the point, after all is POLITICS. They promise open a much-needed nurse to relieve the parking pr lem, work on a way for dents to keep their apartme while away during the su mer, and to offer cut-rate tickets for student wives.

On the other hand, the posing party (which I sh call the Insomia Party) posed to legislate as little possible, and to keep the versity to manage its property.

This hassle will be settled Tuesday but no matter ho is solved there will be no end placency. Each party is bo to its own course of action will be a two-party system as will not be patterned after t totalitarian governments wh has been mis-named the St dent Government association FSU.

Critique
What Can 'J.B.' Do For Actors?

By TONI PERRY

Whatever may be said to the contrary, and I am bored nearly to the verge of tears by the typical student quasi-intellectual iconoclasms on the subject, J. B. is an indisputably ingenious work of art in the theater. It remains as insipidly naive to dismiss it on the literary, theological, or ethical terms exclusive of its intended medium as it is to hear a violin concerto played on a Wagner tuba.

PROBABLY THE MOST singularly striking positive element of the play is what it does for an actor and his art. The former of this play, as postulated in the clever and scintillating opening scene, is that we are to witness a human drama played by Job, who, we learn, is omnipresent. The genius of MacLeish resides in the fact that every actor who steps into this drama finds himself a universal truth incarnate before giving a single line.

The spirits of good and evil, Zuss and Nickles, solace in the guise of earthy truth, scientific presumptuousness, and theological hypocrisy, or Bildad, Elipash, and Zophar, and Sarah, the living moral question, are characters as allpervading in their essence as any reasonably astute individual could require to lead him to a philosophical truth.

ALSO THERE IS J. B. Any actor who could even consider undertaking this part without being at first terrified by so bafflingly grandiose a task, then humbled to the point of speechlessness, would be a presumptuous one indeed. J. B., is, and was most obviously intended to be an utterly universal character, and to play the part realistically or "right" is no less nearly impossible than to play Hamlet realistically or "right." Mr. Strudwick made this character at least believable, which is most commendable in view of the highly ambitious nature of this character. Might I also submit that Hingle, Daly, Massey, and lesser actors have done similarly, and the failure to do so would be improper in so finely conceived a character.

The essence of all drama is conflict, and, as a most formidable foundation for an element of drama in J. B. there is the conflict of good and evil. Most often a character is placed upon the stage to embody the conflict between good and evil. Oedipus, Hamlet and Willie Lomond have to do it without help, MacLeish had immense visual sensitivity. In his play, if the actor playing J. B. does not show the tortured anguish of indecision or the good versus drama, because good and evil are there. then he would fail. Zuss and Nickles stand right there for all to see, and this is the difference between a poem and a play.

STILL ANOTHER strength of the play lies in the area of personal audiance indentification for which, because of the universality of the characters, the opportunities are infinite. J. B. suffers, and we all like to think we suffer, so naturally we identify with him although this feeling is made disturbingly more complex by the fact that we also find solace that he is far worse off than we are. Psychologically speaking one might go back to view the plight of J. B. a second time in much the same spirit as that of people who like to go to fires, or slow down to look at an automobile accident.

More specifically Mr. Carradine might well have been able to play a far more convincing Mr. Zuss than a Mr. Nickles. Mr. Worsley was a very loveable old man, if that is what you think God is. As emphatically as possible, and in response to an abundance of insensitive critism, this play is done inestimable injustice by those so ignorantly blind as to discuss it on purely literary or theological terms.

IT J. B. is too brutally true for a cowardly humanity to acknowledge as a lasting work of art, it will persist at least as a lasting truth.

Says Mr. Zuss: "Oh, there's always someone playing Job."

Tosca Reviewed
Opera Loses Beauty

By MARK HOMER WITHAM

Puccini's beautiful tragedy of love, betrayal, greed and desire was portrayed with powerful emotions — emotions set to music. The real "tragedy" lies in the fact that the FSU Opera Guild chose to give the performance in the Italian masterpiece in an English translation. The original libretto written by Illica perfectly matched the Italian phrases used; to hear such phrases as "Goodness gracious" and "May I suggest you think it oooo-ver," wrapped cruelly around the beautiful melodies of Puccini, is to spell a "tragedy." It would seem that explanatory flash-cards would be less distracting than the English phraseology. The English usage refused to flow smoothly, and the translation repeatedly became lost in the rapidly sung lyrics.

THE THREE LEAD players, Christine Buhrman as Tosca, a celebrated Italian singer; Leland Fox as Cavaradossi, Tosca's lover and an artist, and Richard Collins as Baron Scarpia, the villainous police chief, with Impresario Roberto Sedore, successfully managed to give the production the power and emotion it demanded despite the unattractive presence of the English translation. The reverent reception and attendance at only one performance, and therefore is unable to comment on the portrayals of Wendall Barth and Ethel Donaldson as Cavaradossi and Tosca, respectively.)

Though starting slowly with a marked conflict between the orchestra and Lorrie Kay as Angelotti and William Bolin as the Sacristan, the ensemble artists continued to climbed with the orchestra to powerful triumph, only to lose the tragic moment of the end at a note of comic humor. Miss Buhrman sang to a dead lover—"Get up, let's go! In the case of the classic Opera, perhaps it is better to know of, than to completely understand, for it is the music and the ideas, that hold the appeal of Opera, and separate it from melodrama.

Letters To Trotts
Columnist Is "Wrong"?

★ ★ ★ ★ ★

TO THE EDITOR:

In the March 3 issue of the Flambeau, Bill Trotts is critical of an article in the Tallahassee Democrat, which points out the current Communist objectives in the US. Like many writers for appeasement, he attempts to minimize the Communist threat.

If Trotts thinks that we should not concern ourselves with Communist objectives, he is wrong. Lenin boasted, "We shall surround that last bastion of Capitalism—the United States. We shall not have to attack, it will fall like an overripe fruit into our hands." If we doubt they still mean business, take a look at Cuba. Soon it will be other Latin American countries and Lenin's plan to encircle the United State's will have come true.

IT WOULD BE profitable for all Americans to examine the Communist threat to see for themselves how important it is. Just 87 years ago, Lenin organised the Communist party with about seventeen supporters. in 1917, he took Russia with about 40,000 followers. Today the Communists have captured over one-third of the world and hold one billion people in slavery. They are making good their boast to destroy Capitalism. By the Communists' own words, the two are irreconcilable. The world cannot long exist half slave and half free. Either freedom must triumph and Communism be defeated, or Communism will win and freedom will vanish from the face of the earth.

If a writer follows the Communist party line it makes little difference whether he is sincere or not. His belief that the HUAC is as dangerous as Communism, for example) or is actually trying to aid the international conspiracy. The effect is the same.

IT IS IMPORTANT to those who would preserve freedom to be well informed. They will then recognize such writing for what it is. It takes study to become a well-informed voice for freedom. Start by writing the Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington 25, D.C., and ask for a list of publications on Communism. Obtain study material from the Christian Anti-Communism Crusade, Box 890, Long Beach, California. For fifty cents buy a copy of 100 Steps To The Truth from American Opinion, Belmont 78, Mass. This is a bibliography of 100 books in support of freedom, including Masters of Deceit by J. Edgar Hoover.

A well informed America is the only force which can stop the Communist Advance.

Who Can Defend Eichmann?

TO THE EDITOR:

I refer to the article "Trials Will Place Focus on Israel" published in Florida Flambeau of March 17, 1961. A similar antiisraelian (sic) article written on the ground of "Eichman (sic) Case" was published in your newspaper of June 17, 1960.

If Mr. Trotts is guided by humanitarian principles and if he is appreacating the human rights, the value of human life and the man's struggle for decency, I wonder and ask, how on the base (sic) of these principles Mr. Trotts is able to be on the side of the worst criminal of the mankind, today, when in many parts of the world svantiquas (swastikas) are painted on the walls and bombs are exploding in Sinagogues (sic) and in the same time millions of innocent peoples are persecuted only because of their race or creed.

MR. TROTTS HAS no ground to be excited about the sentence to be given to Eichman (sic), because this criminal will have a fair trial in Israel and no one is seeking vengeance. The fact that Eichman was not killed in Argentina by his captors, but was spirited off and brought to Israel at the risk of diplomatic complications illustrates clearly that the Israelians (sic) are seeking only justice and not vengeance. The Israelian (sic) minister of justice has allowed Eichman (sic) to choose freely his own defense lawyers, and Dr. Servatius, counsel from Koln, Dr. Servatius, was authorised to defend him. More, the Israelians (sic) have taken all the security measures necessary to protect physically Eichman (sic) during the trial. As Eichman (sic) is the only living Nazi that knows exactly the details about the extermination of six million Jews and several million East-European Christians, his trial has also a historical importance.

MR. TROTTS GIVES me the impression that he is looking to Israel as to e theocratic state. I wish to make clear that Israel is a laic state in which there are three distinct powers: legislative, executive and judicial, both of them being (sic) separated from the Jewish religion. Eichman (sic) is tried in virtue of laic Israelian (sic) lay and in virtue of the Criminal Code inherited from the British Mandatory Power.

Mr. Trotts classified incorrectly (sic) the Jews in two groups: the religious Jews group and the Zionist Jews group. I am neither a Zionist Jew and neither a religious Jew, and even so as a son of the Jewish nation I feel a moral obligation to struggle for the maintenance and development of Israel.

IN WHAT IS concerning the creation of the state or Israel, I am convinced that the rebirth of this state is due in major part to the persecution of the Jews by the Nazis and their collaborators and not only to Zionism as is pretended by the unpopular Jewish millionaires Ullenthal.

If we speak about criticism, I am sure that the Israelians (sic) are ready to bear any criticism if it is based on existing objective facts, and as they form a majority group in their country, they have not any minority group complexes to brand in haste any criticisme as antisemitism (sic).

Golfers Whip Vanderbilt Linksmen To Travel To Jax

By MIKE HAZELWOOD
Flambeau Sports Writer

The Florida State University golf team will compete with four teams in seven matches at Jack- sonville today and tomorrow.

The tribe will meet the Naval Academy, The University of Mi- ami and Jacksonville University at the San Jose Country Club today. Florida State will com- pete with Jacksonville Naval air station, the Naval Academy, the University of Miami and Jack- sonville University at the navy station course.

Seminoles who will compete in these matches are Downing Gray, Frank Malara, Dickie Dunlap, Rock Fraleigh, David Onstad and Manning Nordone.

Coach Bill Odneal said, "We expect to play real good at San Jose as all the boys are playing real good." "We may have trouble on the Naval Station course as it is quite long and the greens are tricky."

In an invitational tournament on Monday and Tuesday of this week the Seminoles won four matches. Monday the golf team played Vanderbilt and Georgia Tech. They defeated Vanderbilt 22-2 and Georgia Tech 15-12.

The Seminoles again met Van- derbilt and defeated them 20-1 Tuesday. Also Auburn was met and defeated 20½-6½. All of these matches were played at the Cap- ital City Country Club in Talla- hassee.

In an individual match on Wednesday the Florida State golf team played Vanderbilt. The Seminoles defeated Vanderbilt for the third time 19-8.

The Florida State golf team will leave for Houston, Texas, to compete in the American Athe- teur Invitational Inter-collegiate tournament on Monday. This tournament will be the highlight of the year for the Seminole golf team.

The players who will be com- peting in this tournament will be Downing Gray, Dickie Dunlap, Frank Malara and either Rock Fraleigh or Manning Nordone. Of the upcoming match Coach Odneal said, "If our boys can solve the greens at Houston, we should be among the top three."

Gymnasts Travel To Ga. Southern

The Florida State Gymkana team will travel to Statesboro, Georgia Saturday to compete in a gymnastics meet with Georgia Southern.

The Gymkana squad which re- cently won the Florida AAU Open Championship will be led by Bill Beavers and Yashiro Hatano. The two teams have met only in open meets but the Gymkana squad has consistently outdone the Georgians by wide margins.

The Georgians coached by Olym- pic Gymnastics Coach, Pat Yeager are fairly new in gymnastics com- petition but have made a good showing in meets so far. Joe Gusic, Gymkana coach stated "We should win easily but we might be surprised especially since it is their gym."

The Gymkana Troupe will per- form Saturday night following the meet. They are being sponsored by the Gymnastics organization of Georgia Southern.

FSU Netters Meet Gators

The Florida State tennis squad takes on the Gators from the University of Flor- ida in a match here Satur- day.

The Gator netters hold an edge of 7-2 in past matches wins. The only mutual opponent this year so far has been Georgia, which took a scalping from the Semi- noles, 8-1, and likewise from the Gators, 8-0.

The Seminoles increased their season wins to five as they de- feated Georgia Tech, Southern Illinois, and Auburn on Monday and Tuesday.

Rebel Bellamy in the number one spot set the pattern for the Tribe as he easily defeated all three of his fellow competitors. The line-up for the second through the fifth positions was shifted from match to match as Coach Danny Holcomb saw the need.

On Monday afternoon the Semi- noles easily trummed the Yellow Jackets from Georgia Tech with a final tally of 8-1. On Tuesday morning they met the netters from Southern Illinois University and with little difficulty defeated them by 7-2. That afternoon they took on Southeastern foe Auburn and calmly trounced them 8-0.

The undefeated FSU squad met Annapolis yesterday and again this morning in Jacksonville. The Seminoles will meet the tennis squads from Amherst and East Carolina in separate matches here next Tuesday and Wednes- day.

Florida State Baseballers Meet Midshipmen Today

By BILL VERIGAN
Asst. Sports Editor

Sporting a record of four wins and one loss, Florida State's baseball team travels to Jacksonville for its first two out-of-town games of the season against the Mid- shipmen of the Navy today and tomorrow.

Last year's closely fought ten- inning contest resulted in an 8-1 win for the Seminoles to give FSU a 1-0 lead in the young series. This will be the first game of the season for the Midship- men, and they will be in familiar company since the contest is being played at the Jacksonville Naval Air Station.

On Monday the Tribe goes up against the Duke Blue Devils in its own territory of Seminole Field for the first game of a four-game series. The series with the men from Durham, N.C. cur- rently stands at 5-4 in favor of the visitors.

After smashing out two wins over the Auburn Tigers, 10-1 and 10-9, FSU's baseball team had a four-game victory skein snapped in the third and final game of the series, 15-5.

The hard-hitting Seminoles have notched an overall batting av- erage of .282 during their five- game spree with 11 men cur- rently batting over the .300 mark. Among the top FSU hitters are ranked Neil Martin (.450), Jack Dull (.421), Roger Zimmerman (.417), Doug Walker (.381), and George Fergusson (.333). Three pitchers, also surprisingly hit- ting at the .300 level, are Frank Davis, Jim Daniel, and Jack Ross.

Winning pitchers for Florida State include Frank Echols, Frank Davis, Jim Daniel, and Jack Ross.

Sorority Day Planned

This year baseball coach Danny Litwhiler has planned a Sexiest Participation Day for the fraternities and sororities on campus.

The competition will include an accuracy throw, a distance throw, and a race around the bases.

The sororities will have their day March 28, prior to the Duke game, and the fraterni- ties will compete later. Tro- phies will be presented to the winners.

The Dress Is Cocktail For Greek Week Dance

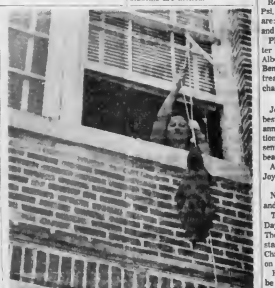
By ANNE CALVERT

This weekend the Greeks end a week of social activities with their annual Greek Week Dance. All coeds have permission.

A host of formals, Panhellenic decided on cocktail dresses wear. They feel that everyone is more comfortable if less formally attired.

Also will be in good taste is the dark suit or a dinner jacket, which ever is preferred.

MANY STYLES



There are many attractive styles in cocktail dresses, from the simple sheath to more ornate designs. Popular fabrics for this year are taffetas, faille, lace and embroidered and brocaded fabrics. It a a little late for heavier velvet and velveteens.

Clothes being shown now are not tightly fitted, and this applies to "after-five" fashions, also. In order to achieve this look many dresses are two piece with a loosely fitted over-blouse. Some have adapted Mrs. Kennedy's style of a sheer material over an extremely simple skirt.

FANCY JEWELRY

Tomorrow night's dance is the occasion to bring out fancy jewelry. An extremely plain dress can be transformed with a tasteful amount of sparkle. Fashion magazines have been showing high necked, sleveless sheaths with a bib of bright jewels.

Other jewelry isn't worn so as not to detract from the dramatic effect of the bib. One can now be "brilliant" and still be in keeping with high fashion.

Fishing Pole Saves Steps

By MARY ELLEN HARRIS 6
Assistant Fasture Editor

In this age of mechanization and miracles, a breath of the bizarre is sometimes refreshing.

Such is the case in Westcott. Several times a day a canvas bag on a long rope swings precariously between second floor and the basement—much to the amusement and amasement of passing students.

The story behind the scene is not filled with intrigue, but with a walk-o-meter, a dumb-waiter, and a fishing pole.

The machine accounting section of the IBM department which handles material from the comptroller's office is in the basement. The comptroller's office is on the second floor.

TAKES TIME

According to Kenneth Clark, assistant IBM supervisor, it takes time to walk three flights of stairs up to 30 times a day. A walk-o-meter with the stride set for 28 inches registers an average of eight miles per day in that department, Clark said.

Since the cost of purchasing and installing a dumb-waiter is in excess of $5000, a fresh water reel was obtained to convey IBM materials from second floor to basement.

When the volume of material increased, a salt water reel was obtained to accommodate the heavier weight and larger volume.

FISHING POLE SYSTEM

Difficulties with the fishing pole system soon developed, however. The weight of materials increased at such a rate that only the "huskier" members of the office staff could operate the reel. To solve this problem, a pulley was installed outside the window of the office to facilitate the movement of articles from office to IBM department.

A "squawk box" was installed to contact the department when the materials are being sent up or down.

Clark speaks of the innovation as a "home-made dumb-waiter" and added that members of the staff "went through Webster's" for names for the canvas bag. So "pouch," "sack," and "poke" seem to be the post popular.

Anthropological Theories Of Religion Told In Lecture

"Religion is and will be the principal synthesizer and integrator of culture," suggested Dr. Charles Fairbanks in his lecture last Friday night.

Dr. Fairbanks, of the Anthropology Dept., spoke on the anthropological theories and observations of religion at the Perspectives on Religion series.

Tonight, Dr. Allan Thomson of the English Dept. will deliver the last lecture in the Liberal Forum series. Following his talk on "Myth and the Spiritual Life" all of the past speakers for the series will answer questions from the audience. The lecture will be at 7:30 p.m. in the Library lecture hall.

Dr. Fairbanks said that as an anthropologist he was concerned not with the moral questions involved in religion, but rather the function that it seems to serve in culture.

In all cultures, Fairbanks said, there is the idea of souls. The functional reason for this seems to be that these souls can be used to account for, to "cause" natural phenomena.

The classical functionalists in anthropology, he continued, believe that religion serves the purpose of social solidarity and unity. A. R. Radcliffe-Brown suggests that this is the criterion for any successful social function.

Malinowski explains the function of religion as a satisfier of needs that arise out of the primary needs. The primary needs, such as food, safety, and body comfort, give rise to development of a cultural and social control group, which creates other needs: the need to release tension caused by frustration of freedom, etc. must be satisfied.

Religion can occasionally be disfunctional—that is, when people use ghosts to explain natural phenomena, their technology does not develop, Dr. Fairbanks added.

Anthony Wallace explains the function of religion with the word "maxeway," which refers to the total configuration by which an individual understands or explains himself, nature, and other people, Dr. Fairbanks said. These explanations are often expressed as religious beliefs, and if followed by the individual, must satisfy his ignorance of the subject.

Of the future, Dr. Fairbanks suggested that as culture changes increase in rapidity, it is setting the stage for a revitalization of culture. As culture evolves it makes life more satisfying but creates many new problems. In times of crisis, religion, as well as many other things, is used as a unifying element.

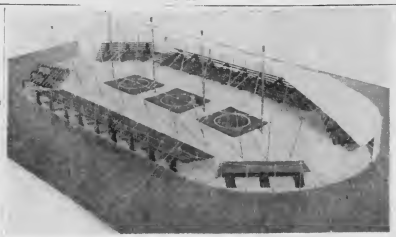
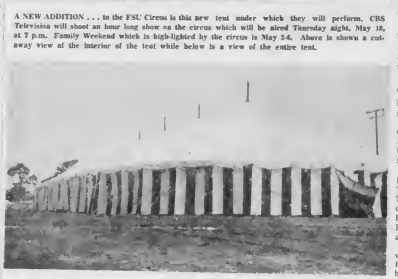
Bill In Senate May Broaden Chief Justice Qualifications

A bill to broaden the field of candidates for chief Justice of Honor Court was introduced into Student Senate Wednesday by Sen. Jack Eilertsen.



The bill will allow students who have served on Traffic Court as well as those who have served on Honor Court and University Court to run for chief justice.

Senate also discussed the resolution to change general education physical education courses from a graded system to a credit-non-credit (pass or fail) system.



Sen. Carl Kuttler, chairman of the committee for studying the proposal, stated that it was very difficult to reach a decision. The physical education professors feel that it would "de-emphasize" their courses, and stated that "grades measure achievement and serve as motivation."

However, some students seem to feel that they are influenced in their choice of classes by whether or not they think they can make a good grade in the particular subject.

On a credit-non-credit basis, they might be more likely to choose the subjects in which they are interested instead of those in which they are already proficient.

'Flambeau' Holds First Training Session Tues.

The first of four training sessions for prospective staff members for next year's Florida Flambeau will be Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. on the second floor of Longmire.

"Anyone interested in working on the paper in any capacity, as a reporter, feature writer, columnist or proofreader should attend these sessions," the editor for 1961-62 Ben Sharp announced.

"We are especially interested in recruiting freshmen and sophomores for the staff because they will have a longer length of time left to serve on the Flambeau," he added. "However, any student is welcome to attend these sessions," he concluded.

The first session will include introduction of the 1961-62 staff, organization, procedures and style of the Flambeau; and newspaper production and terminology. Joan Abbott, news editor for next year will teach the first session.

Flambeau Editor Deanna Morris will teach the second session, on basic feature writing and techniques of the interview, April 4.

Professor of advertising and communications, Dr. Sydney Kobre, former professor of journalism, will teach the third class, April 12 on newswriting.

A round-up session April 19 will be on where and how to get the news and will be taught by Miss Abbott.

"We believe that these sessions will serve as an introduction to basic journalism that new reporters will be able to build on and strengthen by practical experience working for the paper," said Sharp.

"Without a School of Journalism the school was transferred to Gainesville in 1960) the paper must depend on recruiting students earlier in their college career and training them for future editorial positions," he added.

Henry Hewes

Critic Discusses Needs Of Theater

If the Florida circuit of new plays, proposed by Broadway producer Eddie Dowling, is to succeed, the quality of acting must be first-class, said Henry Hewes, drama critic for The Saturday Review.

In discussion following his lecture on "What Is New in the Theater?" Thursday night, Hewes said the proposed circuit is an excellent idea.

But difficulty might be encountered in getting the standards of acting and producing high enough to make everyone enthusiastic about attending the productions, he added.

The main problem, he said, would be in persuading professional actors to leave New York City, which many consider to be the only place to give them the financial and professional prestige they need, to go on tour.

But, continued Hewes, if a series of works which are well-done can be created and which eventually will tour, the actors will ask to participate.

Dowling, in response to Hewes' comments said he felt "The play is the thing," that he would try to find the best plays and would do his best to bring good actors to the project.

PLAY COMPOSITE

Commenting on Assignament in Judea, Hewes said the play suffered by being a composite of many different tones instead of setting one tone and sticking to it.

Dowling said he agreed with Hewes' criticism but there was enough in the play to warrant its production as an experiment. He said he felt that the author, Patrick Welch, would be up to the job of working on the script.

In his lecture for the University Lecture Series, Hewes answered the question in the title by saying there is new form in the theater.

The form of a play is dictated by the type of stage available, the type of actors and the predisposition of the audience, said Hewes.

In his opinion the type of stage sets the picture for the audience which, from previous knowledge of the author's type of writing, the subject of the play, and the actor's abilities, expects certain things which have to be accounted for if the production does not fulfill the expectations and is to be a success.

The new forms really seem to be an attempt to bring more awareness of all life back into the theater and make it larger by being able to face realities without being able to add them up, concluded Hewes.

Tanner Warns Dormitories Of Theft Rise

Just prior to University holidays students should be especially careful to lock dormitory rooms because thefts on campus increase during pre-holiday periods, Security Officer William Tanner said yesterday.

"To protect your possessions at any time," Tanner stressed, it is a "good idea" to lock room doors.

Dormitory thefts haven't been greater than usual for this time of year with the possible exception of Magnolia Hall, he said, to the last two or three weeks Magnolia has reported five or six thefts amounting to a total of about $100, he added.

He said that the use of skeleton keys in Magnolia rather than small keys was not particularly relevant. Most thefts occure in rooms that are left open.

A special house meeting was called in Magnolia last week to warn the women residents about the thefts.

When thefts are reported the residence counselor fills out a form, one copy of which is turned over to the security officer.

Any disciplinary action that is taken goes through the dean of student welfare's office.

Tanner stressed that in any area a certain number of thefts can be expected. At Florida State University nearly 10,000 persons are involved in a small area.

AMONG THE NEW . . . facilities to be included in the planned swimming pool for FSU is this ten meter diving tower. This tower will improve the diving facilities here so that they match any in the nation.

FSU May Receive New University Pool

By GLENDA POWERS
Flambeau Staff Writer

By the end of next year Florida State University may have a swimming pool equivalent to any University pool in the nation, said Student Body President Carl Butler yesterday.

Charles M. Graves, a member of Graves Organization in Atlanta which specializes in designing recreational facilities, has submitted plans for a pool at FSU, and estimated the cost at around $700,000.

Features of the proposed Olympic pool will include a diving well with various diving boards and a divine tower, a deck area large enough for patio facilities, a dance patio, a heated deck area and heated water underwater lighting, overhead lighting, floodlights for athletic events and indirect lighting for social events.

In addition, there may be a wading pool for children of married students and faculty, an eating area, space for bleachers, a public address system, including underwater speakers, an underwater observation window, and other technical facilities.

The pool itself is to be 25 yards by 50 meters with the additional diving well. In size and appearance it will be identical with the Michigan State pool—considered one of the finest, if not the finest in the nation, according to Butler.

Financial aid both for the planning and building of the pool will probably come from a loan from fitness.

the Community Facilities Division of the Housing and Home Finance Agency, said Butler. Since February, President Kennedy has made such loans more easily available with lower interest rates.

Return payment by the University would be made up in part from admission fees, season tickets, group rental (for swimming and social purposes), dinner and dancing rental, food and concessions, lessons, professional aquatic shows and performers, and special events—primarily athletic.

Butler stressed the value the proposed pool would have for FSU. It would provide a recreational area for students, faculty, staff and families, excellent facilities for any type of swimming or diving meet, including Pan-American Games and Olympic meets; facilities for aquatic shows (both the Tarpon Club and professional).

The pool would also be a visual asset to the campus, providing additional amenities for the location of conferences and conventions at FSU stressed Butler. He also emphasized the availability of the pool for teaching safety techniques and stimulating physical

Writers To Talk On Poetry, Broadcast

Two authorities on different types of creative writing will be presented by the University Lecture Series on successive nights, April 10-11.

Paul Engle, director of the creative writing program at the University of Iowa, will speak on "Poetry and People" April 10 in Opperman Auditorium.

Rod Serling, television and motion picture writer whose current TV production is "The Twilight Zone," will speak on "Controversy in Broadcasting" April 11 in Westcott Auditorium.

Serling will be on campus for two days of conferences and talks, co-sponsored by the Speech Dept., according to Lecture Series Chairman Paul Stoakes.

He will appear before several college classes and at the University and Rueiger schools. A few hours on his schedule remain to be filled, Dr. Bernard Cooper, associate professor of speech, said.

Serling, 37, has received the Emmy (Academy of Television Arts and Sciences Award) for four years, the Sylvania Award twice, the Peabody Award and the Look TV award.

He is the author of Patterns, Stories From the Twilight Zone, and More Stories From the Twilight Zone. He received a bachelor's degree from Antioch College in 1950 after three years of Army paratroop duty in the Pacific during World War II. Since 1946 he has been writing for radio, television and motion pictures.

Engle, who has been writing poetry since he was in high school, won the Yale Series of Younger Poets prize in 1932 for a book of original poems, Worn Earth, submitted at Iowa as a master's thesis.

He was a Rhodes Scholar at Oxford in 1933-36 and has been a member of the University of Iowa faculty since 1937.

Besides many books of poetry he is author of a novel, a book of reminiscences and an opera libretto, and from 1954 to 1958 edited the O. Henry prize story annuals. He also edited Midland, from 25 years of writing workshops at Iowa.

Shades Of Mr. Thurber 'Walter Mitty' Arises

When the election smoke of the only two-party system within "greater FSU" cleared away last Tuesday, the "Walter Mitty" party of Alumni Village moved into power.

In the beginning there was only the Mitty party, which proposed a slate of opening up the needed nursery facilities, alleviation of parking problems, etc.

But the democratic-minded Village residents felt the only way to initiate Village politics was to start with the two-party system.

The "Insomnia" party posted its candidate list to keep the Mittyites honest.

BOTH WANTED SAME

Both parties wanted the same thing in the election held in the Village laundry, reported a Village representative. But the contest aroused the interest of Villagers, and that seems to have been the purpose of it all.

The Insomniacs lost, returning 42 per cent of votes cast, which were about half of the Village population.

Elected mayor was Don Wells; treasurer, Dennison Caustic; and clerk, Mrs. Georgeanne Osborne. Eighteen councilmen, one from each of the 18 housing units, were elected. (The Flambeau was unable to obtain their names at press time.) A student senator has not been elected, as yet.

April 8 Set As SS Deadline

No material will be accepted after April 8 for consideration in the spring issue of the Smoke Signals according to Editor Bill McLemore.

This is the last issue for the year and material to be submitted should be in prior to this date. A box has been placed at the information desk in Longmire Bldg. where students may submit jokes, poems, cartoons, or funny stories for this final issue of the magazine.

Anyone interested in submitting a candidate for Spring Feature Girl should also have their suggestions in prior to April 8, according to Clay Tomlinson, newly appointed editor for this section.

Greeks Honor Year's Leading Members

Highlight of Greek Week was the announcement of Terrie Jones as sorority woman of the year and of Bill Green as fraternity man of the year, and Greek Goddess Carol Harr at the Greek Week dance in Tully Gymnasium Saturday night.

Greek Week began Thursday night with a banquet in the Suwannee Room. Fraternities and sororities were represented at the banquet by their presidents, faculty advisors, housemothers and Panhellenic representatives or Greek Goddess candidates.

The Greek Goddess contest in Westcott Auditorium and the street dance in Westcott circle Friday were the other Greek Week functions.

Hank Ballard and the Midnighters played for the dance Saturday night in "ully Gymnasium.

TERRIE JONES

Miss Jones, a member of Alpha Xi Delta sorority, is a senior English major. At present she is interning at Elizabeth Cobb Junior High School where she teaches eighth grade English.

Last year Miss Jones received the Mortar Board award for having the highest scholastic average for junior women.

She is president of Garnet Key, treasurer of Mortar Board, and listed in Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities. She was also vice president of her sorority.

Miss Jones plans to teach junior high school English after graduation this June.

She said she was "really surprised" and "very thrilled and pleased" to receive the award.

BILL GREEN

President of the Inter Fraternity Council and of Pi Kappa Phi fraternity, Green is a senior. His major is hotel and restaurant management.

Green is presently a member of the Student Body President's Cabinet and has been president of his fraternity for 3 semesters. He was also pledge trainer and rush chairman for Pi Kappa Phi.

Green says of his award "It's one of the biggest honors I've ever received," and "I was surprised."

He has applied for a commission in the United States Navy after graduation in June. He hopes eventually to be in the hospitality business.

DANCING IN THE STREET . . . was the order of the evening Friday night, when the Ramblers supplied the music for the Greek Week Street dance.

Tryouts

Tryouts will continue at 7 tonight in Conradi Theater for INHERIT THE WIND, fourth University Theatre production of the season.

Based on the famous Scopes monkey trial, the play has a cast of 23 men and women. Director Richard Fallon held the first tryouts last night.

Unit Vote Controls Party

The unit vote method has become one of the latest devices employed by those who are trying to control the student party convention.

It is lamentable enough that there exists only one party on this campus, but when there exists within that party all powerful groups which control even its basic functioning, its policies and effectiveness, then it ceases to be a political party and becomes a pressure group.

SINCE THE PARTY has made no adequate provision within its own constitution for the selection of delegates, those responsible for doing so can choose any method they please. This enables dormitory and Greek presidents to select those delegates whose political views most coincide with their own. It enables them to unfairly stack delegations and to control the outcome of the convention— and they do.

This is where the unit vote hurts the party. The larger delegations definitely run the convention. By swinging all their votes to one candidate under the unit vote, such groups as the day student, men's dormitory and married student delegations control the nominations. For example, a six to five vote will turn all 11 votes in one of the men's dormitories to one candidate. In this is repeated with the other large delegations, then the sum total of other delegate votes are unequally represented.

THE STUDENT PARTY, for the benefit of all candidates, should first of all form a definite policy in the selection of delegates so that all candidates may be assured of a fair representation of political opinions. Then, since the party appears to sanction the unit vote, it should so weight the power of the smaller delegations so that they are not completely overruled in selecting a candidate.

Bigots Cast First Stones

Rutgers University is a scene of battle. Nobody has thrown rocks — yet, or at least not literally, but countless verbal missiles are being hurled at two coeds and the Dean of Douglass College, the women's college of Rutgers.

ONE ORGANIZED GROUP — one of those which bands together out of sentiment and has apparently nothing to do but eat, drink and throw dirt, has taken the fight to the President of the United States, the Governor of the state, a representative of the House un-American Activities committee and numberless clerical, political and educational figures.

The uproar ensued because the two students dared to write poetry for their campus literary magazine that others do not agree with the stag party set. The poem found most objectionable was a portrait of "a blindly prejudiced human being." The objectors demanded that not only the girls, the dean, and the women's college of Rutgers be investigated, but called for an investigation of the coeds!

OF ALL THE CURSES that appear to be springing up like weeds, the most obnoxious are those which seek to impose their own questionable tastes on freedom of expression in universities and colleges over the nation. No campus worth its name can operate when a fog of fear and timidity permeates every activity not backed with approval from every pious, main-streeter superintendent that comes chugging along all steamed up on the latest scoops from Readar's Digest. When the digesting stops and the reading starts, perhaps then, censors and would-be censors will have some idea of what they're shooting for.

The coeds of Rutgers university are unjustly attacked. They are veterans too, of one of the lousiest wars yet fought—the war against the birot who cries "bigotry" because he is blind to his own bigotry.

World In Review

A World Culture By 2000

By BILL TROTTS

"The only reason there is no world law is that there is no world culture," said Stuart Chase, prolific author, social scientist, and a man of practical experience in the field of social dynamics, in his book, Live and Let Live. The time is rapidly approaching when there will be world law because we will have developed a world culture.

Within twenty years we will have established a proto-type world government, which will achieve strength and vigor until it is established as the authority over all nations. This prediction is based on the geometric development of man through the 20th century with a projection of what is attainable and what is necessary for man's continued existence.

THE PRIMARY factors which determine that there will be a world organism are: rapid transportation and communication facilities; continuous wars; preparation for, and pressures from which have filled this century, and technical advances in weapons which have placed the use of warfare beyond the scope of political expedience.

Rapid transit is so recent in its complete acceptance and usage that the full effects of it are open to speculation. The one thing it demands of every educated person in the world is the awareness that there is no natural geographic boundary between people or nations. Other parts of the world are no longer foreign, they are neighbors in the truest sense of the word. Each traveler passing through another country exchanges a little of his cultural heritage for some of the culture that he is visiting.

THE WARS OF THE 20th century have served in many ways to pave the way for the end of war. Displacement of millions from their provincial homes forced them to recognize that there is much more to the world than they had imagined. Those who returned home did so with a new outlook on the world, and those who stayed elsewhere helped to dilute the culture where they settled.

Religious and ethnical differences were ill defined as the military became an organization fighting for its life had no time to maintain such boundaries. Facts and treaties between nations paved the way for future cooperation on a larger scale. Occupation and rebuilding in the defeated countries allowed millions more to meet and exchange their cultural patterns. The educational, architectural, culinary, spiritual and artistic habits of this nation alone have been definitely changed by the influx of ideas from other nations.

Wars have shown their trend to be more destructive and less decisive, thus making this political tool of little advantage to any nation. So many people and goods were destroyed within the last 50 years that there is a large and active revulsion against war of any kind.

THE ADVENT OF missile weapons, accompanied by nuclear city-busters, poison gas, and germ strategy, has placed our technical ability to destroy so far ahead of our mental powers to reason that most Americans will not even discuss the concept of nuclear warfare. The Polaris submarine and atomic submarine combination, along with the ICBM, have already brought us to a favorable position for discussing peace. With both the U.S. and the USSR facing annihilation in case of war, these nations have an excellent reason to find grounds for agreement. If they fail to take the initiative, the other nations of the world will bypass these "leaders" as if they were a pair of snarling dogs, and they will develop a world organization to control the nuclear powers.

The UN is now in an excellent position to be formed into the early stage of the world government. Since Khrushchev's foolish attacks on this organization, we find that those Americans who were attacking the UN themselves are now in approval of it, simply because the leader of Soviet Communism is opposed to it.

With solid American support, backed by the Latin American States, and cooperative efforts of the Afro-Asian countries, the UN will become a firm foundation for the world of one culture which will learn to settle its differences through law.

Reflections

We Like To Think Modern

By LESLIE POWELL

By and large, the readers of the Flambeau will fall into the group born from around 1935 until 1942. This makes us very modern, very up to date and free of the burdens that saddled young men and women when our Deans were still spanking, or so we like to think.

In 1830 there were people who felt that 60 matter how bad the situation was today, it would be much, much worse tomorrow. Witness this excerpt from a letter dated May, 1830: " . . . your letter . . . was with others, picked up on the plains near . . . Wagon Mound where eleven dead American bodies were found . . . mutters and Indian depredations are of daily occurrence . . . more terrible evils are in store for us . . . the times are terribly out of joint . . ."

AND EVEN IN 1942 the old abuse pot was a major weapon in the marital arsenal of the devoted husband: "My Dear Wife . . . Nothing here for me unless my dear wife is here to impart her many blessings . . . everything is covered with dust . . . the beds have not been swept since you left . . . the beds have not been made up . . . neither shall be . . . until you return home . . . your devoted husband . . ."

As ever, the male was caught between the call of the martial bugle and the marital beagle.

As usual, the guy caught in the crossfire tended to be a little bit wistful: " . . . has ordered the militia to assemble . . . on Tuesday the 24th inst., this call includes all from 16 to 18 years of age and from 40 to 50 . . . I will be fifty on the 16th of March . . ." Sadly enough, this letter was penned in February 22, 1803, only two days prior to the call-up date.

IN 1842 THERE weren't so terribly many divorces, but there were numerous widows. Each widow appeared to have a ready-made family, never much of an inducement to the single male. The one mentioned in this letter was willing enough until he saw the real object of his affections slipping away: " . . . they finally agreed to marry . . . but on mentioning to him that she wanted to have her property fixed so that the entire property secures to her children . . . he objected . . . I think this will break off the match . . ."

Mothers, even in 1863, were help to the idiosyncrasies of sons "My darling boy . . . quit reading those papers and read your bible . . ."

As you can see from the receipt below, you might have read an occasional paper between other activities: Paid Account . . . Savannah, Georgia . . . 1858 . . .

Let's Get Serious

Education Group Should Aid State

By GERRY DOBSON

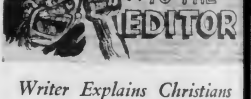
The Florida Education Association, which speaks for [illegible] teachers and administrators of this state, has just gone on record as pressing an 'education Marshall Plan' in which Florida will help pay for public education in the 'underdeveloped' states of our Union.

This seems strange when one considers that this same FEA is also complaining of a lack of funds to support education here in Florida. It is unreasonable for the organization to claim that we can't pay for the type of educational system we should have in Florida, and then attempt to support Georgia's.

HOW DID ALL this come about? The FEA has endorsed federal aid to education. Since Florida is among the top half of the nation with the ability to pay, we will get back, not withstanding "service charges" for letting the Federal government handle our money, less from such a program than we would pay in taxes to support it.

The fact that we will lose money in the exchange is really beside the point. The main issues involved are that Federal dabbling in public education is far more than the Warren Court unconstitutional, and that Federal aid invariably leads to Federal regulation.

EVEN THE MAN who should know, the Chairman of the House Committee which handles such proposals, the dapper weeping Cave Jamison (the reverse of Jim Crowism), Adam Clayton Powell of Harlem, concedes this. For he says he won't introduce legislation to prohibit Federal aid to segregated schools if President Kennedy will promise to abandon the nasty word discriminate against segregated schools in the Republican Party of federal aid. If Kennedy can no discriminate it is [illegible] tainount to Federal [illegible] despite claims to the contrary for the power to grant or hold funds is the power to coerce and regulate.



To put it another way, Powell has his way, the money we will get from Federal programs will be [illegible] our integrated schools as you know how many of we have. A couple of [illegible] tary and one junior school in Dade County, at University of Florida. The for prospect however, is likely.

IF WE OF FLORIDA both lose money and regulation a degree of control of public education, why does organization such as the FEA back Federal aid? It's simple.

Money. Federal [illegible] teachers' salaries will be the pay of Florida's teachers and therefore bypass [illegible] regard a governor and legislature which seems reluctant to meet the FEA's salary demands. The FEA this is willing to support measures which are manifestly against the desires of the people of the state, if to do so is to help bury its enemy a little deeper in the public trench.

Another stand of this [illegible] is brought to mind—support to resist reform in teaching. The esteemed Association wants all teachers to receive the same salary, which is obviously, some teachers are more deserving of increases than others. This stand is not contained either to bring outstanding teachers down to the level of the mediocre, or to provide financial incentive for those already teaching.

In short, the FEA, which is not to be primarily interested in the improvement of the schools, but rather, seems more interested in the financial welfare of the "average" FEA member.

Writer Explains Christians

TO THE EDITOR:

I would like to comment on a recent article that was printed March 21, 1961 (Flambeau), "Can Peace Corps Be Christian?" Mr. Trotts obviously has a gross misunderstanding of the fact concerning Christianity and the Christian's mission.

In a purely empirical sense there is room to support the view that Christianity has no more virtues than Buddhism or other forms of organized religion. When Mr. Trotts says that Buddhism seeks the "truth," it leads us to ask, "What do all religions seeking truth?"

IT IS TRUE that there have been many gross injustices performed under the guise of Christianity, but we must never lose sight of the fact that there are pure and true Christians that are seeking to promote the dissemination of man to God . . . that is if you believe in God. Of course, there are those around us who become agnostic through so called "intellectual understandings," which is really an outward manifestation of vanity.

In not the prove of life claim in the pagan countries! It is the aim of Communism completely antithesical to everything we value as Christians.

THERE'S A CAN'T help but be dismayed at the complete ignorance shown when the author makes such broad generalizations to include the whole United States Christians! What a lie! Graham's career and over the said we have promoted a [illegible] tion of pseudo Christians [illegible] th truth there are very few [illegible] fessing the faith! Mr. Trotts needs to make clear just what he means by Christian.

I would like to include another comment by quoting a statement from the article . . . "Any Christian who meets these qualifications, they should also be eligible." (for peace corps)

I would like to say that there aren't any "Christians" that don't have these qualifications.

Student Elections Should Clear Up Misconceptions

By MYGNON CHAMPION

It's all over now.

The deluge of campaign materials is almost gone with hardly a trace remaining of the mass of posters, handbills and letters which covered the campus.

The Ken van Assenderp-Duncan Moore race for vice president provided the phenomena of the year—even of several years. No one had dared to predict anything but a very close election, and the prognosticators had given the edge to Moore. Nevertheless, van Assenderp, for the first time in many years, upset a Student Party nominee for a top position.

This obviously proves that the party nomination does not guarantee election. The students seemed to have been exhibiting their independence of the party, but not their opposition to it.

ANOTHER STUDENT Party nominee also lost. Barbara Syfrett, candidate for Board of Publications, was edged out by a mere six votes. Close elections are far from unusual on this campus. More than one candidate has lost or won by a single vote.

This year's elections also provided valuable data for educated speculation as to the importance of posters. I say "speculation" because the multiplicity of factors involved makes it impossible to accurately measure the importance of any single consideration.

Even a casual observer was aware that van Assenderp had far fewer posters than his opponent. This indicates that the importance of posters has been over-emphasized and that restrictions on the number of posters a candidate may place in eating establishments would not be a handicap.

THESE ELECTIONS also provided valuable data for educated speculation as to the importance of posters. I say "speculation" because the multiplicity of factors involved makes it impossible to accurately measure the importance of any single consideration.

Even a casual observer was aware that van Assenderp had far fewer posters than his opponent. This indicates that the importance of posters has been over-emphasized and that restrictions on the number of posters a candidate may place in eating establishments would not be a handicap.

THESE ELECTIONS also provided valuable data for educated speculation as to the inaccuracy of that generalization uttered by some students that "Greeks will always vote for another Greek against an Independent." These elections clearly showed that this is not the case.

A candidate who does not belong to a sorority or fraternity may lack the amount of highly-active campaign manpower that his opponent automatically possesses, however, in at least two campaigns this year, many "Greeks" were most actively helping "Independent" candidates. No clearer evidence could be given to prove the unity of this campus. Candidates are judged on the basis of their individual qualities and capabilities rather than on the irrelevant issue of their membership or lack of membership in a fraternal organization.

FINALLY, WE MIGHT pursue the question of how much influence the Student Party nomination has upon the outcome of elections. As already pointed out, two Party nominees were defeated this year, but this is the exception rather than the rule.

Why do Student Party nominees so often win? Are they elected because they are the nominees or are they nominees because they are the stronger candidates?

It seems to be a combination of both. Some students vote a straight Student Party ticket; other students refuse to vote for any party nominee. Usually students use their own judgment and vote for the party nominee because he is the nominee ONLY because he is not familiar with the candidates. This would indicate that, in a close election, the party nomination can be the decisive factor but otherwise is not greatly important.

LOOKING AT THE other side of the coin, a strong case can be made for the argument that the stronger candidates win the nomination and, thus, are inclined to win the election.

For one thing, the same individuals who have experience upon the Student Party Convention also exercise influence upon students. The students look to Student Government officers for recommendations as to whom they should support. Many of these officers are selected because they are the nominees or are they nominees because they are the strongest candidates?

THESE SAME OFFICERS also influence the convention delegates. Some students speak with delegates urging their support for a particular candidate.

Ironically, van Assenderp was a case in point for the theory that the Party Convention serves as a sounding-board for student opinion. Although he lost the nomination to Moore, he gathered a majority of votes from both sorority and fraternity delegates and from dormitory delegates. Moore made up the deficit and won the nomination by gaining all the married students votes and a majority of the huge day students vote. Thus, van Assenderp had a majority of votes from those delegates representing areas of relatively heavy voter turnout. Few married students vote, and day students vote in small proportion to their number of convention delegates.

It might be concluded that van Assendery's loss of the nomination resulted from a functional disorder in the apparatus for measuring the amount and velocity of voter opinion.

Phi Kappa Psi Frat Will Colonize At FSU

The first Florida chapter of Phi Kappa Psi, national social fraternity, will colonize at Florida State University this fall.

The Phi Psis have chapters located at various schools in the South including Duke, Vanderbilt, Mississippi, and Washington and Lee National there are 66 chapters of Phi Kappa Psi at colleges and universities throughout the United States.

According to IFC advisor Hal Smith, the colonization of a chapter at FSU is part of Phi Psi's national policy of expansion whereby chapters are established at prominent schools in the South.

Having active alumni groups throughout Florida, the Phi Psis have shown an interest in FSU for several years. Phi Psi National President Webb Mize of Gulfport, Miss., and Dave Coles of Atlanta, Ga., recently visited with the Inter Fraternity Council of FSU to discuss its establishment on this campus.

Phi Psi alum groups are significant in that the name Phi Kappa Psi is no stranger to Florida. Prominent Phi Psis in Florida include State Treasurer Ed Larson and former FSU Dean of Men Louis D. Corson.

Phi Kappa Psi was founded in 1852 at Jefferson College in Cannonsburg, Pa., and ranks favorably in size with those national fraternities already in existence on this campus. The Phi Psis stress scholarship, as do most fraternities, and will actively stress scholarship from the onset of this new colony at FSU.

The Star and Crescent Club was organized for the purpose of assisting the local active chapter and alumni association. It is similar to other clubs connected with Kappa Sig chapters throughout the country.

The girls assist with rush parties and sponsor projects within the fraternity to raise money for the fraternity.

Presently the Club is designing a pin for their organization.

Officers of the Club are Mrs. Evelyn Cunningham, president; Linda Haynes, vice president; Kathy Twerdochlib, treasurer; Karen Moore, secretary; and Edith Hanson, publicity chairman.

Student Senate Committee Investigates Church Key

By BONNIE PERRY
Flambeau Feature Editor

The only social club recognized by Florida State University is presently being investigated by the Student Senate Organization Committee, much to the ire of the Church Key club.

Since its establishment here in 1958 (the original organization began at the University of Florida, and is now extinct), Church Key has received stockers and raised eyebrows because of its name and its symbol, a beer-can opener.

"We have never condoned drinking," pointed out David Steel, past vice president. "and we have tried to follow campus rules. All our functions (mixed parties) have been approved, and we've never had any trouble," Steel said.

ORGANIZATION COMMITTEE

According to The Statesman (March) official publication of Student Senate, the Organization Committee, "a subcommittee under the Attorney General . . . investigates organizations on campus, tries to find out their purpose and what they are doing. This committee can recommend that Senate disband an organization if it is not fulfilling its purpose."

According to the Church Key Constitution, the club's purpose is "a. to promote fellowship among members of common and dissimilar interests, b. to recognize certain qualities of leadership and achievement in social and campus affairs, and c. to advance the ideal and prestige of the Florida State man."

The Constitution also states that membership is for "people who have achieved recognition, yet should be recognized further," stated Steel.

"LITTLE AMBIGUOUS"

Steel said he felt the club's constitution is a "little ambiguous," in referring to the "Florida State man."

"How do you define an FSU man?" Steel questioned.

Steel continued explaining that Church Key felt the Organization Committee was not exactly unbiased in its investigation.

"The investigation is being carried out on a more personal basis instead of representing the student body," he said.

The gold beer-can opener symbol is not worn by members any more, Steel pointed out. But the club still hasn't decided what its new symbol will be.

NOT BE REAPPROVED

Church Key has contemplated changing its name, but if this were done the organization would have to be re-approved by Student Senate. And because of the investigation, Steel said he didn't think the club would be reapproved, as membership would not have changed.

Church Key meets monthly in the ROTC Lounge with their sponsor, Major Gross of Air Force ROTC. The club also gets together three times a month for dinner at a local restaurant.

Church Key holds rush parties, but has no pledges as full membership is obtained at invitational acceptance.

Genders Wins National Diving Crown

FROM FSU:

NCAA 1 METER DIVING CHAMP CURT GENDERS!

CURT BROUGHT HOME FSU'S 1ST NATIONAL CHAMPIONSHIP FOR THE SWIMMING TEAM... ASSURING HIM HIS 3RD YEAR AS AN ALL AMERICAN!!

COACH BIM STULTS WAS ELECTED PRESIDENT OF COLLEGE SWIMMING COACHES OF AMERICA.!

the FSU TEAM OF GENDERS, THOMPSON AND HILES TOOK FSU TO AN 11TH PLACE FINISH OUT OF THE 56 COMPETING SCHOOLS.

National One Meter Diving Champ, Curt Genders

Buck Hiles Places Sixth

Curt Genders, Florida State's phenominal All-American diver, won the National Collegiate low-board diving championship last Friday night in Seattle, Washington.

The Sarasota lad, performing before a full house at the University of Washington pool, conquered, among others, two members of the United States Olympic team of 1960. These were Southern California's U. S. Olympic platform diving champion Gary Tobias, and Michigan's Olympic three-meter diving champion, Bob Webster. Also entered in the 38 annual National Collegiate Athletic Association championships were five other of the nation's top divers.

Genders took top honors with the points he made on his last dive, a back one-and-a-half somersault with a one-and-a-half twist. Up until this final dive Genders had led all the way through the preliminary and semi-final competitions. His performance was almost the picture of perfection according to observers.

Over the past three years the diving championships have been won by an Ohio State tanker. Genders ended the reign this year by replacing the Buckeyes' Sam Bull, the 1960 champion. Genders also has the distinction of becoming the first southerner to capture the coveted crown since 1932 when Skippy Browning of Texas won it.

Once again senior Buck Hiles made the All-American swimming team as he placed 10 in the 200-yard butterfly event. His time was 2:07.3, a new school record for Florida State.

The Seminoles' third entry in the meet was Tallahassee's Paul Thompson, a junior. Competing in his first NCAA championship meet, Thompson placed thirteenth in the 220-yard freestyle finals. Thompson also established a new school mark with a time of 2:06.8.

In Saturday's competition Hiles' erased another FSU mark when he swam to a 53.4 timing in the 100-yard butterfly event. This time was fast enough to earn him sixth place in the event.

Thompson placed 13 in the 440-yard freestyle against the stiff opposition.

Competing in the three meter diving championship Genders came out in the sixth spot.

It is inevitable that Genders will take All-American honors for his third straight year in his varsity career, and Hiles and Thompson are also likely to get All-American honors.

Genders may also get the nod to attend the National AAU Meet at New Haven, Conn this week said Stults when he returned from the trip to be greeted by about 100 Seminole rooters at the airport. He added that classes may prevent the diving star from entering the competition, however.

While describing the efforts of the three FSU contestants, words such as "thrilling, just wonderful, and one of the finest I've seen in 30 years of watching," flowed from the head mentor's lips.

Bim Stults Elected President Of National Coaches Assn.

Coach Bim Stults was elected president of the National Collegiate Coaches Association which is an organization for college swimming coaches over the weekend.

The association is made up of coaches who have coached college swimming for at least two years, and membership is subject to the group's approval of the group.

Stults' official duties will consist of representing the college coaches at the more important meets, representing the coaches at the semi-annual meetings in Fort Lauderdale, and appointing committees.

Before the election Rear Admiral Thomas Hamilton, head of the West Coast Conference, spoke to the convention. After the banquet he was elected to the office at a business meeting.

Stults replaces Charlie MacCaffree of Michigan State who was the former president.

Smith Wins Sole Singles Match

Florida Ends Tribe Skein; FSU Plays Amherst Today

The Florida Gators put an end to the Seminole netters winning streak Saturday as they downed the Tribe with a misleading score of 7-2. The Seminoles, fresh from two victories over Annapolis, went three sets in six out of the nine matches. They were successful, however, in only one singles match and one doubles match. Gordy Smith playing at the third position trimmed Hay 4-6, 6-4, 6-3. The number three doubles team of McClain and Jamieson remain undefeated as they edged Lorman and Shaya 3-6, 6-3, 6-4.

Rebel Bellamy, the top man for the Seminoles was handed his first defeat of the season by nationally ranked Shaffer 6-4, 1-6, 6-4. Paul Scarpa at the number two position was defeated by regionally ranked Tym 6-1,6-4. Fasula and McClain both went three sets before losing to Surloff and Cullinane respectively with scores of 2-6, 6-3, 7-5; and 3-6, 6-4, 6-3. Jamieson at the number six position lost to Curry 6-0, 6-1.

In the doubles competition the team of Shaffer and Tym gave the team of Bellamy and Smith their first defeat of the season 6-4, 6-4. The number two team of Fasula and Scarpa was defeated by Hay and Surloff 6-2, 8-6.

Coach Danny Holcomb says, "I was very proud of the boys and their splendid effort and I sincerely believe that they will take the return match in Gainesville."

Prior to the Saturday match, the Seminoles defeated the Middies of Annapolis in Jacksonville in two matches with the scores of

GORDY SMITH

8-1, and 7-2. Bellamy sparked the Semnoles as he defeated Fox and Moore 6-1, and 6-4, 6-3, 6-2, respectively. Scarpa split his matches as he defeated Moore 6-4, 6-0, and lost to Fox 8-6, 6-8, 6-3. Fasula in the number three spot did likewise as he defeated Flegel 6-2, 8-6, and lost to Whitaker in a tight match 6-4, 1-6, 6-4. Smith sporting only one loss this season defeated Whitaker 6-4, 6-2 and likewise to Fleugel 6-2, 6-1. Buddy McClain in the number five position also split matches losing to Laster 0-6, 6-4, 6-3; and defeating Karabasz 6-3, 6-4, 6-3, and Laster 6-4, 4-6, 6-4. The Tribe won all of their doubles matches in the Annapolis competition.

The Seminoles play the netters of Amherst here today in a match to be held at 1:30. Tomorrow the Tribe takes on East Carolina here also at 1:30.

The official scorer for the Seminole netters is Rose Anne Messina, former Florida girls champion and also a nationally ranked singles competitor. She is presently a member of the Racquettes Tennis Club here at FSU.

The Seminoles still have thirteen matches to play this season. They are as follows: Amherst, East Carolina, Florida Southern, Louisiana State, Rollins, Miami, Auburn, Alabama, Mississippi State, Miami, Mississippi State, Rollins.

The Freshman squad composed of Steve Latz, Bill Saunders, Les Simon, Ben Cole, Bob Oliver and Mike Dyer will meet the squads from several of the area junior colleges as well as the Freshmen who travel here with their varsity squads. The Freshmen have not been too fortunate with wins this season posting only four singles wins and two doubles wins. However, according to Coach Holcomb they have shown a great deal of improvement and are shaping up real well.

The Seminole varsity has defeated the following teams this year: Georgia (twice), Georgia Tech, Auburn, Southern Illinois University, and Annapolis (twice).

A Memorable Trip

Florida State University's superlative swimming and diving trio splashed out a record in the National Collegiate Athletic Association's annual swimming meet which was the appropriate climax to the drama of broken records which has been the 1961 swimming season.

The giant to Seattle, Washington, reaped a post-full of honors by trio of Curt Genders, Buck Hiles, and Paul Thompson. Genders, the short, well-muscled, blond diving wonder that has ever come out lower than the top, became the first FSU diver to become a national champion. This was the first Florida athlete to become a national champion in any sport since the days of gymnastics ion h halthial seaso.

The trip was a memorable one for the Seminole representatives. "It was an Sinclair Experience," says Coach Bim Stults. "It was a super style Atlanta and we didn't know whether we would be able to get down there or not. It took us an hour to land and we caught our plane to Chicago in time. It was a matter of minutes."

The rest of the trip was nice. We arrived in Seattle at 6:30 in the time and the manager of the University of Washington's swimming team met us and drove us back to the campus. The Washington campus is beautiful according to the small, Seminole member, it is built on one of the many hills that are in Seattle. On one side of the campus are the Cascade Mountains and on the other side are the Olympic mountains.

The entire campus faces on Lake Washington, a huge body of water for the famous crew races which have been held there for years.

"The weather rain when we got there," Stults remembers. "It had been raining 72 out of the last 80 days. They don't get as much as we do as far as quantity is concerned but they get it over. It drizzles all the time."

As soon as the team got in the dorm, the Seminoles hit their beds and been a long trip for the swimmers who had left Sunday morning after arriving in Tallahassee following the Florida Intercollegiate meet in Gainesville the night before.

Routine Starts Early

The next morning the routine began early. The swimmers were up to student union and went to the University of Washington to begin practice.

The routine of practice in the morning, break, practice in the afternoon, break, and great amusement most of the time and the team got in many successive hours in the pool.

"The labor began to pay off Thursday night when Genders pulled his best in the one meter diving competition and tied in the finals of that event.

"That gave him a tremendous psychological edge," commented Coach Stults. "Taking first place in the preliminaries was a great advantage. It made the other fellows have to try to beat him."

Then the time came for the actual competition on Friday and Saturday, the heat was on regardless of psychological advantages. The Florida State swimmers were taking on the best in the country and they knew it.

The competition particularly had the pressure on because he was leading the pack which included the Olympic three meter spring board champion, Gary Tobian. But the senior diving specialist did not let the glamour of big name competitors faze him. Neither did his teammates.

The boys performed tremendously," commented their coach, "Every time they swam, they swam faster than they had at any time in their lives. They broke a school record every time they went into the pool. It was a terrific thing to do at the right time."

Stults spoke in exclamations when describing the diving event which pushed Florida State a national champion.

"Genders just thrilling," Stults murmured. "It's one of the finest jobs that I have ever watched in 30 years of watching."

He was doubly proud because diving official Bill Moriarity had the honor of presenting the diving medals, which were won by the winners on the three step stand which is character- istic of the Olympic Games.

Each Proud Of All

"I don't want to emphasize Curt too much," says Stults, "because the boys did a terrific job."

But was tremendous, true, but so were Buck and Paul. Buck and the two six places on sheer determination. He just stayed with it and fought for a place."

"We don't have a three meter board. The only opportunity Curt had to practice was the two days at the Georgia AAU meet. He was concentrating on the three meter board until after the low went on Friday. So all the practice time he actually had was Friday night and Saturday morning.

Officially, the boy who won the three-meter event who is the Florida State is originally from Hollywood. Fla. Before going to the native school, Lou Vitercci came up and practiced with the Miami swim squad.

Curt is still a strong possibility that Genders will be going Tokyo, Conn. to the AAU national swimming championships. Nothing has not been confirmed yet.

Gymkana Beats Georgia Southern In Match

The Florida State Gymkana team defeated the Eagles of Georgia Southern in a developmental match Saturday.

The Gymkana squad garnered 5 of all events and most of the first and third positions. They led the squad as he posted 28 in free calisthenics, side horse and still rings.

Steve Edwards placed first in the side-climbing event, and third in the still rings competition. Ray Bryder, freshman, placed first on the high bars, second in free calisthenics, and third on the side horse.

Steve Stone, new to the Gymkana squad, placed second in side horse and parallel bars. Veteran Ryder placed first in vaulting and tumbling with Joe Greene placing second in both events. Gary Ryder placed in the still rings, parallel and rope climbing competitions.

Seminole Nine Hosts Invitational Tourney

By BILL VERIGAN
Asst. Sports Editor

The Florida State baseball team, carrying a 5-2 record after splitting a two-game series on the road against the Navy, runs Easter holiday when it meets headlong into a game-packed Duke, Western Michigan, North Carolina, and Florida in its annual Invitational tourney.

Yesterday the tribe played host in the first contest of a four-game series that runs through Friday. Florida State meets North Carolina on the Tarheels' first opponent of the tournament Saturday. The Seminoles entertain their bitter cross-state rivals, the Florida Gators, on Monday. A double-header follows on Tuesday with FSU coming up against the Gators again and Western Michigan. The last game for the tribe before a two-day breath is a repeat with the Western Michigan nine.

Florida State will be the first Blue Devil opponent of the 1961 season. The Blue Devils were rained out in the tough Atlantic Coast Conference last year and have relieve lettermen from last year's team which garnered a 13-8 record. The series between the two teams now stands at 8-4 in favor of Duke.

Entering the tourney on Friday against the Seminoles will be the North Carolina nine which is defending District 5 champion. The Tar Heels, one of the most highly regarded teams in the South, lost much of their outfield and their outstanding battery combined of pitcher Wayne King and catcher Bruce Crump. The Tar Heels still have ten lettermen from their Atlantic Coast Conference championship team last season. The UNC is tied with FSU in their series 1-1.

Western Michigan has played in four NCAA World Series since 1947, the latest time in 1958 when they were considered the fifth best team in the nation. The only contests between the two schools were in 1958 and the series is currently deadlocked at 1-1.

Florida, an entrant in the regional playoff in the 1960 NCAA tourney at Gastonia, N.C., was the Eastern Division Champion in the Southeastern Conference last year. The Gators lead the series with FSU 8-4.

Returnees for the U of F include Dale Landress at second, Lynn Hawie, Norbert Lash, Bonnie Hoskins, and Bill Saba. Veteran pitchers include Dennis Aust, Rickey Smith, C. W. Price, and Bobby Shiver. Jerry Nicholson, a leading moundsman in 1960, is also back after missing last season.

The rugged competition which is on lap is shown by the national ratings with Duke in the number 10 position, North Carolina holding down the 11 spot, and Florida State ranked 13.

The Seminoles split a two-game stand with the Middies Friday and Saturday by winning the first game 8-3 and losing the second game 6-3. Trailing 8-0, Florida State roared from behind with a six-run seventh inning and pushed across the winning run in the top of the ninth.

In the second contest the Midshipmen, backed by four-hit pitching, secured all of their runs in the first four innings to triumph over the Seminoles.

Golfers Go To Houston

The Florida State University golf team is at Houston Texas to compete in the American Amateur Invitational Intercollegiate Tournament.

The American Amateur Invitational Intercollegiate Tournament is the top team golf competition in the United States. A group of select experts pick the top golf teams in the nation and then invite them to compete in the tournament.

To be chosen for this competition is a great honor alone, and to win it is the greatest honor a team can bring back to its school in golf. The closing of the Seminole golf team indicates that it is one of the top rated teams in the nation.

The competition is scored in six different ways. It will be in both match and medal play and will be scored in individual play, twosomes and team scoring. With this system of scoring every man on the team has to be good in order for the team to win.

The players who will be competing at Houston this week are Frank Malara, Downing Gray, Dickie Dunlap and either Ron Fralick or Semming Nordlee. Of these players Coach Odneal said, "We are having quite a battle between Frank Malara and Downing Gray for first place on the team as both boys are showing sub-par golf, but all the boys can potentially shoot sub-par golf."

Some of the teams that the Florida State team will be competing with are Houston, Florida, Southern Methodist, and other big name teams. Houston and Florida were both at the Florida Intercollegiate Tournament and both placed above the Seminoles. This is no indication, however, as to the tournament at Houston, as is a different type of scoring to be used.

The Seminole golf team won two matches against the Naval Academy and Jacksonville University. They defeated the Naval Academy 11-7 and Jacksonville University 14-4.

In medal play on Saturday the Florida State golf team took first place with a score of 671 points. The teams that were defeated were the Naval Academy, Jacksonville Navy, Yale, Jacksonville University and Miami.

The season record so far this year for the Seminole golf team is 7 wins and one loss in dual competition. Also the golf team placed fourth in the Florida Intercollegiate Tournament at Ocala and first at Jacksonville.

The last three dual meets for the golf team will be held in Tallahassee against Augustana College, the University of Florida, and Florida Southern.

Tracksters Upset Alabama, Place Sixth In Fla. Relays

The cindermen of Florida State University upset the University of Alabama's Crimson Tide with a score of 71½-59½ in their second dual meet of the season last Thursday in Tallahassee.

This unexpected victory over the Alabamans, who finished well ahead of the Seminoles in the Coliseum and Memphis Indoor Relays earlier this season, brought the FSU dual meet record to eight straight consecutive wins since last losing to Louisiana State in 1958. The trifle members were well satisfied with the outcome of the meet.

Competition between the two teams was close. FSU and Alabama each won seven first places and tied for first in the pole vault. The Seminoles, however, managed both first and second finishes in the 100 and 220-yard dashes and the high jump, piling them a 12 point lead which carried them to victory.

The outstanding event of the meet was the mile relay in which the Seminole squad, composed of Bill Davis, Bobby Jones, Craig Johnson, and Quentin Till, clicked in a winning time of 3:17.5, the fastest ever on the FSU track.

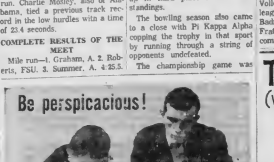
Phi Delts Win Grid Title; Pikes Cop Bowling Crown



The flag football season came to a close two weeks ago with Phi Delta Theta coming out on top in this important sport in the race for the intramural crown.

The Phi Delts won the championship by defeating Kappa Alpha in the final game by a score of 20-12. Sigma Chi ended up in third place in the final standings.

The bowling season also came to a close with Pi Kappa Alpha copping the trophy in that sport by running through a string of opponents undefeated.

The championship game was played by the Pikes against the Theta 'Chis'. Don Nelson and Ron Stockton led Pi Kappa Alpha in their undefeated season and also rounded the two game high for the season by bowling a 450 set against Phi Delta Theta.

The PE Majors also added a few cups of their own. They won doubles play in the Dorm-Independent League and also won the Volleyball crown in the same league. Phi Delta Theta won the Badminton singles play in the Fraternity League with the KAs coming in second.

Sorority Day will be held today prior to the DUB-FSU baseball game on Seminole Field at 2:45 p.m.

If the contest is successful it will become an annual event according to Seminole baseball coach Danny Litwhiler.

Trophies will be presented to the winners of contest. The event will include a distance throw, an accuracy throw, and a race around the bases.

Later in the baseball season there will be a student participation day for fraternities with activities similar to those of the sororities'.

Coach Litwhiler has expressed hopes that the contest will be as popular as it was two years ago when it was held after the first time. He also noted that spectators, as well as participants, are invited to attend the event.

"The Big S&H Green Stamp Station That's Over a Block Long!"

Y'ALL KNOW THIS ALREADY . . . but some people out in Hollywood never have learned that Southern girls "can talk as fast as anybody in the wide, wide world," according to Dr. Claude M. Wise. Former head of the Speech Department at LSU and now visiting professor of speech at Florida State University, Dr. Wise says he fears the famous Southern drawl, which is more musical but not necessarily slower than other American speech generally, is on the way out. FSU graduate student Evelyn Gatley trys out her accent on the tape recorder and on Dr. Wise.

The Southern Accent Is Vanishing Says Dr. Wise

The drawl and Southern accent as a whole are disappearing from the American scene, said Dr. Claude M. Wise, a linguist who headed the Speech Dept. at Louisiana State University before his retirement.

Dr. Wise, a visiting professor of speech at FSU, said that when he went to LSU in 1928, there were only six or eight students in an average sized class who did not speak with a Southern accent, sometimes including the drawl so famous in Dixie.

When he retired from LSU in 1958, just the opposite was true: there were only half a dozen with Southern accents and perhaps one drawl in an entire classroom.

Dr. Wise, who had adopted the Southern pronunciation in his classroom teaching, dropped it for the prevailing general kind of speech when the character of his classes changed.

"Since I've been in Tallahassee," the midwesterner said, "I have not heard one radio announcer with a Southern accent."

SHIFTING POPULATION

"The shifting of population which brings many different speech patterns to Southern towns and the fact that many young people spend apart of their lives with people from other sections of the country have helped produce this change in Southern speech, said Dr. Wise.

Another strong influence, he said, has been radio and television, which tend to make for a nationwide conformity in speech.

Dr. Wise, a former president of the Speech Association of America, is an authority on linguistics in America

The Southern drawl is not necessarily slower than other speech, he said. "Motion picture directors have often required particularly ridiculous renditions of Southern speech in films by slowing the rate down unreasonably," he said.

"Southern speech is not slower than general American speech and probably not as slow as rural Eastern or dialectical mountain speech," he added.

"In fact, I've found that the Southern girl can talk as fast as anybody in the wide, wide world. But she introduces extra sounds, with a melodious up and down swing to her speech These are the two characteristics of the Southern drawl," he concluded.

IN HONG KONG

Prior to coming to FSU in February, Dr. Wise spent a year with the State Department in Hong Kong, as a Smith-Mundt lecturer. As part of his assignment he set up a program of teaching English ac a foreign language to Chinese refugees in Hong Kong.

He found a great need for the language. Hong Kong, although a British Crown Colony with English as its second language for a century, had been flooded with refugees from Red China who knew little or no English. They were eager for learning, according to Dr. Wise, and needed the language for most occupations as well as for any degree of higher education.

In the four "refugee colleges" where Dr. Wise taught in Hong Kong, he set up a program for aural-oral teaching. He also set up 10-booth laboratories with recording devices for each college.

Dr. Wise speaks German, has done research on the Hawaiian language, studied Mandarin Chinese before he went to Hong Kong and while there learned the phonology of the Cantonese dialect in order to understand the language problems of those he taught.

He is a native of Missouri and holds the A.M. degree from the University of Chicago and a Ph.D. from the University of Wisconsin.

Former editor of Quarterly Journal of Speech, he served on the general editorial advisory committee of five Thorndike-Barnhart dictionaries.

Dr. Beidler, who was selected Bowditch Lecturer by the American Physiological Society in 1960, will give Sigma Xi addresses from Montana, through the Dakotas to Missouri on the subject of the biophysical approach to taste. His first lecture was at Montana State University yesterday.

In his lecture, Dr. Beidler will discuss the way scientists can "tap in" on the electrical messages transmitted from the nerves to the brain in response to chemicals applied to the tongue.

Dr. Beidler has been on the FSU faculty since 1950.

On Campus with Max Shulman

(Author of "I Was a Teen-age Dwarf", "The Many Loves of Dobie Gillis", etc.)

BOOM!

Today, foregoing levity, let us turn our keen young minds to the No. 1 problem facing American colleges today: the population explosion. Only last week I received a letter from Cleveland, Ohio—one of them while carrying a plate of soup. In case you're thinking such a thing couldn't happen anywhere but in Cleveland, let me tell you there were also two other cases last week—a 45 year old man in Provo, Utah, and a 19 year old girl in Bangor, Maine—and in addition there was a near-miss in Klamath Falls, Oregon—an eight year old boy who was saved only by the quick thinking of his cat Walter who pushed the phone off the hook with his muzzle and dialled the department of weights and measures. (It would perhaps have made more sense for Walter to dial the fire department, but one can hardly expect a cat to summon a fire engine which is followed by a Dalmatian, can one?)

Science will ultimately solve the problem!

I bring up the population explosion not to alarm you, for I feel certain that science will ultimately solve the problem. After all, has not science in recent years brought us such marvels as the transistor, the computer, the bevatron, and the Marlboro filter? Only a man of science was the discoverer of the Marlboro filter! Oh, what a heart-rending epic of endless trial and error, of dedication and perseverance! And, in the end, what a triumph it was when the Marlboro scientists after years of testing and discarding one filter material after another—iron, nickel, lead, tin, antimony, sponge cake—finally emerged, tired but happy, from their laboratory, carrying in their hands the perfect filter cigarette! What rejoicing there was that day! Indeed, what rejoicing there still is whenever we light a Marlboro and settle back and enjoy that full flavor and easy draw which come to us in soft pack or flip-top box at tobacco counters in all fifty states and Cleveland!

Yes, science will ultimately solve the problems rising out of the population explosion, but in the meantime the problems hang heavy over America's colleges. This year will bring history's greatest rush of high school grades. Where will we find classrooms and teachers for this gigantic new influx?

Well sir, some say the answer is to adopt the trimester system. This system, now in use at many colleges, eliminates summer vacations, has three semesters per annum instead of two, and compresses a four year course into three years.

This is good, but is it good enough? Even under the trimester system the student has occasional days off. Moreover his nights are utterly wasted in sleeping. Is this the kind of all-out attack that is indicted?

I say no. I say desperate problems call for desperate remedies. I say that partial measures will not solve this crisis. I say we must do no less than go to school every single day of the year. But that is not all. I say we must go to school 24 hours of every day!

The benefits of such a program are, of course, obvious. First of all, the classroom shortage will immediately disappear because all the dormitories can be converted into classrooms. Second, the teacher shortage will immediately disappear because all the night watchmen can be put to work teaching calculus and Middle English poetry. And finally, overcrowding will immediately disappear because everyone will quit school.

Any further questions?

Yes, one further question: Have you tried Marlboro's newest partner in pleasure—the unfiltered, king-size Philip Morris Commander? If not, by all means come aboard. You'll be glad you did.

'J.B.', Not Broadway Play Say Fallon, Lawton, Ice

By GEORGIANA FRY
Flambeau Staff Writer

If you thought you saw an authentic Broadway production on Westcott stage last week, you were misled, when you attended Archibold MacLeish's play, J. B. Actually, the verse drama several times removed from Broadway productions. Many elements were missed an omission in the week's performances which caused the play to fall short of stories the thought that "God" is the verse drama, was "Dead" this Himself. He too is struck won't burn. The wit soul amo doers." That is, Dr. Lawton commented, knowledge is not all sent, life is something more.

The productions fell short technically, philosophically, and artistically, according to three panelists, Richard Fallon, assistant professor of speech; Dr. Robert Lawton, associate dean of the College of Arts and Sciences and associate professor of English, and Dr. Jackson Ice, assistant professor of philosophy and religion.

Sponsored by the Faculty Christian Fellowship, the panel discussed Monday and Tuesday night's performances of J. B. The play's theme is built on the Biblical story of Job's suffering. Dr. Griffith Pugh, professor of English, moderated.

All three panelists felt MacLeish's play was "superb." Limited to last week's shows, criticism included omission of lines from the original production, interpretations that are not gestrated from the play, and lack of philosophical discussion.

TECHNICALLY

Technically, Fallon, who recently directed Assignment in Judea, felt the production was "shockingly bad." The actors "had no concept of the grandeur of the play."

They apparently had the attitude they were playing to a "back audience." a feeling which frequently abounds with professionals, he said.

The term "professional" doesn't mean anything in quality, he explained. These professionals last week were just "mouthing what they said." There was "no honesty on the stage Tuesday night" the night Fallon saw the performance.

The play, as written, is not one of physical movement, but a play of the mind instead. Fallon said because of the actors' attitude to-

Some of Sarah's lines were transferred to J.B. in Monday and Tuesday nights' performance particularly at the ending, when left Dr. Lawton "confused."

He commented that MacLeish has not always been sure of ending himself. Dr. Lawton felt that he was saying, when he comes through at the end the answer, woman is the answer and answer for eternal life.

The J.B. performers received only one curtain call following their show from the "back" audience. Another Artist Series programist, Marcel Marceau, will be here a few months ago won a standing ovation for his performance

Kerouac To Plato, Elephants To Trains

By MARY ELLEN HARRIS
Assistant Feature Editor

A paunchy gentleman shambled onto the stage with a few books under his arm and scowled at the sudden roar of applause. With a cough and a penetrating gaze at the audience, he opened his books and began to speak.

Thus Charles Laughton, crafty old dmaster of the art and magic o fthe performance, addressed the audience assembled in Westcott Auditorium Wednesday night.

His program, beginning with two anecdotes about trains, covered such diverse subjects as rabbits, elephants, cathedral windows, religious experiments, the Salvation Army and fish.

He sampled authors from Thomas Wolfe and Jack Kerouac to Shakespeare and Plato. He leapt from the Bible to George Bernard Shaw to Lincoln. He thundered, wept, argued, convinced, and wheedled.

IN SPITE OF COLD

In spite of a cold and slight nervousness resulting from his first public reading appearance in eight years, Laughton delighted the audience with true stories stemming from personal experience as well as with selected readings.

The British-born actor spoke of his first appearance in Tallahassee in 11 years by stating, "I never forgotten Tallahassee. I adore it."

Laughton added whimsey to imagination when he told of Chester and the "pole-vaulting bass" and of the little boy who killed the elephants.

"There's a very fine line between telling a story and telling a lie," Laughton philosophized.

PERSONAL LIFE

The star of stage, screen and television struck an informal note with the audience as he spoke of his personal life, his wife, Elsa Lancaster, and his long experience in show business.

Laughton's performances include that of Captain Bligh in Mutiny on the Bounty, Henry VIII, and Ruggles in Ruggles of Red Gap. The latter he claims as his favorite role. His latest performance was in the movie Spartacus.

Backstage, Laughton chatted the autograph seekers and I is curious with his combination of r wamthhad he warmth and fecalcitrant little boy.

One question remains unanswered, however. When asked how he selected his readings, he smiled and replied, "My dear, I haven't the faintest idea."

On 'Pig Party' Action Taken By FSU IFC

Inter-Fraternity Council has sent a three part recommendation to the dean of men's office concerning the Phi Delta Theta "Pig Party" held more than a month ago.

The first suggestion is that letters of apology for the party be sent to the FSU administration and to the Panhellenic Association.

The Council censured the social fraternity for having such a party as the second part of the move.

The final clause recommended that Phi Delta Theta be prohibited from holding any organized social functions for more than eight or 10 couples, until June 4, with the exceptions of the Family Weekend and the weekend of April 29 which is Phi Delt Weekend.

IFC president Bill Green stated that one of the reasons for not putting the group on social probation was that, "To my knowledge, a majority of the chapter [illegible] vote in this party."

Green also said that, "to my knowledge, no other fraternities have held "pig parties.

Students may begin obtaining tickets Monday for the National Ballet of Canada, returning April 19-20 for its third engagement at Florida State University.

Tickets to the Artist Series production will go on sale April 17 to the general public for $3.50 each.

New Self-Study Started: To Involve Entire Campus

By PATSY GUTHRIE
Flambeau Staff Writer

The second comprehensive self-study of FSU's existence, now getting underway, will involve every member of the faculty and professional staff and possibly every student within the next year, according to Dr. Hugh Stickler, director of institutional research and service.

A steering committee has been appointed by President Gordon Blackwell and is meeting weekly. Department and agency studies are to be activated next week.

The following week, studies of about 18 areas, such as admissions, curriculum, physical plant, and budget and finance, will be undertaken by committees appointed by the steering committee.

A study of student life and activities will begin simultaneously with the appointment of a student-faculty committee, Dr. Stickler said.

STUDENTS QUESTIONED

Dr. Stickler remarked that, while the committee would determine its own procedure, an earlier study had set the precedent of administering a questionnaire to the entire student body.

The questionnaire, containing 235 items asking student opinion about campus facilities, services, programs and regulations, required two hours to be administered.

The most immediate impetus for the study is the Board of Control requirement that all state universities participate in a role and scope project. They must submit reports by May, 1962. Dr. Blackwell told the faculty and professional staff at a special meeting last week.

A new accreditation policy of the Southern Assn. of Colleges and Secondary Schools will also necessitate a comprehensive self study for FSU within the next two years, Dr. Blackwell explained.

However, he emphasized that, in spite of the changes in FSU since the initial self study of the early 1950's, there are internal as well as external compulsions for the present study.

The president encouraged the use of "vision and imagination" in carrying out the study, pointing out that "the Role and Scope Project will undoubtedly set the direction for this institution for some time to come."

Dr. Stickler said the project is to provide a master plan to guide the development of the state university system through 1975.

It is viewed as "an initial effort in cooperative system-wide planning," since each university will make proposals for its own development in cooperation with two other state universities and the Board of Control.

The Board of Control will then consider all such proposals "in the light of appraisals of existing and emerging needs" and define the role and scope of each institution in such a way that the state university system will be able to serve the needs for university-level instruction, research and service with the maximum efficiency that is consistent with high quality."

Dr. Blackwell stressed that FSU's self study is an opportunity to "think through our mission and state it clearly and boldly."

"We will look objectively at all parts of our operation to see how we can organize and function more effectively; we will seek to leave old ruts and to try new paths," he said.

The president concluded, "We will face up squarely to the necessity for greater utilization of our physical facilities, for teaching more students with fewer competent faculty and yet doing it even more successfully, for streamlining the curriculum which tends to accumulate sundry additional courses."

Members of the steering committee of FSU's self study were selected to represent every major area.

Dean of Faculties Werner Baum, Dr. Homer Black, accounting; Dr. Dwight Burton, education; Vice President M. S. Carothers, Dr. Helen Cure, food and nutrition, Robert Clapp, assistant dean, Library School; Dr. Harry Day, assistant dean of students.

Dr. Sidney Fox, director, Oceanographic Institute; Dr. John Griffin, director of University Relations; Dr. Dorothy Hayes, social welfare; Dr. Wiley Housewright, music education; Dr. Marian Irish, chairman, Government Dept.; Dr. Thomas R. Lewis, assistant dean, Graduate School.

Dr. Wayne C. Minnick, speech; Dr. J. Paul Reynolds, dean, College of Arts and Sciences; Orwin Rush, Director of Libraries; Agnes Salisbury, nursing; and Business Manager R. S. Shaw. Dr. Stickler is chairman of the steering committee.

Sit-In Demonstrators Are Ordered To Appear Monday

The five convicted sit-in demonstrators whose appeal was denied by the U.S. Supreme Court have been instructed to appear at 9 a.m. Monday before the Tallahassee Chief of Police.

Circuit Judge Ben Willis gave the four white men and one Negro 10 days to pay $200 fines or start serving 60-day jail terms.

Attorney Tobias Simon, American Civil Liberties Union representative who has defended the group since their arrest March 12, last year, advised them by mail to appear Monday, one of the five said.

Of the four who were students at Florida State University when they joined Negro students in protesting lunch counter segregation at Woolworth's last March, only two, Derek Lawler and Roy Eves, are still enrolled.

Robert Armstrong left school to work in New York City but recently returned to Florida, where his family lives. Jeff Poland is now a student at San Jose State College in California, after being expelled from FSU at the end of the fall semester.

A fifth FSU student, Steve Poe, was also convicted in Tallahassee City Court last May but paid his fine last summer.

The Negro involved, Henry K. Steele, was a Florida A & M student and is the son of the Rev. C. K. Steele, local integration leader.

The Leon County Circuit Court upheld municipal court convictions of disorderly conduct and the Florida Supreme Court denied an appeal.

After the U. S. Supreme Court last month refused to review the case, Simon said the only recourse left is a petition for a writ of habeas corpus to the U. S. District Court in Jacksonville if the demonstrators choose jail.

Poland was reported returning voluntarily from California to serve his sentence. He could only be compelled to return through extradition procedures.

The March 20 Spartan Daily, published by San Jose State College, said Poland plans to conduct a hunger strike in the Tallahassee jail while serving his time.

Artist's Work Shown In Boston

A retrospective exhibit of the works of Karl Zerbe of the Florida State University Art Dept. will open today in the Boston University Art Gallery and the exhibit will run through May 4.

More than 60 works by the distinguished German-born painter, representative of his work over a 30-year period, will be in the exhibit, which will be the premiere of a nationwide tour of Zerbe paintings organized by the American Federation of Arts under a Ford Foundation grant.

The exhibit will be shown in the University Art Gallery in 1962.

Nucleus of the exhibit will be 44 pieces selected by H. W. Janson, chairman of New York University's Fine Arts Dept. Fifteen works from the Norlyst Gallery in New York, along with several loaned from collections in the Boston area, will be in the Boston exhibit.

RECORDS RESPONSE

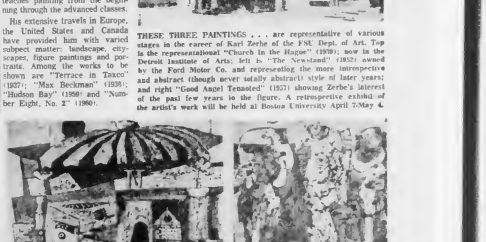
"The present show, said Janson, "records the response of a distinguished artist of a basically European sensibility to the physical and cultural scene of the New World." Zerbe has experimented with various media and examples of his work will include paintings in Duco, a cellulose laquer; encaustic, the ancient technique of painting with wax; polymer tempera; arylic, a synthetic resin; and the more traditional media of oils and gouache.

Born in Berlin Sept. 16, 1903, Zerbe spent most of his childhood in Paris where his father was an engineer. Shortly before World War I the family returned to Germany, where Karl was educated at the Technische Hochschule in Friedberg. Later he studied at the Munich Academy.

He was 19 when Wilhelm Lude of the Goltz Gallery gave him his first one-man show, and in 1923 he won a traveling fellowship that enabled him to visit Italy. His work was exhibited throughout Germany and was acquired by leading cultural institutions such as the National Gallery of Berlin.

GALLERY OF MUSIC

In 1930 the Goltz Gallery of Munich arranged to introduce his work to America in an exhibition at the Marie Sterner Gallery in New York. Zerbe himself arrived in New York Jan. 4, 1934. That same year the Nazi government labeled his work subversive and degenerate and it was removed from the museums.



In the United States, where he became an American citizen in 1939, Zerbe taught for the Fine Arts Guild of Cambridge from 1935 to 1937 and from 1937 to 1954 was head of the painting department of the Boston Museum of Fine Arts School.

Since that time he has been at Florida State University where he teaches painting from the beginning through the advanced classes.

His extensive travels in Europe, the United States and Canada have provided him with varied subject matter: landscape, city-scapes, figure paintings and portraits. Among the works to be shown are "Terrace in Taxco" (1937); "Max Beckman" (1938); "Hudson Bay" (1958) and "Number Eight, No. 2" (1960).

THESE THREE PAINTINGS . . . are representative of various stages in the career of Karl Zerbe of the FSU Dept. of Art. Top is the representational "Church in the Hague" (1939); now in the Detroit Institute of Arts; left is "The Newsstand" (1952) owned by the Ford Motor Co. and representing the more introspective and abstract (though never totally abstract) style of later years; and right "Good Angel Tenacted" (1957) showing Zerbe's interest of the past few years to the figure. A retrospective exhibit of the artist's work will be held at Boston University April 7-May 4.

Aimless Groups Take Note

Attorney General Roy Mathis opened fire on a do-nothing organization in a letter to Student Senate asking for removal of the Florida Church Key Society from the list of organizations approved by Student Government.

MATHIS CONTENDS that the aims of this society are incongruent with the regulations of the university, which bans drinking at university sponsored functions, and that Student Government leaders are being "two-faced" in sanctioning the organization.

Drinking seems to be the chief aim of the group—from all outward appearances.

Members of the society, which was formed during the early morning hours of the 1958 Homecoming weekend according to the November 14,1958, issue of the Flambeau, are asked to wear a beer can opener on a ribbon around their necks.

ORIGINAL AIMS of that group were to have beer parties twice a month and to hold separate meetings which "are going to be held in a socially conducive atmosphere," according to a founding member, Gerry Gordon.

In a late Flambeau issue, Don Reedy, Secretary of the group, stressed that he "wanted to get away from the idea that all we do is drink beer and have beer blasts" and said that the society planned to sponsor a constructive project. He also said the society would purchase a page in the Tally Ho and select a Church Key Sweetheart.

TO DATE, the constructive project has yet to materialize and the year-book page is the sole testimonial to the value of the organization.

The stated main purpose of the Church Key Society is to further the aims of the "Florida State Man" and they refer to themselves as the "elite" of the campus. However, the criteria for determining the "elite" is rather nebulous since no grade average is required. Members usually have "contributed something to the campus" but what they have contributed remains unstated.

So the organization stands as a group without a real purpose or contribution which gives the outward appearance of being little more than a drinking club.

IN THIS DAY and age, only the most narrow minded would attempt to level a group of college men for sipping a beer upon occasion. The practice of sipping a bubbling brew in a socially conducive atmosphere is a popular one among college men. But this is no sign that the university must have on its list of sanctioned organizations a group which seems to honor those who have demonstrated unusual ability at this pasttime.

Mathis has undertaken a commendable task in attempting to weed out organizations which perform no real function, save election of officers and occupation of space in the annual. Other groups without a purpose would do well to fear for their spot on the Student Government roll.

Others are as eligible for weeding out as Church Key.

Course Insults Students

Florida high school students will be spoon-fed patriotism if a bill introduced into the Florida Legislature becomes law.

The bill states that the course would "provide adequate instruction in the history, doctorines, objectives and techniques of communism . . ."

The course will "install in the minds of the students a greater appreciation of democratic processes, freedom under law, emphasis upon the dangers of Communism, the ways to fight Communism, the evils of Communism, the fallacies of Communism, and the false doctrines of Communism."

FLORIDA STUDENTS VITALLY need a course on Communism to familiarize them with the basic philosophy and operation of a doctrine which is religiously followed by half of the world's population. But it is an insult to the intelligence and reasoning ability of the American student to suggest that they need a course which amounts to little more than a pile of propaganda in order to become better Americans.

America was built with the idea that citizens should be freely educated with facts and allowed to come to their own conclusions based on these facts. Americans severly criticize Communists and charge that the Reds indoctrinate their peoples by telling them only facts that they wish them to learn and by pumping them full of slogans.

Yet, here in Twentieth century America, good Americans feel that it is necessary to pump their fellow Americans full of slogans of Americanism and facts telling only of the bright side of American life in order to preserve their loyalty to their native land.

AMERICA HAS NOT reached the stage where it must choke its people with propaganda and the number of thinking students who will vehemently protest the establishment of such a course will testify to this.

America has been trying to follow the Communist pattern by pepping up their educational system to cater to the more gifted students. But it is going too far when Americans have to establish the same sort of propaganda courses that they throughly criticize.

When these indoctrination courses are needed, the cause of Americanism is lost.

Disjointed Charles Laughton Makes Horse Sense

By LESLIE POWELL

Charles Laughtoo regaled his Westcott audience Wednesday night with humorous jokes and personal anecdotes before be went into bis readings. On rabbits, Laughton quoted a British verse that began: "A rabbit has a charming face, but his private life is a disgrace." On horses: "I know two things about a horse and one of them is rather coarse."

With this two-way view of horse watchers, Laughton went into readings dealing with the old, old social horses: power, poverty, politics, love, sex (a difference seldom distinguished at FSU) honor and religion.

While the collection of jokes, anecdotes and readings were, on the surface, disjointed aod rambling, they were strung together by a master craftsman like so many beads of assorted size and color on a thread of reason, or, if you will, truth.

Laughton's first reading, taken from the writings of Thomas Wolfe, demonstrated the actor's ability to capture an audience without benefit of background noise or backdrops. Reading of trains crossing the vast American landscape, Laughton made his voice become the rhythm of train wheels churning faster, faster, swooping past the listener in a rush, leaving the sensation that the landscapes described were flashing past left and right. I would not have been surprised to have heard a distant train whistle beyond the hushed auditorium.

From Jack Kerouac's Dharma Bubs, Laughton read a simple, beautiful, descriptive passage as spiritual and as moving as you might wish. Io a few short pages he destroyed the myth that "beatniks" can write only in gross styles heavy with the forbidden fruit of those standard Anglo-Saxon words never found in reference books.

Using Marc Anthony's funeral oration, Laughton brought Shakespeare alive for his audience and made that greatly dehated playwrite as timely as politics in Tallahassee. The idea of a "gospel of hate" skillfully fed to the emotions of the street mob by a shrewd political agitator is never dated. And it is one of the 'moral' questions seldom questioned.

Touching aoother social nerva with his reading from Shaw's Major Barbara, Laughton scored again with his presentation of the view that "it is cheap work to save a man with a Bible in one hand and bread in the other," especially when salvation can be easily undone with the stroke of a pen making dollar signs.

Laughton added interest to the program by reminiscing about his friends in o[...] fields: sculptors, painters, [...] acadamicians.

Non-Violent Demonstrators Make Peaceful Protests

By BILL TROTTS

With violence and war news filling the publications today, it is refreshing to see that there are still a few people in the world who wish to express themselves peacefully. A recent incident of non-violent demonstrations occurred at Holy Loch, Scotiand when three Scots successfully boarded the American atomic submarine Patrick Henry. They attempted no sabotage and did not resist apprehension by the crew members of the submarine. Their mission was to protest the use of nuclear devices in war.

The boarding of a military vessel which is maintaining a wartime security is, at best, risky business, and these men might have forfeited their lives for their action. But the wonderful thing is that they did not suffer personal injury beyond a charge of breaching the peace. Certainly if such an incident occurred on a similar ship of the Soviet Communists there would not be this consideration for the rights of the individual. Io fact, such a venture would be tantamount to suicide. The comparison of power bloc reaction to demonstrators is noteworthy and I wish to compare a few historic incidents before drawing conclusions.

NON - VIOLENT demonstrations are relatively modern in man's history. Although the life of Jesus Christ is an excellent point of reference for non-violent action, we have to view the mid-20th century before we see a successful movement based on purely non-violent ideals. The leadership of Mahatma Gandhi was notably successful in preaching, practicing and estahlishing non-violence as a useful method of social creativity.

The fact that India became an independent republic in 1950 is largely due to the tenacity of this one man and his millions of followers. If he had chosen to use force the immediate result would probably have been the same. LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Senate Investigates PE Grading System

TO THE EDITOR:

A resolution has gone through Senate requesting an investitioo of possible methods of grading PE courses other than the present system uses. The intent is to find if it would be more satisfactory to have a system wherein one's over all grade average would not be affected by the PE grades. The resolution is now in committee under discussion. This proposal will involve a major change in the scholastic and PE programs, and will affect you, either directly or indirectly. Please read carefully and consider the arguments, for in the very near future Senate will act to: (1) recommend modification of the present PE grading system, (2) recommend non-modification of the system, (3) recommend further investigation io the matter.

THE SYSTEM now used is to grade PE courses as other courses, and to figure that grade in with a students' academic average.

One alternative would be to offer letter grades, as in other courses, but not figure them in when calculating an over all average.

Another alternative would be to give no letter grades, but to give only credit or no credit — this would not affect one's over all average.

AGAINST THE present system, the arguments are that by affecting one's average the system encourages students to take PE courses in which they are already proficient. The PE department replies to this by saying that their instructors grade on improvemeot. Another argument voiced against the preseot system is that this is an academic institution, not a sports center. The PE dept., replies that sports are part of our national beritage. A third argument against the system is that people who are not physically inclined are discrimminated against by the present system. The PE dept. replies that we are not all gifted equally in any respect.

ARGUMENTS against the change are that, without the motivatioo of grades, students will not participate wholeheartedly. Proponents of the resolutioo reply that at St. Petersburg Junior College, the credit-non-credit system has worked with a positive result.

Written Communications Courses Called Faulty

TO THE EDITOR:

The recent article in the Flambeaa covering the written communications courses here do not touch on the most important problem.

My conclusion is that most of the objections students raise against these courses do not hold water. But the real problem is rarely voiced by the students, and even then only by the more intelligeot ones. These courses are faulty, it would seem, not in the way the given materials and procedures are taught, but in the decidedly sterile choice implied by such limited materials and procedures. An enrichmeot of the program is badly needed, several people have told me; and I agree.

The introduction of novels, plays, poems, and short stories, perbaps by means of some good anthology such as other colleges use, would satisfy this need. This literature would supply the freshmeo with something to think about, subjects for appreciation, essays, interesting class discussions, and some acquaintance with our literary heritage.

Some of us feel that too great a stress on functionalism has brought about the present easy arrangement. Students do not need to know merely how to write intelligently, or merely an acquaintance with fine literature; they need both. How the powers that be expected a stool to be able to stand oo one leg is a mute (sic) question. If students do not get a good dose of writing and literature in their first year, most of the mmay never get it.

Oh, how we looked forward to those few times that the teacher discussed with us those pitifully few short stories. We knew that we weren't getting mucb at all, but we did need what we could get. English seemed to mean something theo, and it did mean something. Yes, we learned to write after a fashion, too, but what else did we learn? Next to nothing. And with all that time on our hands! No wonder so few students are inspired to major in English here.

Artist Ducats Vanish Early

TO THE EDITOR:

I wish to protest the manner in which tickets to the Artists' Series preseotations are distributed prior to the alleged sale date. I, and two of my student friends, independently attempted to get tickets a week or two preceding the later announced date of sale to 'J. B.' We were told by the various people oo duty at Westcott that none would be sold ahead of time, so we may discount the possibility that the mysteriously vanished seats went to students obtaining them early. On the announced date of sale, Friday 10, (March), I arrived at Westcott at 2:30, the ticket office then having been open only two and a half hours since it had closed that day between the hours of 11:30-2:30. I was informed by the woman io charge that the entire center section up and past the middle of the auditorium, was gone for the two nights with the exception of a few seats on the first and second rows. When I expressed my surprise that this phenomenon had occurred in less than three hours on a University Holiday when many of the student body had gone home, she told me, not very nicely, that all had been sold that morning. Since nine o'clock.

I do not mind competing with anyone, University connected or not, for seats on a first-come, first-served basis. However, the obviously unfair practice of removing blocks of seats ahead of time for non-students at a series which we are naively led to believe, is hrought here for the students' benefit, I do protest most strongly, and I thiok something should be done about it.

At the sale date for the next production, I intend to be at Westcott before the opening hour, and there is going to be a fair amount of trouble generated if anyone attempts to tell me that the best seats io the house are already gone.

Faculty Reader Says 'We Need Trotts'

TO THE EDITOR:

I wish to thank Bill Trotts for his recent column on world law. Although there are many obvious problems to its accomplishments, his column might help some students and others to think a bit into the future about these things.

I have been pleased with Bill Trotts' columns, not that I have always agreed with him! (We might, for instance, get into quite a discussion on what constitutes a "world culture" and how much of a world culture must or could precede the establishment of some measure of real world law.)

I AM GLAD too that his columns have evoked replies. Io such ao exchange between Trotts and his respondents the vast majority of the student body which is "in-between" might be aroused to raise question and seek answers for themselves as to the validity of the ideas and problems that are being aired. A refreshing aspect of Trotts' columns is his effort to consider these subjects without letting the Communist position precondition his point of view. FSU's South Florida AAU Wrestling Champions

FSU Wrestling Group Stages Upset In AAU

A "pick-up team" of wrestlers from Florida State University traveled on their own account to Fort Lauderdale and won the South Florida AAU Wrestling championship two weeks ago. The meet attracted defending Champion University of Miami, and Brevard Junior College, the Seminole Wrestling club and a number of athletic teams from around the state.

Twelve FSU men decided to compete in the meet, so they gathered some makeshift uniforms, pooled their money for gas expenses and took off for Lauderdale. They slept on the floor, on the mats in the gym, anywhere they could find accomodations.

Three gold medals were won by the Florida State team Travis Clavelle won the 123 lb. class, Erroll Greene won the 127 lb. class and Bud Berringer tipped the 167 lb. division. Trad Munroe won a silver medal in the 157 lb. class and five FSU men took third place awards. These were: Fred Billman, Randy Truesdale, John Hennigson, Pat Seymour and Bob Nellums. The rest of the team was comprised of Pat Seymour. Scott Bunn, Harry Baker and Rich Adams.

"Great team spirit and team unity made the big difference," said Budd Berringer, the organizer of the group. "The crowds were very warm and appreciated the sportsmanship and spirit shown by our team."

"I hope this will give wrestling a shot in the arm here at FSU. Wrestling is the fastest growing sport in the United States with wrestling teams popping up on high school and college campuses all over the country," Berringer continued.

"Fraternity wrestling here is very strong but there seems to be a lack of interest in the dorm-independent circles."

Baseballers Meet Georgia Southern With 12-4 Mark

Staging a strong showing against some of the toughest baseball competition in the country, including Duke, North Carolina, Florida, and Western Michigan, in the Florida State Invitational Tournament with seven wins and two losses, the Semunoles now sport an outstanding 12-4 record.

This Saturday the tribe baseballers meet the Georgia Southern nine in the lair of the Southern team. The long-term rivalry with Georgia Southern now stands at 17-3 in favor of FSU. Last year's contests resulted in a split with Florida State gaining a 12-5 decision in the first game while bowing in the second to the tune of 10-9.

The first Florida State victim of the tourney was Duke which was downed four games in a row by the Seminoles. Strong hitting and clutch pitching when the heat was on powered the tribe past the Blue Devils.

North Carolina, last year's district three NCAA champion, fell next to the red-hot Seminoles as they easily steamed by 10-1.

The only two setbacks of the tourney came against Florida and Western Michigan. The Seminoles split against these teams by losing the first meetings while winning the second games against each team. The Western Michigan Broncos went to the NCAA College Baseball World Series in Omaha, Nebraska in 1959.

This was the last year the two teams met and it was ironic that the winning pitcher, Bill Ortlieb, for Western Michigan had pitched a no-hitter against the Seminoles then but lost it 2-0. In his 10-2 win this year he was smashed for 10 hits.

Florida State's first game against the cross-state rival Gators resulted in a tight 3-2 loss to the Gainesville nine as the Seminoles smashed for 13 hits but were unable to score. FSU mound ace, Frank Davis, was easing along with a four-hit shutout when the Gators finally woke up in the ninth inning and scored three times.

After absorbing the loss to the Gators, the tribe came roaring back to whip them 8-5 on Monday afternoon. The Seminoles have won three of the last four games with the Gators but Florida still has an edge in the series 8-5. Jim Daniel went the route for FSU and yielded 10 hits, walked two, and fanned six. Florida State took the lead in the fourth inning with six runs. Buddy Teague was one of the key factors in the win with three hits out of three times up.

The last game of the tournament pitted Florida State against Western Michigan with the Seminoles getting revenge for the previous loss. The Broncos fell behind in the first inning 5-2 and was never behind again. Winning hurler for FSU was Ray McShane.

Two of the most spectacular moments of the tourney came from grand slam homers off the bats of Jimmy White and George Ferguson. White's bases-loaded homer came against North Carolina and Ferguson's was at the hands of Western Michigan.

Leading hitters for Florida State include Neil Martin who has a .673 average and leads in nuber of hits with 22. He is followed by Jack Dull who is hitting at a .357 clip. Dull has garnered 16 runs batted in, 17 runs, 5 total bases, and four home3 runs. Doug Walker is the third best hitter with a .45 averagte and three triplets.

Top FSU hurlers include Ray McShane (3-1), Jim Daniel (3-1), and Frank Davis (2-1). These starters are followed by Frank Echols (2-0), Jack Ross (1-0), and Jerry Turner (1-1).

Tracksters Stretch Skein, Seek LSU Win

The Seminole track tribe ventures to Baton Rouge, Louisiana, to complete in a dual meet with Louisiana State University Saturday. Last year the Seminoles bagged the Tigers, who had been unbeaten in dual meet competition since 1932 when Texas A&M did the trick, with a score of 77½-58½.

Coach Mike Long feels that this meet will be the toughest of the season since LSU will offer heavy competition in all events and will be after the Seminoles' Scalps. So far the tribe has been able to meet the challenges presented to them. This meet will require the Seminoles to be at their top-notch best.

The tribe's greatest strength will be evident in the middle distances, the high jump, the shot put, the discus, and the broad jump. The 440 yard relay team should also prove to be strong.

Tribesmen to watch are Don Ostergaard in the shot put, Quinton Till in the 440 yard run, Steve Long in the high jump, Herb Kraft in the broad jump, Bill Clark in the discus, and Terry Long in the low hurdles.

ROTC Rifle Team Competes In Annual All-Florida Match

The Army ROTC Rifle Team from FSU will journey to Gainesville to participate in the Fourth Annual All-Florida Rifle Meet.

This meet sponsored by the Scabbard and Blade of the University of Florida will take place Saturday at the U of F rifle range.

The teams that will be competing are: Stetson, Miami, Florida Southern, Florida and FSU.

Captain Harry Sutton, sponsor for the FSU team said "It will be the biggest college rifle meet in the state with all of the major colleges participating."

Members of the FSU team who will participate are: Charles Corbin; captain, Charles W. Wynn; David Dennis; George Woodruff; Tom Fraser; Carlton Rowell; Chip Magee and James Phifer.

EXPERIMENTAL BAKING LABORATORY . . . in the Baking Science and Management program. At the far end, the 18 bun-pan oven opens into the baker tory. The entire laboratory is air conditioned for accurate temperature control and provides separate benches and complete equipment for each of 12 students working at one time.

Dough Rises And Ovens Heat In The Baking Program

By BONNIE PERRY
Flambeau Feature Editor

The only one of its kind in the world is Florida State University's program of Baking Science and Management.

The program's four-year curriculum offers specialization in two areas: baking science and practical bakery production and operations, or in sales management.

All students in the program, however, are required to take courses from each area while specializing.

Besides program requirements, students meet School of Business requirements (Baking Science and Management is in the School of Business), and University requirements for a bachelor of science degree. But in general education, students take nine hours of chemistry, three extra hours of mathematics and replace general Biology with Bacteriology.

A DECADE AGO

A decade ago baking industry leaders began wondering who would take their places. The industry had become so automatized and mechanized that it took a great deal longer for someone to learn "from the ground up," explained Dr. F. G. Bayfield, program director.

"Problems have to be ironed out by two kinds of people now: the engineer and the chemist," said Dr. Bayfield.

So the industry interviewed institutions to see of they would be interested in training the people the industry needed. President Doak Campbell gave his approval for a department of Baking Science and Management to be organized at FSU.

RAPIDLY CHANGING INDUSTRY

Since the program began here in 1951, the rapidly changing baking industry has begged for graduates. Enrollment ranges from about 40 to 70 per semester, and graduates about a dozen annually.

"If I had 50 graduates I could place them tomorrow," stated Dr Bayfield

In the last several years, according to Dr. Bayfield, the program has begun a graduate program of study, and there are presently two working on master's degrees.

In support of the school the baking industry has spent approximately $27,000 annually in the form of scholarships, loans and research funds over the past ten years.

Advanced students and graduates experiment on a small scale to solve industry problems. One research project experimented with bread that could be re-molded after several years and would taste as it did shortly after it was first baked.

Other research projects in progress or recently completed in the Baking Science and Management program are financed by the Pillsbury Co., Dow Chemical Co., US Quartermaster Corps, Corn Products Sales Co., Hercules Powder Co., Abbott Laboratories, and American Machine & Foundry Co.

THEORY, LAB & PILOT PLANT

Within the program, study is organized on three levels; theory, laboratory work, and pilot plant work.

The theory of baking science and business management, promotion and sales is given the student starting in his second year of study. This is followed up by actual lab work in the processing, baking and grading of products.

The next step is pilot plant production where third year students spend one day a week in the University Bakery in the Seminole Dining Hall, baking the bread served in Morrison cafeterias that day.

SUMMER SUPPLEMENT

Then during the summer, the student supplements what he has learned under directed study by working for baking companies in either management and sales or production, and receives pay while he learns.

This program is normally arranged so that the student may work awhile at the bottom, say delivering, graduating up through the various phases of producing the baked goods. The student may change companies each summer in order to become familiar with different operations, or he may work at the same company and be ready to step into a "junior top brass" position at an average starting salary of $5500 to $6500 upon his graduation.

LUCKY STRIKE PRESENTS:

DEAR DR. FROOD

DR. FROOD'S THOUGHT FOR THE DAY: A penny saved is a penny earned. And you could put away a penny a week for one year . . . why, you will have fifty-two cents!

Dear Dr. Frood: Our college mascot is a great big lovable Saint Bernard. He loves everyone—except me. In fact, he has bitten me viciously eight times. What can I do to get him to like me?

Frustrated Dog Lover

DEAR FRUSTRATED: Mother him. To carry this off, I suggest you wear a raccoon coat, let your hair and eyebrows grow shaggy and learn to whimper affectionately.

Dear Dr. Frood: Most of my life here is extracurricular. I carry the drum for the band, pull the curtain for the drama society, wax the court for the basketball team, scrape the ice for the hockey team, clap erasers for the faculty club and shovel snow for the fraternity houses. Do you think these activities will really help me when I get out of college?

Eager

DEAR EAGER: I don't think the colleges will let you out.

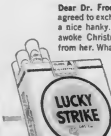
Dear Dr. Frood: On New Year's Eve I foolishly resolved to be more generous with my kisses. My friends have held me this, and I've been forced to give away several packs a day. What do you think would stop me if I broke this resolution?

Reluctant

DEAR RESOLUTE: It's hard to tell, really. Lightning, a runaway horse, a tornado—who lure?

Dear Dr. Frood: Before vacation, my girl and I agreed to exchange Christmas presents. I sent her a nice hanky. You can imagine how I felt when I awoke Christmas morning to find a sports car from her. What can I do now?

Distraught



DEAR DISTRAUGHT: Remind her that Easter giving time is just around the corner.

Dear Dr. Frood: Can you help me convince my girl that I'm not as stupid as she thinks I am?

Anxious

DEAR ANXIOUS: Perhaps, but you'll have a hard time convince me first.

TO GET A QUICK LIFT, suggests Frood, step into an elevator and light up a Lucky. Instantly, your spirits will rise. When you savor your Lucky, you're IN—for college students smoke more Luckies than any other regular. They're a wised-up bunch who've known all along that Luckies taste great. Get the cigarettes with the toasted taste—Luckies.

CHANGE TO LUCKIES and get some taste for a change!

Inn of the Sixth Happiness, star-ring Ingrid Bergman, Kurt Jur-gens and Robert Donat, will be shown as the Campus Movie to-night and tomorrow night.

The movie will begin at 7:30 p.m. in Westcott Auditorium.

The biography of Britain's Gladys Aylward, the film tells the story of her establishment of a mission in China after she had been rejected for field service by a missionary society.

Her exploits in the backward China province as portrayed by the movie include the conversion of a powerful Mandarin, the win-ning of a band of hostile mule drivers, an affair with a Eura-sian army officer and her strug-gle to lead 100 children through a Japanese attack.

Whigham Represents FSU At Junior Miss Pageant

Florida State University was represented in Mobile, Alabama, during the 1961 America's Junior Miss Pageant by Ellen Whigam, Florida's Junior Miss of 1960.

Miss Whigham and four past Junior Misses entertained the audience between events on the last night of the contest, March 24.

Dick Noel, master of ceremonies and member of the Break-fast Club out of Chicago, said "a whole show could be made around them."

Miss Whigham is a music major and a member of Chi Omega sor-ial sorority. She played the part of Lady Thiang in the University Theater, Opera Guild, and Thea-ter Dance production of The King and I.

Becky Jenkins was Florida's Junior Miss this year. She plans to attend FSU next year.

HAPPINESS CAN'T BUY MONEY

With tuition costs spiralling ever upward, more and more under-graduates are investigating the student loan plan. If you are one who is considering the "Learn Now, Pay Later" system, you would do well first to study the case of Leonid Sunlove.

Leonid, the son of an upholsterer in Straitened Circum-stances, Idaho, had his heart set on going to college, but his father, alas, could not afford to send him. Leonid applied for a Regents Scholarship, but his reading speed, alas, was not very rapid—two words an hour—and before he could finish the first page of his test the Regents had closed their brief eyes crosely and gone home. Leonid then applied for an athletic scholarship, but he had, alas, only a single athletic skill—balancing a stick on his chin—and this, alas, aroused only passing enthusiasm among the coaches.

We lived, alas, only a single athletic skill.

And then, hurrah, Leonid learned of the student loan plan: he could borrow money for his tuition and repay it in easy monthly installments after he left school!

Happily Leonid enrolled in the Southeastern Idaho College of Workship and Restoration Drama and happily began a college career that grew more happy year by year. Indeed, it became altogether ecstatic in his senior year because Leonid met a coed named Salina T. Nem with hair like beaten gold and eyes like two squirts of Lake Louise. Love gripped them in its big moist palm and they were betrothed on the Eve of St. Aywas.

Happily they made plans to be married the day after com-mencement—plans, alas, that never were to come to fruition because Leonid, alas, learned that Salina, like himself, was in college on a student loan, which meant that he had not only to repay his own loan when he left school but also Salina's, and the job, alas, that was waiting for Leonid after graduation at the Boise Raincoat Works simply did not pay enough, alas, to cover both their loans, plus rent and food and clothing.

Sick at heart, Leonid and Salina sat down and lit Marlboro Cigarettes and tried to find an answer to their problem—and, sure enough, they did! I do not know whether or not Marlboro Cigarettes helped them find an answer; all I know is that Marlboros taste good and look good, and when things close in and a fellow needs advice and help, the world is black as the pit from pole to pole, it is a heap of comfort and satisfaction to be sure that Marlboros will always provide the same unflagging pleas-ure, the same unstinting quality, in all times and climes and conditions. That's all I know.

Leonid and Salina, I say, did find an answer—a very simple one. If their student loans did not come due until they left school, why, then they just wouldn't leave school! So after receiving their bachelor degrees, they re-enrolled and took master degrees. After that they took doctors degrees, loads and loads of them, until today Leonid and Salina, both aged 78, both still in school, hold doctorates in Philosophy, Humane Letters, Jurisprudence, Veterinary Medicine, Civil Engineering, Op-tometry, and Dewey Decimals. Their student loans, as of last January 1, amounted to a combined total of eighteen million dollars, a sum which they probably would have found great difficulty in repaying had not the Department of the Interior recently declared them a National Park.

Lauderdale Situation Saw Many Students Behind Bars

BONNIE FREEDMAN
Flambeau Staff Writer

"College students? You're under arrest!" This seemed to be the general tone of the situation in Fort Lauderdale this weekend.

In Turkey and Cuba, college students riot in support of or in violent objection to the government. Even in Tallahassee, some students take action to oppose what they consider outdated or unconstitutional laws.

But this weekend, college students from all over the U. S. proved that they can riot and march on jails merely to protest the idea that their fun was limited by police action.

Following the release of the book and subsequent movie, Where the Boys Are, Fort Lauderdale was host to over 50,000 college students this Easter.

In years past, the spring vacationers enjoyed the sun, the beaches, the night spots, and the street dances. This time, though, the students were bored.

The beaches closed at night, so they chose the highway to congregate, with some students, in particular a physical education major from out-of-state, taking it upon themselves to lead the singing.

Police came through quickly, breaking up the fun and making several arrests so that traffic on the East coast could continue north and south.

Students from FSU got down to Fort Lauderdale after much of the excitement was over, because Spring break here was shorter than that at many northern schools.

Several of the men from here were unenthusiastic: two who had been detained by the police refused to comment at all.

Most of the coeds who went down were quite excited. Their comments usually were "The ratio was 5 to 1!"

According to one student, residents of the city treated their visitors as oddities, bringing along cameras and asking students to pose for pictures. They tended to be good-natured, and those who had children taking part in the celebration were disturbed by the rough police action.

According to the students, the partying is still going on among students who don't have to be back in school for another week.

Mathis Recommends Church Key Dismissal

The recommendationfor the abolition of the Church Key Society was made official Wednesday when a letter from Attorney General Roy Mathis was read to Student Senate.

Mathis, who is out of town interning, stated in his letter that the investigation of the only social club recognized by Florida State University was made "without prejudice toward the organization or its members."

David Steele, past vice-president of the club, was credited in the March 28 issue of the Flambeau as feeling that the committee was "not exactly unbiased" in its investigation.

Church Key gets its name from its symbol, a beer can opener, but Steele said, "We have never condoned drinking, and have tried to follow campus rules."

CLUB PURPOSE

The purpose of the club is "to promote fellowship, recognize leadership, and advance the ideal and prestige of the Florida State man."

Mathis stated that the most important aspect of the case is "the obligation that we, as Student Government leaders, have to the rules and regulation of the university and to our own statutes and constitution."

There is a regulation against drinking at university-sponsored functions, "yet this organization's name implies a "church key." "It is almost as if we were setting ourselves up as true martyrs by trying cases for violation of the drinking rule on one hand and by recognizing the offense on the other hand. Are we to protect our court system or are we mak-

Senate Hears Seven Bills

Senate referred seven bills to committees Wednesday, including one which would allow any junior to run for Chief Justice of Honor Court irregardless of previous judicial experience.

Under the present system, only seniors who have had more than one full semester of court experience are allowed to run for the highest judicial office.

The new bill states that a candidate may be disapproved "only upon the basis of poor character or independability."

Other business referred to committee were bills calling for the abolition of the Summer Flambeau, a change in the power of the executive branch, and bills concerning the executive board of the proposed student union.

The next FLAMBEAU training session will be Wednesday night at 7:30 in the Senate Room in Longmire. All are invited.

Doors Close At 8:15 Now

All Artist Series, University Lecture Series and special events of a similar nature will begin promptly at the announced time, Mrs. Katheryn Vernon, director of special events, has announced.

This policy is effective with the Tuesday Rod Serling lecture.

People will not be seated after the 8:15 p.m. curtain time for any of the future programs, regardless of how many people are left wasting outside, she stated.

Seating for latecomers will be during breaks in the programs, she emphasized.

The problem of students arriving for programs after curtain time has become increasingly worse this year, she reported. It has necessitated the establishment of a definite rule of procedure for future events, she said.

Most students arrive for the performances between 8:05 and 8:15 p.m. However, it is impossible for ushers to seat 1,200 people on the main floor of Westcott Auditorium in 10 minutes time, she added.

Mrs. Vernon cited as an example the fact that last year's play for the recent Artist Series production of J.B. resulted in a 20 minute delay both evenings in beginning the play.

The creature that has been appearing on the front pages of this paper for the last several weeks has been named effectionately by the sick members of this staff, Gunk. Gunk is a Griffin, which is half eagle and half lion. We have pictured him guarding a flambeau. The flambeau, by the way, is that tripodal, fire bearing dish in the background. The Griffin is a mythological beast probably originating in Grecian folklore long before the fabled Caldonian Boar Hunt.

People have asked me why our Gunk has such an irate expression on his face. The only reason that I can think of is that he is probably hungry.

GILBERT G. FERNANDEZ . . . a doctoral studeot in history at FSU, receives the congratulations of Dr. Earl B. Beck, his adviser; after receiving a Fulbright scholarship for study in Spain. Party Convenes For Nominating Monday

The Student Party nominating conventions for court, senate and class posts will be Monday through Wednesday evenings, beginning at 7 p.m. each night.

For the first time an admission fee will be charged campaign personnel and spectators. The admission of $25 is being charged in an effort to limit the crowd in attendance and to help raise additional campaign funds, Party Chairman Fred Burkey said.

Delegates will pay a flat $50 fee for the entire three nights.

Candidates for Honor Court, Judiciary and Traffic Court will be named Monday night, with Senate nominations scheduled to begin Tuesday. Whether or not nominations for class offices will begin Tuesday evening will depend on the number of candidates for senatorial posts, Burkey said.

Two women and two men will be nominated for Honor Court from both the junior and senior classes. Three women and three men will be nominated from both the junior and senior classes for Judiciary. Two sophomores and two juniors will be designated as party candidates for Traffic Court.

Senate positions are open for two men and two women from the sophomore, junior and senior classes.

Class officers to be elected in the May election include president, vice president, secretary, treasurer and social chairman for each of the three classes.

All freshmen class officers and senators are elected in the Fall election.

The new party officers will be in charge of the conventions. They include Burkey, chairman; Don Thigpen, vice chairman; Betty Ann Eastridge, corresponding secretary; Joan Coachman, recording secretary; Mrs. Dorothy Caustic, treasurer; Dick Hume, campaign manager; and Jerry Spinks, publicity.

The party officers are studying possible constitutional revisions, Burke said.

Fernandez Is Spain Bound

Gilbert Fernandez has been awarded a Fulbright scholarship for study in Spain.

Fernandez will leave in September for the University of Madrid where he will work in library and archives on a biography of Baldomero Espartero, a Spanish soldier and political leader of the 19th century.

Fernandez's roommate, Richard Lukas, also a doctoral student in history, has an article appearing in the journal The Historian.

The Historian publishes only four works a year by history students; most articles are the work of historical scholars. Lukas' article is a biography of Mieciyslaw Haiman, a Polish historian who came to this country early in this century and was interested principally in Polish-American cultural relations.

Fernandez and Lukas received their BA and MA degrees from FSU and are now assistants in history.

Dr. Earl Beck of the history dept. is Fernandez doctoral advisor and served as Lukas master's advisor. He will also be on a European assignment during the summer. He has received a summer research appointment from FSU to study German attitudes toward America during the twenties.

Cox To Read Paper Friday

Dr. James T. Cox, assistant professor of English at Florida State University, will read a paper on Ford Madox Ford's The Good Soldier at the English Coffee Hour on Friday.

The literary-social hour at 4 p.m. in Westminster House is free and open to the public.

The paper by Dr. Cox has recently been accepted for publication by ELH, a journal of English literary history.

Entitled "Ford's Passion for Province," its purpose is to show that Ford uses the conventions of courtly love originating with the 11th century Provence to characterize one of the central characters as a mock heroic or essentially comic lover in the 20th century.

Interning Is Like Owning A Pet...

By LINDA STOKESBERRY

EDITOR'S NOTE: Several of the Spring interns have volunteered to send weekly reports to the FLAMBEAU describing internship experiences. This is the first in a series of intern columns from Miami.

The experience of interning is like owning a pet, but not having to bear the full responsibility of it. You can love every child in a class room and try out techniques of teaching that have been patiently tested, but final promotion of each child is up to the regular classroom teacher.

In the first few weeks of internship, the regular classroom teacher means security, like a lifeguard, should one get in over his head.

FALL IN LOVE

Children seem to fall immediately in love with their "new teachers." At the primary level anyway, the response is overwhelming. As my table became a fruit bin for apples and 34 excited little faces beamed up at me, I couldn't help thinking, if only grown-ups could be this friendly to each other.

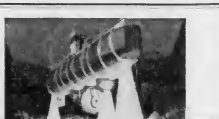
When a child likes you, he'll stop at nothing to gain your affection. Gifts of flowers and fruit are only a few of the many ways he expresses himself. Little notes and brightly colored pictures labeled "From Me To You" show a more determined effort to get the message across.

After an especially taxing day, the best gift of all is to hear him say, "I sure hope you can stay for a long, long time and teach us some more things." Somehow that erases every mistake an intern teacher may make in a day, and suddenly she feels she's the best teacher in the world.

OUTER SPACE

The first grade class I was assigned to varied on what I would teach them in a unit. When I learned that "Space" was their decision, I was ready to catch the next train for Alaska. I wondered how I would ever simplify my vocabulary and develop concepts at their level.

Linda Stokesberry



But I soon realized that knowledge of space was not where between the second third grade. Their Easy Book Space were just by space went cheerfully along, learning everything just two jumps ahead of the class.

IN LINE FOR CANAVERAL

So far it's working wonders. They think I'm next in line to run Cape Canaveral, and I'm sure they're the future scientists of the nation.

Of course, they may be "vegetarian" is a dirty word, but they know how the satellite, Explorer I, was launched and they know the difference between a rocket and a missile.

TV Personality Rod Serling Praises Former Gov. Collins

By JOAN ABBOTT
Assistant News Editor

Former Florida Governor LeRoy Collins, now serving as president of the National Broadcasters, was praised highly by television producer-writer Rod Serling yesterday.

Serling led a question and answer session with English composition, speech and journalism students. He will speak in the University Lecture Series at 8:15 tonight in Westcott Auditorium.

Author of "Twilight Zone" described Collins as a "dynamic man—the kind of leadership every when they argue with him."

"You Floridians should be congratulated," Serling commented, in reference to Collins.

He said Collins was on the "right track" in wanting to convince the networks to produce more of the deeper, more intellectual or educational shows, which would be basically good art as well as being good entertainment.

However, networks and sponsors are too profit conscious, Serling asserted. If 20 million Americans watch a program, it is a failure; more than 56 million Americans need to watch a production for it to be a success.

The rating index was one of the reasons for the demise of Playhouse 90, he explained. Although it produced good drama and was well received, its audience was simply not large enough. The show lost an average of $80,000 a week. Serling reported, although it was carried for a time because of its public relations value for the network.

PAY TV

Serling was enthusiastic about the future of pay television, although he forecast it would not be in common use for another five years. The applied philosophy of television networks today seems to be "Don't try any thing new," Serling accused.

The industry needs some strong competition to force it to try new methods and to improve the quality of its productions, he declared.

The industry tends to aim its programming at the lowest common denominator and assumes a "totally passive response," Serling said. However, the best programs have been those which probed into deeper subjects, he added. Unfortunately, the "trend seems to be toward less and less meaningful programming," he asserted.

Serling said he recognized the duty of television to present both sides of every issue. "There is not an answer to every argument," he emphasized.

THE NATIONAL BALLET OF CANADA . . . will star Lois Smith, Prima Ballerina; and David Adams, Premier Danseur, when they present COPPELIA on April 19, and SWAN LAKE on April 20. The Ballet Company is being presented by the Artist Series and is making its third appearance on campus.

Artist Series

National Ballet Of Canada Makes Third Appearance

Student tickets for the third appearance of the National Ballet of Canada at Florida State University are now available. TheApril 19-20 performance of the ballet will be the first time an Artist Series has returned for a third engagement.

FSU students are entitled to see either of these presentations without cost. However, those students wishing to attend both ballets may purchase a second ticket for the general admission price of $3.50. To facilitate quicker admission and seating, the side doors of Westcott Auditorium, usually used as exits, will be open for entrance at future Artist Series programs.

The first classical ballet based on the charming fantasy of a doll come to life, Coppelia is one of the biggest productions in the extensive repertoire of the National Ballet of Canada and will be presented April 19.

Since its first presentation in the Imperial Opera Theatre, Paris, in 1870, it has been a consistent favorite, its music familiar to millions the world over.

COPPELIA DIFFICULT

Coppelia, which has been seen in virtually every land, offers one of the most technically difficult of all ballerina roles. Many a career has been built for prima ballerinas around the portrayal of the love-sick maiden with the fickle sweetheart.

The National Ballet will present Swan Lake April 20. The only resident North American ballet company, the Canadian group is one of the few in the world to present Swan Lake in its entirety. The presentation has been hailed by serious critics in New York, Washington, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Mexico City, Montreal, Toronto and other major cities of the country.

One of the world's best-known ballets, Swan Lake includes varied and attractive dances. The dances of Odette, the Swan Queen, are conceived in a bird idiom. The role is associated with a host of great ballerinas, Legnani, Pavlova, Karsavrina, Markova, Danilova and Fonteyn to mention a few. Prime Ballerina Lois Smith will dance Odette in the FSU performance.

Ice To Lecture On 'Logic And Values'

By GLENDA POWERS
Flambeau Staff Writer

"Seductive Logic and the Abduction of Values" will be the subject of Dr. Jackson Ice, final speaker in this year's Last Lecture Series, at 8 p. m. Thursday in Opperman Music Hall.

Dr. Ice, assistant professor in the Philosophy and Religion Dept., is the fourth of the Mortar Board "Last Lecturers" this year.

As an alternate title to his lecture, Dr. Ice suggested "Dog on a Cold Stone Floor."

"My lecture arises out of the felt need to restore the lost balance between thinking and valuing as essential and complimentary activities in the life of man," commented Dr. Ice.

"We are anticipating a large crowd for this final lecture," said Jan Pearce, Mortar Board president. "We feel very fortunate in having a speaker such as Dr. Ice, and we believe that many people will take advantage of the opportunity to hear him," she added.

FROM HARVARD

Dr. Ice received his Ph.D. from Harvard Graduate School and his A.B. and B.D. from the University of Pittsburgh and Colgate Rochester Divinity School, respectively. He wrs awarded scholarships for graduate work from the Harvard Divinity School and Colgate Rochester Divinity School.

Prior to coming to FSU in 1954 the philosophy professor was a teaching fellow at Harvard and a lecturer at Tufts College.

The subject of his Ph.D. thesis was "A Critique of Albert Schweitzer's Philosophy of Civilization: A Systematic Presentation and Critical Evaluation of the Social and Ethical Philosophy of Albert Schweitzer."

In addition to his more scholarly pursuits, Dr. Ice's collegiate days included being president of Sigma Chi, cartoonist for the college newspaper and yearbook, and a member of Omicron Delta Kappa and Iliff of Farre.

Dr. Ice's interests extend to dramatics—he is trained in speech and directed several plays while in college—to art, and to music. He was awarded for seven years the Carnegie Music scholarship for Saturday morning art courses. He plays the piano, the clarinet, and the guitar.

Golden Anniversary

Woman's Glee Club To Present Concert

The Woman's Glee Club of Florida State University will present a Golden Anniversary concert Friday to celebrate its 50th year as an organization.

The four-part program which includes selections from Brahms, Mozart and Schubert, will begin at 8:15 p. m. in Opperman Music Hall. The public is invited and there is no admission charge.

Honored guest will be Dean Emeritus Ella Scoble Opperman, who as head of the School of Music was responsible for the organization of the choral group in 1911.

A recognition speech will be given by Dr. Wiley Housewright and a reception will be held in Longmire Lounge after the concert.

The 60-member choral group, directed by Betty Jane Grimm, will open the program with "Tenebrae factae sunt" by Palestrina.

Other numbers on the first part of the program will be "Miserere Mei" by Antonio Lotti, a 16th century madrigal by Morley, and "From the Realm of Souls Departed" from Gluck's Orpheus.

Soloists will be Daisy Coley, Sarah McCall, Nancy Wall, Barbara Morris and Sabra Briggs.

PROGRAM

Included in the program will be "Blessed Are They That Dwell in Thy House." the first choral composition written by Brahms; "Holy, Holy, Holy," from a German Mass by Schubert; "Cuco Bell' Idol" a three part Canon by Mozart and "Laudamus Te" by Carl P. Thiman.

Soloists for "Laudamus Te" will be Betty Ann Bevis, Miss Carl P. Thiman. Marsha Kapphan, Miss Briggs, and Sandra Davis.

The last two parts of the program will include "Magnificat" by Ralph Vaughn Williams; a Czechoslovakian folk song, "Plaint" arranged by LaForge; a Russian folk song arranged by Stone; "Jesus Walked This Lonesome Valley" and "I Wait Alone Beside the Sea."

FIRST CONCERT

The history of concerts by the Woman's Glee Club goes back to 1912 when as the Florida State College Glee Club its nine members presented "Ye Old Colonial Concert" at Florida State College for Women.

The first concert tour ever made by the club was in the University of Florida in 1921. In 1939, while under the direction of Etta Lucille Robertson the group presented a program at the World's Fair in New York.

In 1955, Miss Grimm became director of the glee club. A graduate of Marshall College, Miss Grimm has done graduate work at Columbia University.

A contralto, she has appeared as featured soloist with the Robert Shaw Choir, and as Bach soloist at Union Theological Seminary. She has made many broadcasts and has recorded both for Columbia and Victor.

Speech Contest

Preliminaries in persuasive speaking, the last of three Speech Dept. sponsored intramural speaking contests, will be held at 7 p.m. tonight in 219 History Bldg.

About 20 students are entered in the preliminaries from which three finalists will be chosen. Their topic is the U.S. and its relation to the U.N.

Finalists already chosen in other events were Max Goldren, Pat Reidy and Richard Root in impromptu speaking, Susie Bellaig, Lloyd Gossler and Pat Kenoicoti in after-dinner speaking.

Each set of finalists will speak before a Tallahassee civic club when winners will be decided, some time in the next two weeks.

Explosion And Fire Strike Research Lab In Conradi

An explosion in a refrigerator damaged a biological sciences research laboratory in Conradi Bldg. early Sunday but did not spread to other labs and classrooms in the building.

The Tallahassee Fire Dept., called about 8:30 a.m., confined the fire to the lab of Dr. Hans Gaffron, 107 Conradi.

Extensive smoke damage and the cost of replacing glass equipment and a desk destroyed may be about $900, FSU Safety Director William Watson estimated.

Watson said the fire probably started from inflammable materials such as acetone and alcohol in the refrigerator. The fire in the refrigerator burned for about one hour.

A passer-by who saw signs of a fire reported it to the University Police who called Tallahassee firemen.

The explosion reportedly occurred just as a campus policeman opened the laboratory door. The force was strong enough to blow the refrigerator five or six feet, Watson said.

The lab was being cleaned up yesterday and Dr Gaffron said his research would not be much delayed by the accident.

Educational TV English Classes Draw Criticism

Some English Graduate Assistants Claim E-TV Is Waste Of Funds

By GEORGIANA FRY
(EDITOR'S NOTE. A recent letter to the Flambeau criticizing the televised freshman English course prompted this study of education television. Further articles are planned on courses offered by other departments on television, geology, mathematics and humanities.)

With "how to budget" talk buzzing on Capitol Hill, the state legislators might profit from talking to some English graduate assistants.

They have plenty to say about educational television. In fact, some think it's a waste of money and one student even suggested the E-TV money be appropriated for faculty salary increases.

It's these students—candidates for masters and doctorates — who teach about 85 per cent of the English 101-102 sections. One of the ideas behind educational television is that the students (the learners) who are taught by graduate assistants can have the "mature" professor via the video screen.

It is this "mature" teacher who can generalize and pace the work of the course, says Dr. Paul Stoakes, English professor and tele-course lecturer for Eh 101.

The graduate assistants take a special course in teaching written communication and each one is assigned to a faculty member. The faculty member is responsible for supervising the graduate assistant's teaching and grading.

TIE TOGETHER

All teachers are supposed to tie together the television program and their own lectures. The TV program lasts for 30 minutes, allowing 120 minutes for the instructor in the classroom.

But many of the graduate assistants object to being forced to speed up or slow down their rate of progress to keep up with the TV lectures.

One assistant pointed out that "a course that is always exactly on schedule is more of a hypothetical ideal than a reality."

He doesn't feel that some parts of the course should always "conform" to a schedule "that does not allow for student interest (or lack of it), student enthusiasm or excessive difficulty."

This particular person's strongest criticism of E-TV was the general method of presentation and the choice of material used. He pointed out that these are determined by the English Dept. and not the lecturer.

Another student felt the TV

DR. GEORGE YOST . . . one of the many professors who conduct television courses, is an example of the high caliber of teaching which is used on FSU's WFSU-TV.

Survey Reveals Many English 102 Students Find E-TV Course 'Boring'

It's not always true that students want education handed to them on a silver platter.

A recent survey of an English 102 class, Educational Television style, showed the students found the course too "simple" and "boring." The entire class of 22 would change the E-TV course, teaching it somewhat differently than the present method.

Day sections of Eh 102 classes meet 150 minutes per week of which 30 minutes is a television feature by Dr. Griffith Pugh. The night sections have no tele-courses.

None of the interviewees thought that E-TV was "challenging" but rather "boring," because (1) it does not present new material and is merely a rehash of material quoted verbatim from the text and (2) the lectures are presented too simply.

The concensus of the students was that E-TV should be used as a supplement to the course rather than as a direct function.

Several members of the class felt the material should be directed so as to "assume the students have a little intelligence."

The students like the idea of using visual aids again IF they are on a higher level. One and —a film—they would not repeat it A Guide Through the Library.

"If we don't know how to use the library by now we will never know," one person said.

Another student commented that he would use larger letters in the visual material "so that it can be seen easier over the screen."

WOULD ABANDON IDEA

Some students wondered why E-TV was necessary and said they would suggest abandoning the idea if they were asked to plan a program themselves.

More than one person thought a panel discussion could be used instead of one speaker or suggested having a different lecturer each week.

Of the 22 students, 20 preferred spending the entire class period with a teacher in the classroom with no E-TV lectures and two would like one E-TV lecture "just for the present programming were changed."

Only one person approves of the 30-minute tele-course as it "seems to break the monotony of lecture classes and you get another person's ideas on the material that is being presented for study."

Reasons for having classes without TV were (1) asking questions as they arise and getting immediate answers; (2) paying more attention when seeing the instructor in person; and (3) covering more material in the instructor's lectures.

'Playing With Fire' Alarm

Minutes came very near to costing Florida State University many thousands of dollars this weekend. A small fire, discovered in the Conradi Building, promptly reported through tortuous channels and allowed to burn away while "by the book" procedure took rather slow action, could have become a much larger fire and eradicated all or most of one of the newer, better equipped campus building.

ACCORDING TO A campus operator, fire alarms are promptly turned in to the fire department downtown. Then the campus police and a number of volunteer individuals connected with the campus are called. However, in the case of the Sunday fire, such a procedure does not appear to have been the case. Instead, the fire continued to burn until a second call went out to the Fire Department with police sanction.

Perhaps the delay was caused through genuine fear that the campus might become deluged with false alarms. But where fire is concerned, it might be better to place more confidence in persons reporting a fire than in "fireproof" buildings. What if the fire had started in, say, the old History or Science buildings? The wasted minutes would probably have made quite a lot of difference.

IF FALSE ALARMS are given, then the university should not pussy foot around. There should be a flat and final expulsion for anyone so foolish as to endanger their fellow students, the members of the fire department and everyone on the streets between FSU and downtown. It looks as if someone is "playing with fire" procedure and it's a silly, dangerous game.

State Dept. Lives In Past

If the state department has made errors, then it will correct them and no one will be the wiser. This seemed to be the essence of what Richard Phillips, of the United States State Department had to say concerning the current political, economic and social situation in Latin America and the Caribbean.

This attitude of the United States' power in the hemisphere has long since left the stage of being practical. It is now entering the era of the suicidal. For the United States to assume that it can and should control the hemispheric security is a rather pompous assumption of invisible responsibility.

THE UNITED STATES is responsible for the maintainance of good relations with the countries of Latin America. Through the sentiments of the Monroe Doctrine, it has undertaken a self-imposed responsibility for preventing foreign encroachment on the affairs of the hemisphere. Through its policies in the area of Inter-American affairs, it has often proved, at its own prestige expense, to be the aggressor.

The Latin American countries have become a favorite "get rich quick" spot for large American countries. They have become the recipients of poorly administered aid plans, and they have become a hotbed for the spread of international Communism, due to the social and economic conditions that exist within the 20 individual nations.

LATIN AMERICAN temperaments and politics have been meddled in by Americans since the Roosevelt administrations. The new administration had advocated a policy of clean up in the area of international relations. It has made changes in the higher branches of the State Department, but it has done nothing to the lower levels. The same men who were considered experts in the previous administration are still serving in the different bureaus and departments. They are still advising and literally making the policies followed by the state department, and they are still living in an era of the past. Too few branches of the state department seem to have an eye on the future. This was made vividly clear with Mr. Phillips' speech on the role of the state department in Latin America.

If the United States has a responsibility in the Caribbean, th all of Latin America, it has a first responsibility of finding capable and intelligent administrators for its foreign policy—men who are able to look into the future and foresee hemispheric problems, not men who are content to sit back and cope with the problems as they rise. If it continues to believe that it can correct all evils by correcting its errors politely, then it will lose in the battle for supremacy in the hemisphere.

Reflections

Those Who Scream Loudest Have Little Self Confidence

By LESLIE POWELL

Following in one of the brightest examples of the unsigned letter; a favorite dodge for critics who want to have their cake and eat it too. These people are those who go about shouting that letters critical of the Flambeau never see print. A cardinal reason is that nine out of every ten such letters are unsigned. I doubt that there are many aborigines left, even as far north as Tharpe street, who are not aware that letters to the editor must be signed . . . to use a recent correspondents words, "writ" your name.

Now, the proqused letter:

"I CANT BITE 2 god so if It makes yers feal beter tuh put sik! sik! all thru my letter I wont mind num—what I'm writen about wuz that I noticed thet all these huar letters ter the editer what disagreed with yer paper wuz full of mistakes and sik! sik! but all letters what agred with yers wuz put like the prepul what writ them wuz rite smart—now what I wants tuh know is does u peepul clean up the lawditen letters and not the oporin wuns or duz it werk out thet the campus writers just naturly like yers and the campus slobs is on the other i.e., wrong side?

Plez let me no so I will no which sides to be on becuz I want to be wun of the campus intrectuals to—"

THE SAME OLD, old, musty story. The individual who wrote that gem didn't sign his name. Naturally enough, for critical letters seldom bear a signature.

Flambeau policy dictates that letters to the editor are not to be "cleaned" up, but if there are one or two errors there are corrected. However, when a letter comes in badly misspelled, with poor capitalization, etcetera, then that letters likely will run as is. There is no excuse for the misspelling of a proper name ten or fifteen times in one letter, especially if that name has held the front page of commercial news-papers for months on end, as is the case with Eichmann.

If the non-signing complainers wish to volunteer their time to come up and re-type all the letters run in the Flambeau, and correct the errors to insure equality of "interlectual" appearance, they will find an available typewriter. Most of those letters run with sic in setted in them would be worte if they weren't already corrected. It's a rare letter that runs with the total number of lacs that could be inserted.

TRUE, MANY critical letters never get printed because most of the bold souls writing them conveniently forget to include a signature. For all we know unsigned letters come from fictitious persons.

Honest malice is one thing, but hiding behind what amounts to an anonymous letter is something else. Anonymous letters usually get what they deserve . . . anonymity.

Federal School Aid Is Bogey

TO THE EDITOR:

Federal aid to education is once more on the carpet for discussion. And again we hear about the great danger that it entails. Government enterprise (such as education) seems the inevitable result and such enterference (sic) is thought of as being by definition.

What is it that we fear from the federal government? Is it that it may decide to do away with our football team or our courses in horse economics, or perhaps some baking powder Ph.D.? Or is it something connected with the prestige of the state, with this famed business of states' rights? Are so enamoured with the pump (sic) that accompanies gubernatorial inauguration, state legislatures and supreme courts, reminiscent of the sheikdoms of some mythical Arabia?

For to say that we fear the use of such aid degenerating into indoctrination (sic) of the students by the federal government is not only insulting to the students who are then assumed to be simply empty headed things at the mercy of any idea that may be dropped on their skull, but we assume as well that the government will extend its power and misuse it, something that we do not see take place in such a country as France where the educational system and program is dictated by the ministry of education. Why should federal aid turn into something different from what it is in France? Are we to assume that Americans are incapable of properly using their power? We call this federal aid socialism. In such socialism necessarily evil, and if so where did we get such a notion? From the precice of capitalism? For surely such socialism in educations fails to degenerate into indoctrination (sic) in countries where it has been implemented.

It seems that we have some bogey about any sort of federal activity. We climb on our war horse as soon as the Iden is brought out and ride it for all it's worth, without much thought about the why and wherefor of our charge.

If we think that education leaves something to be desired in this country, and that in Europe they are much more successful, as is so often dinned in our ears, then why not take up the very basic prerequisite for improvement, namely coordination and planning, on a national scale, through the federal government, rather than sit tightly on our little horse and hold onto our bogeys. Most of what is said about this evil of Federal aid to education is simple clishe, name calling and pragmatism, seldom is it analysis.

Church Key Probe Is Personal

TO THE EDITOR:

It is the sincere feeling of the society that the recent investigation of the Church Key Society has been instigated by personal motives, and is presently being pressed by the Attorney General, who is interning away from Tallahassee and has not been made aware of late developments.

The senators are elected by the Student Body for a number of reasons, but one of which is to honestly represent the wishes of the voters who have elected them to office. From their numbers they choose the Attorney General, so that this office is still a representative office of the Student Body. No one of the society has had one single indication that this investigation was started because of students' protest.

THE SOCIETY HAS made a number of constitutional amendments in the express belief that we would help to pacify the investigation committee and to clear up some misunderstanding about the purpose and functions. They are abolishing our symbol, abolishing our tapping ceremony which consists of wearing the symbol, and clarifying our position concerning University rules. Also that the Society shall change its name at our next meeting, and that it shall sponsor an annual open bridge tournament and two annual receptions for persons of achievements from various walks of life. Standard qualifications for membership will be considered for membership in our future tappings.

When it comes time to define an organization that does and has represented seven Fraternities, has had members from Student Body president, Gold Key, Attorney General, an All-American, and two Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities, and been in almost every other organization on this campus as a "do-nothing organization"; then it is time that these investigators take a good look around at other campus groups. We do not now, nor have we ever, defined ourselves as "elite."

THE SOCIETY HAS always had a sweet-heart, the present being Ann Schlein of Pi Beta Phi Sorority. For two years the Society has had pages in the Tally-Ho, and has four recognized faculty advisors. We have ushered and worked with needy children.

The society is sincerely sorry if this present investigation begins a trend that uses personal motifs and important offices to try and suppress the honest and sincere endeavors of mature college men to meet in a social atmosphere and conduct themselves in a gentlymenly (sic) manner that is a credit to the Student Body and to this University.

Whose Loss?

TO THE EDITOR:

I have yet to read an article condemning federal aid to education where it was not done on the basis of that well worn cliche warning us that "federal aid inevitably leads to federal control." However logical this admonishment might be, it appears to have little if any empirical validity which should be, so the scientist says, the preferred criterion in determining fact from fancy. Federal aid in one form or another has been doled out to the states for over a hundred years—public education for nearly an end, as is the case with Eichmann.

If the non-signing complainers wish to volunteer their time to come up and re-type all the letters run in the Flambeau, and correct the errors to insure equality of "interlectual" appearance, they will find an available typewriter. "OK, Buddy—Where's The Fire?"

From Inside Out

Discussions Run From Serious To Frivolous

By MYGNON CHAMPION

Snow in April? Ice-covered lakes?

You bet your life, but it wasn't in Lauderdale. This was the setting for the National Convention of IAWS (Intercollegiate Association of Women Students) on the wintery, windy University of Wisconsin, which was attended by two women senators from FSU last week.

The tone of the convention ranged from high seriousness to frivolity, from provocative discussion groups and inspiring lectures to the grand finale, a gay old-fashioned German party.

THE CAMPUS WAS nothing less than beautiful. Overlooking serene Lake Mendota, which was still partially covered by ice, and surrounded by rolling hills, the terrain was a marked contrast to that of FSU.

With the exception of one new dorm, the buildings were constructed in an Italian Renaissance style that lent an atmosphere of tradition to the campus. The new tl-story dorm, where the convention delegates stayed, was ultra-modern. The rooms were furnished with roll-away beds, picture windows, heating that could be regulated in the room, and daily maid service. To top it off, each dorm had its own postoffice.

Miss Sally Bowles, daughter of Undersecretary of State Chester Bowles, was one of many featured speakers. Topic of her speech was the newly-established Peace Corps, of which she is a public relations officer.

OTHER OUTSTANDING individuals who spoke at the convention included Nancy Hanachman, Washington correspondent for CBS, Dr. Harold Taylor, author of Education and Freedom and James Crow, specialist in genetic effects of fallout.

Topics of discussion in various groups ranged from the Government of Soviet Russia to "Civil Liberties" and "Father and Space Satellites." The discussion was far from limited to formally-organized groups, especially when it came to civil liberties. Everywhere with a Southern flavor (which we didn't know we had until we got around those yankees) couldn't help a single "ya'll" without being drawn into a conversation on integration.

Needless to say, with people from all over the nation present, there was a wide variety of opinion but there were very few radicals on either side. The exchange of viewpoints was so calm and rational that participants so willing and anxious, to hear the beliefs of others that one was led to feel that the young people of the nation, if given the opportunity might be able to find a workable solution to that sometimes unsolvable problem.

The diversity of the landscape made the statement that this was all one state inspired a profound respect and pride, even though it seemed to symbolize the spirit of unity and brotherhood that pervaded the convention. And we were reminded of the words:

What difference if I hail from North or South
Or from the East or West
My heart is filled with love for all of these
I only know I swell with pride
And deep within my breast
I thrill to see Old Glory push the breeze.

Campus Fire Reporting Is Poorly Organized

TO THE EDITOR:

A letter to the administration.

I think it's high time FSU made a few changes in the procedure for reporting campus fires.

LAST SUNDAY morning, just by chance I stopped by my office in the basement of the Conradi building. I smelled smoke and went looking. On the first floor I found a small wisp of smoke coming from under the door of room 107. The lab was locked so I went to my phone and did what I assumed was giving a general alarm. I phoned the campus operator (as is instructed in the campus phone book) and told her of the fire. I waited, but did I get a fire truck? No, I got a campus cop. First he must make sure there was a fire. So while I ran around to the back door to meet the cop and later while he searched his pocket full of keys to open the lab, the fire burned on. I still assumed the operator had called the fire company. However, that was not the case. After the cop found his key, opened the door and saw the fire, he asked me if there was a phone he could call the fire company from. So by the time the fire truck arrived, the small fire I had found had grown into a sizeable blaze.

THIS TIME the fire was small and confined, the hydrogen gas tanks not feet from the fire didn't get hot enough to blow. FSU was lucky. The next time someone could lose his life while the campus cop makes sure there is a fire.

Why don't we initiate a system where the campus receptionist can give correct campus cops, and other agencies concerned, when she gets the report. A false alarm is one thing in a while would be better than a million dollar fire or the loss of several lives.

Peace Corps Must Accept Jesus Christ

TO THE EDITOR:

Our Peace Corps can be a consideration and understanding, they can teach as well as learn from the Asian race they can be decent, honest and understanding individuals who want to work for the betterment of human beings—but unless they have accepted Jesus Christ as their Lord and Savior they will hit hell, along with the other heathens, and hard they will have to be to stop bouncing. This includes everyone, regardless of how many hospitals they built, or how many buildings a million dollar fire or the Eternal life is a gift. It is not bought by the good works done.

Jack Ryder came from a half-point deficit in the preliminaries to win the National Collegiate Tumbling Championship Saturday night in Champaign, Illinois.

The Florida State tumbler was in near perfect form as he was judged 9.0 before a crowd of 50,000 people. In the preliminaries he was in second place with Tom Osterland of Michigan a mere half-point behind Joe Marshall of Navy.

Immediately following the tumbling Ryder attempted to qualify in the trampoline event but was injured in a fall from the bed of the trampoline. He incurred a puncture that required two stitches and was advised not to compete further. However, he taped his knee extensively and went on to compete and win out over Marshall by a .3 advantage.

Ryder in winning FSU's first national tumbling championship brought the FSU representation a thirteenth place in the twenty-seven team meet.

Bill Beavers entered the preliminaries in three events but did not qualify for the finals. Joe Greene entered the competition in tumbling and trampoline and though he did not get into the finals he placed thirteenth in tumbling.

Two former FSU gymnasts did well in the national meet. Fred Orlofsky and Reggie Klaus, in leading their team, Southern Illinois to a second place in team competition, took two national individual titles. Orlofsky is the NCAA still-rings champion and Klaus is the NCAA Horizontal bar champion. They both placed in the All-Around competition with Orlofsky in second and Klaus in fourth.

Penn State won the team championship with 80 points followed by Southern Illinois with 81, Southern California with 78, Michigan with 70 and the University of Illinois and Michigan State in the fifth place with 39.

The Florida State gymnasts will next participate in the NAAU Gymnastic Championship in Dallas, Texas on May 5 and 6. Competing in this event will be the Japanese Gymnastics Team that swept the Olympics this summer in Rome.

The next NCAA Gymnastics championship will be held at the University of New Mexico in Albuquerque, N. M., in March, 1962.

Joe Gusic, the Gymkana coach said "This certainly is a great thing for FSU gymnastics and it's future here."

Bengals Win In Track, Golf; Tennis Lone FSU Victory

By BILL VERIGAN
Asst. Sports Editor

Florida State's track and golf teams fell to LSU over the weekend, and the outstanding tennis team was the lone team to salvage a win against the Bengals.

The FSU thinclads, sporting a nine meet win streak, suffered their last loss, which was back in 1958, to the LSU Tigers too. The tracksters are 3-1 for the season.

Florida State managed to take three of the six field events and four of nine track events. Herb Kraft tied the school record for the broad jump with a leap of 23 feet, 3½ inches which was good enough to take this event.

LONG, DAVIS WIN

Terry Lonit, only two-tenths of a second off the school record, won the low hurdles and Bill Davis clocked 1:55.1 in the 880 run.

Steve Long's winning high jump mark was 6-4½. Jeff Clark notched the discus win, Quentin Till grabbed the 440-yard run and Kent Mills won the two-mile run.

In the tennis match against the Bengals Florida State notched its only win by taking four of five singles matches and both doubles events.

Rebel Bellamy, number one man on the Seminole squad, knocked off nationally ranked Leslie Nicholson in the main event of the day 6-3, 4-6, 6-2. In the second match Paul Scarpa was downed by nationally ranked Ernie Cox 6-3, 6-2.

In other matches Gordy Smith, Buddy McClain, and Jamie Jamieson won in consecutive sets for the Seminoles. Bellamy teamed with Smith and McClain joined Jamieson in winning the doubles matches.

The season record for the tennis team is 11-1.

GOLFERS LOSE

Florida State's golf team had a 14-match winning streak snapped by the Bengals. The LSU golfers trimmed FSU 21½ to 5½.

John Sample was the medalist for LSU with two under par. The stiff wind that was blowing across the course was partially responsible for the low scores. Sam Carmichael and Howell Fraser defeated Manny Nordone (76) and Bryan Bergeron (75) of Florida State.

Jack O'Neal and John Sopncer whipped Downing Gray and Dave Orsini (76) of the Tribe. Eddie Ross and John Sample of LSU beat Frank Malara (77) and Chuck Keating (77).

Tribe Nine Wins Pair

Florida State's baseball team moved a step closer in its quest for a bid to the regional NCAA tournament by knocking off Georgia Southern twice in a double-header Saturday 6-4, 10-1 and stretching its record to 14 wins against 4 losses.

Winning pitchers for the Seminoles were Frank Davis, who currently owns a 3-1 record, and Jim Daniel, who ran his total to four wins against one loss.

Leading the hitting attack for the tribe, which smashed 23 hits during the afternoon were Doug Walker and Neil Martin. Walker is holding down the number one batting average spot and had six hits at eight times at bat. Martin, hammering out four hits in seven at bats, is situated in the number two position in batting.

FSU also pulled off its 18 double play on a combination that included Roger Zimmerman, Jack Dull, and Walker.

The Baby Seminoles also pulled off two wins over the weekend, due mostly to the efforts of their opponent, Gulf Coast Junior College. With the score reading 15-9 in the third inning in favor of FSU, Gulf Coast decided it was time to quit. Tommy Davis was the pitcher for the frosh and had a no-hitter going with eight strike outs when the game was called. The second game of the proposed double header was forfeited by Gulf Coast.

Circle 'K' Ette Will Organize

An organizational meeting for the Circle "K" Ette service organization will be held tomorrow at 4 p. m. in the faculty lounge Longmire.

The Circle "K" Ette club is not a social sorority but a service organization seeking to develop the activities that will be of greatest value to the school and to its students.

It is a voluntary association of students which chooses its own members. Women students may ask to join Circle "K" Ettes or they may be asked by a member to become affiliated.

The objects of Circle "K" Ettes will follow those of the Circle "K" club for men. Both organizations are sponsored by the Kiwanis Club and by the Kiwanis Women's Auxiliary, Sinawah.

Projects undertaken by the club will follow the organization's objects. Because members are held together by fellowship and by interest in mutual service, social events of various types will also be held during the year.

Sentences Started By Demonstrators

Two sit-in demonstrators began serving 60-day sentences yesterday morning while a third paid his fine to avoid having to drop out of school.

Appearing before City Judge John Budd at 9 a.m. yesterday, Derek Lawler and Jeff Poland chose to serve the jail sentence, rather than pay the $200 fines. Roland Eves decided to pay his fine and remain in school.

A fourth convicted demonstrator, Robert Armstrong, was unable to appear in court because of e lung infection, the judge was told by an associate of Tobias Simon, Miami attorney who defended the students. His case was deferred until he is able to appear.

All four were Florida State University students when they were arrested March 12 last for joining Florida A&M students in a sit-in demonstration protesting segregation et Woolworth's lunch counter downtown.

Eves and Lawler were still in school here while Poland was enrolled to San Jose State College so Californias he returned volun tarily to serve his sentence.

The cases of two other FSU students arrested last Spring in the sit-in demonstration have already been disposed of. Stephen Poe paid his fine last summer and Oscar Brock was placed probation in custody of his fat

An A&M student arrested s same time, Henry Steele, also ban serving a jail sentence yesterday. He is the son of a integration leader.

Since Poland and Lawler tered jail, their attorney has applicatuo for e writ of habe corpus with the U. S. Dist Court in Jacksonville. This the only legal recourse left the U. S. Supreme Court re to review the case.

E-TV Criticism . . .

lectures had failed completely in two major issues. interest and subject-matter. "Concerning the first," e said, "little effort is made to establish rapport betwe other and viewer."

He pointed out that there are two basic approaches to teaching of English: '1) by spending the entire year teaching the skills of writing, which is done at FSU and '2) by approaching the course es e subject matter area.

On this latter the emphasis is on content and the instructor teaches both subjects as logic, literature, semantics, or linguistics. He feels that "papers grow out of discussion just as as they would to aoy subject matter course such as social science."

In this approach then, he feels that there is definitely a place for TV, pointing out thel Dr. Paul Stoakes Eh 101 lectures "became more effective when he discussed linguistics."

But "they weren't as effective as they might have been because this subject matter was not co-ordinated by individual instructors into their lecture plans," he continued.

DE-EMPHASIZE SKILLS

This student assistant feels that skills should not be emphasized the entire semester but should be subordinated to a subject matter, spending about one week on them.

The suggestion was made by several of the students that a different person teach every week or every other week. One student commented that this "might alleviate a little of the monotony that develops from anticipating and witnessing the same smiley or unsmiley face so regularly."

It was also pointed out that this would force more professors to work on the presrotation which is now mainly if not totally Dr. Pugh's and Dr. Stoakes' problem.

"It also might create a better critical atmosphere that would actually allow for some improvement—at least changes."

It is obvious to many of the graduate assistants that E-TV is just another answer to the problem of mass education as shown by the increase of student loads.

"I, as one pointed out, "educational television can't grade papers."

New Budget Contains 400 Per Cent Increase

Butler Presented Budget For Senate With $284,259 Jump In Appropriations

By TONI DI CARLO
Flambeau Staff Writer

A record budget containing a 400 per cent increase over last year's was presented to Senate yesterday by Student Body President Carl Butler. The appropriations total $868,782, a jump of $284,259.

Butler, delivering the proposed budget to the senators for discussion and approval, stated, "I think you have a tremendous increase in responsibility and influence in the new program."

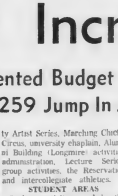
Discussion of the budget will begin next Wednesday.

He explained that this year, for the first time, Senate will vote on both student activites and university activities. Previously, the student legislators only had jurisdiction over student activities funds, while the administration budgeted university activities.

Butler called the increase "an entirely new field of responsibility for student government."

The university activities, totaling $393,182, include the University Artist Series, Marching Chiefs, Circus, university chaplain, Alumni Building (Longmire activities) administration, Lecture Series, group activities, the Reservation and intercollegiate athletics.

STUDENT AREAS



Student activities include the four classes, Collegians, student publications, forensics, Choral Union, intramurals, the University Symphony, university picnic, international students, student government, student travel, University Singers and the Theatre Dance Group.

Funds for student activities total $99,600, an increase of $15,000. The president explained that this small jump is due to the fact that last year's increase was too small because the student enrollment increase was underestimated.

Butler urged the senators to "bear in mind that you are not getting an over-all campus budget" and to "forget personal prejudices" when they begin discussing the distribution of funds Wednesday.

Among the changes made in the proposed budget from last year's figure are $100 increases in the allocations for the Sophomore Class, Graduate Class and Barequettes, and a cut of the same amount for Women's Senate.

Butler pointed out that Women's Senate printing and mimeograph would be taken over by student government so that the cut would have no effect on their operations.

Butler

SG INCREASES

Student Government in receiving increases to cover the expenses of the cheerleading squad, $1100, Speakers Bureau, $900 and increased printing charges, $270.

Tally-Ho, since it is raising its photographing rates for people who have their pictures taken more than once, will take a cut of $1,500.

The Flambeau budget will drop $493, but since it will no longer be responsible for the income tinued $2,000 Summer Flambeau, the publication will have actually an increase of $1,00

Surplus Funds Commission will rise from zero to $15,000 if the slate is accepted by Senate. The president asked that this money be set aside for the proposed swimming pool or some other major campus project.

SG Unanimous Vote Given Church Key

★ ★ ★ ★ ★

A unanimous vote of confidence was awarded to Church Key Society by Student Senate Wednesday after colorful debate and demonstrations, in spite of Attorney General Roy Mathis's recommendation that the group be dropped from the list of approved organizations.

Sen. Dick Hume, spokesman from the Senate committee which studied the Attorney General's recommendation, pointed out that the group had promised to make six constitutional amendments, to keep from from being banned.

Among these were changing their name, changing the symbol, prohibiting the wearing of the symbol on campus by initiates, requiring a 2.0 minimum grade average for membership and establishing a Campus Chest project.

Hume, pointing out that the group would probably prefer to leave the name and symbol the same while agreeing to the other changes, favored the vote of confidence and presented a demonstration on behalf of the name and symbol.

Placing a beer can, a Coke bottle and "church key" before the Senate, he stated, "I believe and hope that FSU students have opened more Colony than beer cans with this 'symbol'."

The senator also stated that the "church key" was originally a small metal key used by soldiers to open "C" rations.

Sen. Gerry Dobson charged that the group had only agreed to these changes under "the threat and duress of our power of disapproval of their right to be on campus."

Tom McKay, president of Church Key Society, stated that although the group had agreed to the changes under pressure, they now felt that they would have to change it "so we could become a more integrated part of the campus."

McKay said that the present Senators, no matter how sincere their desire, could not guarantee that there would be no future objections to the name.

Senate President Bobby Byrd yielded the chair to Senator Pro Tem Jim Miller to speak

Interview With Director

Student Ticket Problems For Artist Series Cited

EDITOR'S NOTE: In response to a letter printed in Friday's Flambeau concerning the difficulties students have in obtaining good seats for Artist Series productions, a Flambeau reporter, Joycelyn Ward, interviewed Mrs. Kay Vernon, director of special events about the problem.

Two problems confronted students who wished to attend the Artist Series productions last year. One, with over 8,500 students enrolled in the university and only 1,629 seats in Westcott Auditorium, many students who wished to attend the more popular productions were unable to obtain tickets.

A second problem was that the number of students attending night classes which conflict with the Artist Series productions was equally increasing.

In an effort to alleviate these problems the Artist Series committee voted to present two showings of each Artist Series programs, thus providing a choice of nights and a greater seating capacity.

However, additional performances cost additional money and more funds were not available from the Student Activity Fee, therefore another method of financing had to be sought.

The committee voted to sell season tickets to the public in Tallahassee to finance the second night performances. Beginning last Spring, season tickets to the four Artist Series programs, Theodore Upman, Marcel Marceau, J. B. and the National Ballet of Canada, were sold for $10 each. Eight hundred and fifty seven tickets were sold to add $8,570 to the Artist Series budget.

TOTAL FUNDS

This brought the total amount available for the productions to $23,070, with the $14,500 from the Student Activity Fee budget.

Holders of the season tickets were allowed to choose their seat and performance night for all four programs when they purchased the tickets.

Therefore, before the box-office opens about 628 seats have been reserved for each performance. A small number of seats in the center aisle are available to students, but the center aisle holds only 470 persons, so the remaining 1,200 seats or approximately three-fourths of all the seats are on the side aisle or in the balcony.

"The best seats can move very rapidly," Mrs. Vernon emphasized. Therefore the probability of students obtaining very good seats very long after the ticket sales have begun is not good.

Within the first 15 minutes after the ticket sales for the National Ballet of Canada had begun, approximately 150 tickets were sold.

BEST SEATS

With an extremely popular production the best seats are taken immediately. The record ticket sale occurred two years ago when tickets to the Kingston Trio were sold out within three hours.

Although 857 seats are taken by season ticket holders, the money from these sales makes possible two performances and 600 additional seats that are available for students. The sacrifice for the increased quantity of seats seems to be necessarily a lessening of the quality of the seats.

The sale of season tickets seems to be the best method of financing the additional showings which are free to the students, Mrs. Vernon said. Season tickets are also being sold for next year's production.

Circus Tickets

Tickets are now on sale for the FSU "Flying High" Circus at the Athletic Ticket Office in Tully Gym.

Concert Tonight

Glee Club Honors Miss Ella Opperman

Miss Ella Scoble Opperman, dean of the School of Music from 1941 until her retirement in 1944, will be honored at the Woman's Glee Club Golden Anniversary concert at 8:15 tonight.

The 60 member choral group under the direction of Miss Betty Jane Grimm will give a four-part program, which includes selections from Brahms, Mozart and Schubert. The concert held in Opperman Music Hall celebrates the 50 years since it was first organized in September 1911, under Miss Opperman's direction.

Miss Opperman will be recognized in addresses by Dr. Wiley Housewright at the concert. A reception in Longmire Lounge will follow the concert.

The concert is free and open to the public.

Mrs. Ralph Gramling (Ruth McIlvaine) a member of the first glee club will be a guest at the concert. Mrs. Gramling participated in the organization's first concert, "Ye Old Colonial Concert." The program, which initiated the Artist Series, included such favorites as "Comin' Through the Rye," "Annie Laurie," "Juanita," and closed with "Dixie."

Miss Opperman studied piano in Berlin in 1900-01 with Ernest Jedlicka, Moritz Moskowski in Paris and organ with Alexandre Guilmant. Before joining the faculty of Florida State College for Women, she taught for five years at Wesleyan College in Macon, Ga., where she was responsible for its advanced standards in music curriculum.

Miss Opperman has remained active in all activities of the School of Music and music organizations. She has several times held national offices in music organizations.

Nominations

Nominations for Outstanding Senior Man and Woman are now being placed at the main desk of Longmire.

Selections from the nominees submitted will be made by separate ballot at the May 2 elections.

Jack Ascherl, president of the Junior Class, asked all seniors to nominate and vote for the person they feel has truly been the outstanding senior man and woman.

Nominations will be accepted until April 21, at 5 p.m.

Recommended FSU Appropriation 1.5 Million Short

Florida State University needs about $1.5 million above the appropriation recommended by the Budget Commission to the Legislature for 1961-63, according to President Gordon W. Blackwell.

Speaking of the legislators now in session, the president said, "If they believe in the importance of higher education then they will appropriate more funds to FSU than have been recommended by the Budget Commission.

"Unless the building needs of the four existing state universities are substantially met, the quality of higher education will deteriorate and many able young people will be denied the opportunity of a college education," he added.

A bill introduced in the Legislature last week asking $700,000 for a new infirmary is separate from the general budget requests.

RESERVE FUND

The infirmary proposal is a request bill granting permission to use the reserve building fund already accumulated for a new hospital and to borrow additional funds from the federal government.

The general budget recommended by the Budget Commission does not provide in full for a growing enrollment, the president said.

Plant maintenance and equipment requests are also inadequate, he said, especially for such areas as the nuclear science program and computing center.

Legislative sub-committees on appropriations met with university officials before the current session opened to discuss needs.

Although Gov. Farris Bryant and other state leaders have said they are opposed to new taxes, some legislators have indicated that "plugging up loopholes" in the state tax structure might help meet education needs.

Controversy Belters TV Claims Serling

By SALLY MOURE

"Television has achieved monumental heights when it has touched controversy," asserted Rod Serling during his informal lecture-question and answer session Tuesday night.

Warmly received by a near-capacity crowd, the TV-producer-writer defined the term controversy as "any two-sided issue important in ramifications and immediate in implications."

The media of television, he stated as an outgrowth of radio, theater, and cinema, should produce a worthwhile new art form. However, there are four elements from which it stules away--forces in relations, race, religion, and sex.

Presently, such controversial topics are dealt with through news-casts, documentaries, and drama, he said. The news-cast is the most factual, but least exciting; the documentary is television's best weapon, but suffers from the same problem of having to take one particular side, and the drama, perhaps the most effective allows suffers from presenting only one point of view

TWO SIDES

Because of its inadequacy in showing two sides of a situation, television, Serling feels, has never actually fulfilled its function--to uplift.

Only when it has touched controversy has the media achieved monumental heights, Serling stated.

"Every American artist (i.e. television writer) is allowed to take a position," but "it is wrong to make ideas safe for people." Rather, people should be safe for ideas. They should be able to se both sides of an issue. to be wrong as well as right, and ultimately right will evolve, he declared.

Answering a question from the audience, Serling suggested that the reason too few qualitative shows exist is that there is no competition for the media, and sponsors are primarily interested in the monetary value of a show.

As the most probable solution to the problem, Serling suggested that pay television will, in five years time, offer the needed competition

EDUCATIONAL

"Educational television, too, will offer competition," he answered another question. It hasn't yet explored all the approaches that could make it exciting, but it is definitely a good way of teaching and there is much talent in colleges and universities, he said.

"Good thoughtful drama can be as entertaining as anything," Serling added

Asked about the class lecture process on educational television, he implied that just as there is a personal rapport with those personalities who "visit in the home," a similar personal relationship can be established with a professor. It is merely a process of becoming accustomed to the method

In his only reference to his own show, Serling said that he does not claim "The Twilight Zone" as an art form. It is essentially a story-telling device with the function of entertaining

Following his lecture, Serling attended a reception in his honor at Longmire Lounge His appearance was sponsored by the University Lecture Series.

No Place For Religion

The Peace Corps is an imaginative, dynamic proposal. It is one of those programs that must be initiated in order to prove itself in its entirety, and to prove the workability of the various facets contained within the program.

One such facet will be the selection of personnel. This selection should be, and probably will be made with no regard for religious background of the individual whose application is accepted by the Peace Corps. This is good: the Peace Corps is not the place to take religious debates and differences for more in-fighting.

MEMBERS OF THE Peace Corps who are sent abroad for the purpose of building or strengthening parallels of more friendly existence among the nations of the world and who then take this opportunity to proselytize for any religious faith, should be automatically and instantly dismissed from Peace Corps ranks.

Missionary zeal of bygone eras is largely responsible for much of the reservoir of suspicion that surrounds the easily applied tag, "capitalist nations." The appearance of missionaries has too often been the first small wedge that pried a people loose from their own traditions and history and gave their freedom over to the dominance of a foreign imperialist power.

THE DUTIES OF those sent out on Peace Corps assignments aren't expected to include pushing brands of religious faith with the eclat expected of the tissue vender on television. Nor should enlistees of the Peace Corps be put on the spot by pressure groups that would seize every opportunity to baptize or otherwise dampen the persons of foreign nationals that won't necessarily welcome the opportunity to get wet or purchase strange items of religious paraphernalia as recommended by some pious Peace Corps recruit.

People the world over have evolved their own religions. They are likely to prefer their own manner of worship to any imports that evangelical Americans can offer. They are more interested in the American standard of living and our methods of making good usage of updated ideas in agriculture and perhaps, expanded industries of a local nature in circumstances less fortunate than our own.

MILLIONS AND millions of Americans do feel that what we enjoy in the way of goods and services is enjoyed by the grace of God. But one can never overlook the fact that the first settlers in this country, as in others, had to overcome many obstacles by sheer human musclepower. The means of livelihood were available, but it was up to the people to organize, control and improve the available resources.

When the pioneers had done their work they bowed to the greater power they called God. They believed He wished them to do for themselves. He furnished the apple but He wouldn't peel it for them.

The men and women of Africa, Asia and other areas are interested in making the most of their localities. From our Peace Corps they want education in many ways, but they are ancient cultures and they have their God in some form. Religion is one resource that the individual will find for himself. We may have a corner of sorts on material goods and the means of developing such goods, but we don't have a corner on religion.

Rules Are For Convenience

Double standards are a feature of Florida State University. Our rules and regulations apply only to those it is convenient to restrict, while others flaunt them publicly.

Not only are these regulations flaunted openly, but they are done so with the unspoken sanction of the administration. The sanction comes from those who feel that the regulations are unrealistic and do not feel powerful enough to correct them.

These same administrators, while claiming "realistic" reasons as a sanction for their own actions, seem not in the least perturbed about the eventual outcome of such double talk. Perhaps they feel that in their positions they owe no responsibility to the majority of the students. The question is: what is their responsibility?

Coma Cuts The Pork Ration

By LESLIE POWELL

"Order, order," Coma shouted. She banged the gavel on the cigarette machine, inadvordently smashing the tally keeper s thumb.

"Let's have a little respect in here, fence off tho press . . . eage them rascals. Wives, children and lobbyists out! The Soda Shop Assembly is about to convene. Fill the outer moat and tune the crossbows." In an aside to the perspiring Sergeant-at-Arms, Coma said "How's about pluggiog that keyhole with your pinkie, Sarge, there's a lobbyist oozing onto the floor."

A SPLENDID picture of representative dignity, Coma flailed away with her gavel. Her string tie flapped busily; her pin-striped coveralls were gathered modestly about her person, but mostly in the middle. Her wool hat kept tipping over her eyes, upsetting her toupee and making it slither in a manner that left onlookers wondering which face would appear next.

"Friends, tourists and homesteaders, we are gathered (applause) bere in the holy confines of the Soda Shop (wild applause) to discuss ways and means (deafening, prolonged applause). What we are chiefly interested in are the ways. We can work out laws governing the means at such future date as my palm reader advises." The crowd dissolved in utter tumult, all utterly bent on discovering new ways by any means.

"ORDER, ORDER, we'll have order or I'll cut your pork ehop allowance." To emphasize her point, Coma gaveled several heads, leaving two nr three front row delegations with abstaining delegates.

"We have business to attend to bere. For one thing, the bill to enlarge Westcott Pool and fill it with piranha is coming up. Secondly, the tea tax discussion is on the agenda. A number of self-important, pompous stuffed shirts are going to make laudatory apeeches which you will generously applaud. We have a trained nurse on hand to handle cases of extreme nausea.

"Now I would like to explain my unpopular stand on the text book issue. I know that there is resentment about crass texts that are crude enough to show national states as being of varying size. What I'd lika to say is that I don't think drawing England larger than Ireland on a world map is sufficient grounds for banning a book. After all, it isn't how much area you cover, but how you cover it. Look at the percentage of Americans of Irish extraction!

I FIND IT most encouraging that there is such enthusiasm among the freshmen this year. I hope they will work long and hard to get what they want, and I believe they are the real basis of a two party system for us. If they can put down the girly books and western novels long enough, of course.

"Now, if there are no speeches from the floor, I think I'll move, second and vote through the motion that we adjourn for lunch." Drawing her pearl handled .45 and brandishing a twelve foot horse whip, Coma carried the day.

Let's Get Serious

Critics Raise New Questions

By GERRY DOBSON

It gives a person a good feeling to see letters written in response to a column, even if they do give the opposing view; at least it shows that someone reads the things.

But there are questions raised by their criticisms Mr. Michael Gallagher says that the cliche about "federal aid leading to federal control" was again invoked. He furthermore states that although federal control, in his opinion is by no means inevitable, it might not be a bad idea, for various pressure groups such as the DAR might swoop down on our libraries . . . something which would not be possiole under federal control.

HERE WE SEE a sublime confidence in the innate goodness of the federal government, from which all blessings flow and which can do no evil. True, the DAR doesn't swing much weight with the federal government, but labor, the Negroes, and others do; federal control would just ehange the nature and names nf the pressure groups which would endanger our academic freedom. Academic freedom has done all right in the 170 years of state control.

The additional question arises: "Which government is more responsive to the wishes of the people?" The closer a government is to the people, the more responsive it is to their wishes. On this criterion alone the state governments are better able to handle and solva our educational problems. In addition, nur Constitution grants the states exclusive control over education.

IN MR. PAT deSERCEY'S letter, the sama theme emerges: "What is it that we fear from the federal government?" Well, I guess it is mainly that the people of a state would no longer be able to tailor the education they offer their children to suit their needs; while, as Mr. de Sercey points out, federal control and support of education works fine in France. France, however, is neither as largo nor as diverse as our nation.

France does not have need to consider that the various sections of the country are as different as night and day in their thinking, needs and objectives. The United States does. What may be a fine education for a New Yorker would be completely impractical for one in Mississippi. Our large population centers would cootrol the education for the entire nation instead of just for its nwn people; the rural areas might well be denied the kind of education they desire.

IS IT NOT far more practical, even "democratic", if that hackneyed phrase may be again trotted out, to allow our states, counties and even local school districts to decide what type of education best suits the needs of their people, rather than risk denomination by a benevolent super-state?

Our federal bureaucracy already controls much of our life; if we allow it to control our education as well, the people will be completely at its mercy. It is all well and good to say that students cannot be indoctrinated by the government, but one has only to look at Soviet Russia to see that this is only a forlorn hope.

Writer Knocks Pink Slips

TO THE EDITOR:

I would like to have a word with you and the Registrar's Office concerning the mid-semester progress report. These "pink slips" impress this writer as heing rather frivolous. I have two arguments against this practice

FIRST, THOSE receiving pink slips telling them they are doing poorly in their courses already know ahout their situations. This seems to be evidenced by the dread felt by some for the day the "Progress" reports are mailed. It is doubtful that there are many or any students bere so oblivious to the world that they don't even know whether they-beliefs does not accept the low a "C" in their courses. Anyone as bad off as the apparent assumptions nf those who dreamed up pink slips indicate ahouldn't be in college, let alone away from their eribs Why tell us what we already know?

Second, the processing and mailing of pink slips require both time and money that certainly could be put to better use by those in the Registrar's Office By the elimination of these rather unnecessary reports, the office personnel could tend to more essential tasks, of which there are apparently many. Or are there featherbedders in our university just making busywork so they can work longer and get paid more? Why waste time and money telling us something we already know?

In summary, let's cut out unnecessary and wasteful scare tactics. For those who wonder: Yes, I got mine.

Corps Doesn't Spread Gospel

TO THE EDITOR:

When I read Emaline Taylor's letter on the Peace Corps in last Tuesday's Flambeau, I found it very difficult to believe that it had been written by a college student for a college paper.

MISS TAYLOR'S judgment that the members of the Peace Corps must accept Jesus Christ as their Lord and Saviour or "hit hell, along with the other heathens, so hard they will have to be shot to stop bouncing" is a very good example of the type of religious thinking that definitely should not be a part of the philosophy of any Peace Corps member. Miss Taylor's "jealous God" who "wants all or nothing" should, of course, be given nothing. The purpose of the Peace Corps is not to spread the gospel, but to help develop stronger ties between the other peoples of the world and America. Probably the only way that this can be done is thru the mutual acceptance of the cultures and achievements of all the people involved

TO HELP EACH other achieve a better way of life and a better understanding of ourselves, we should never forget that the common bond of humanity is far more important than the differences in religion.

I am sure that the type of thinking such as is displayed by Miss Taylor's letter would be very much disapproved by Mr. Christ were he alive today.

OAS Needs New Teeth To Maintain Security

By DEANNA MORRIS

Putting teeth into the Organization of American States by adding a military arm is Dr. Calvin J. Billman's suggestion of one of the things we must do to stop the spread of Castroism in Latin America.

AT THE MOMENT, the United States is in an extremely delicate position in relation to the rest of the hemisphere. It is openly regarded with suspicion, and historically, the Latin American countries have reason for their suspicions. The United States now has control of Guantanamo Base and the Canal Zone—two small pieces of real estate which have no authentic security or strategic value to us in an age of atomic weapons and guided missiles. If the United States were to turn these countries back over to their original owners, however, it would lose face in the hemisphere. There is apparently a solution to this and it seems to tie in closely with a military attachment to OAS.

According to Billman, all sovereign non-Communist states of the Western hemisphere would be members of the OAS with the control of a military arm under the civilian foreign ministers, with each state having but one vote on all matters. The military would be formed and maintained oo a quota basis as determined by the Council of Foreign Ministers.

UNDER THIS NEW type of OAS, set up along NATO lines, there would then be a demand for bases and training centers. The United States could demonstrate its sincerity of concern for hemispheric peace by relinquishing control of the two areas to the direct sovereignty of the OAS. Billman suggests that Guantanamo could be used as an OAS naval base and the Canal Zone could accommodate the army and the air force.

The idea that such a military force could actively combat and forestall the spread of Castroism or any other doctrine that was displeasing to the majority of the member states, might breed a degree of uncertainty in the minds of the rest of the Hispanic-American countries. There will have to be a great deal of diplomatic maneuvering to induce the other nations in the hemisphere to support such a move. The OAS will have to prove the strength and necessity of such a program.

Is such an idea practical? It has never been tried before, but the United States is now finding itself in a position where it is forced to try new methods of maintaining hemispheric security The idea is worth a try as long as it remains a project of a sovereign OAS and not a United States backed and directed task force.

Attitude Can Do More Harm Than Good

TO THE EDITOR:

The note to the Editor entitled "Peace Corps Must Accept Jesus Christ" requires some sort of an answer, and no doubt will receive many. I find it difficult to comment as it is obvious that Miss Taylor is sincere in her belief, and I respect her feelings as far as they concern herself. Where her personal belief may be good, her manner of presentation is extremely harmful and dangerous. This is like the missionary work of the past In many areas of the world the Christian missionaries have done much more harm than they have done good. It is only recently that many mission groups have come to realize this and have changed their methods.

BELIF AND ACCEPTANCE of Jesus Christ should certainly be no deterent towards a persons' acceptance by the Peace Corps. Probably a sincere belief in Jesus and what be himself believed in would be a great advantage, but if the person who holds these 're getting grades above or be-right and correctness, under the circumstances, of contrary beilofs held by the people among who he or she is working, that person will do the Peace Corps and the United States more harm than good.

Nowhere in her statement does Miss Taylor mention that the Peace Corps member who has proper belief and acceptance of Jesus Christ, would in any way bring this belief to the attention of those with whom that person is working. If this silence is her intent, that is fine. However, anyone who is as articulate and enthusiastic as Miss Taylor on this subject would probably not be able to hold himself in for two years while surrounded and living with "heathens." The minute such ethnocentrism was expressed in the terms Miss Taylor uses, or anything approaching those terms, the value of the person expessing them to the Peace Corps and the United States go down immeasureably.

WORKING FOR TWO or more years among people with different beliefs there will be numerous occasions in which a person would be able to express his beliefs in a neutral fashion without presenting any hint of criticism or disapproval of other religious beliefs If over the many months spent living with these people, the Peace Corps member's beliefs become known and if he has done his best to understand and to present to the people what he was sent there to present, his example would do more towards presenting Christ in a favorable light than if he had spoken out as does Miss Taylor.

One parting comment, there is no such thing as an "Asiatic race."

Usage Of Sic Is Questioned

TO THE EDITOR:

Your use of the parenthetical insertion, "sic", seems to be reserved for the various letters which you receive and publish. I trust that the use of the word is to direct the reader's attention to what is anomalous in the original, rather than to impugn that writer. If such be the case, I think it not totally unfair that you he requested to acknowledge the singular spolling of the word "consensus" as it appeared on the first page of the edition dated 11 April, 1961 Quis habet aures audiendi, audiat!

Sharp Shootin'

By Ben Sharp

Flambeau Sports Editor

"The Best We've Had"

Baseball coach Danny Litwhiler pitches the highest praise at his Seminoles in a matter-of-fact tone of voice. His casualness emphasizes the point.

"This is the best ball club we've ever had," the coach says simply.

"We've had better individual ball players," Litwhiler continued, "but we've never had a ball club that was as well-balanced as this one."

This is particularly high praise coming from a coach who has led Florida State to 119 victories against 49 defeats including four NAA District playoff and one College World Series.

The Seminoles have high aspirations of adding one more to each of these categories and they have a good chance of realizing these ambitions.

"I believe we can get there and I believe we can win at Gainesville (site of the District playoffs)," says Litwhiler confidently. Of course, Omaha (site of the World Series) is a different thing. "If we can win there but it will be tough. It's easy to lose a game here. You can lose one and I don't know of anyone who has ever won the series."

Litwhiler feels that the road trip to Lakeland and Miami this weekend will decide who receives the bid to the district meet.

"Florida Southern and Miami will determine whether we'll get to go out."

"The thing that makes the team strong is the bench. We can back into the bench like the Yankees and get someone who can do the job as well as the boys on the field. The team on the bench has won five or six games for us this season.

"To baseball, they say that if you are strong up the middle, you can win."

Litwhiler feels that his middle is particularly fit. Catcher Buddy Daigle is strong behind the plate and the coach feels that he has the potential for being a major league ball player.

The second base-shortstop combination Litwhiler terms as the best double play combination in college baseball. This is the first time that we've had a real double play combination." Jack Dull and Roger Zimmerman back down these two slots.

In the centerfield spot, Bob Madison and Gary Elliot alternate. Both of these boys go after the ball and can really hit."

The Seminole mound staff is strong. Florida State has three capable starting pitchers, Frank Davis, Jim Daniel, and Ray McShane, which is more than the usual college pitching staff. Behind these starters are three relief hurlers, Jack Ross, Frank Echols, and Jerry Turner.

Besides the strong middle, the Seminoles also possess power on the outside. Doug Walker, Neil Martin, Jim White and George Ferguson, are power hitters in the "outside" positions.

All the way around, Florida State looks good enough to play well in any collegiate competition. Danny Litwhiler's teams are nationally respected by opponents and Litwhiler says this is because he's had.

"The more I look at this team, the more I know that this is the best ball club we've had."

Two approaches to the "man's deodorant" problem

If a man doesn't mind shaving under his arms, he will probably find a woman's roll-on satisfactory. Most men, however, find it simpler and surer to use Mennen Spray Deodorant. Mennen Spray mist was made to get through to the skin, where perspiration starts. And made to work all day. More men use Mennen Spray than any other deodorant. How about you? 64c and $1.00 plus tax

Golfers Meet Fla. Southern In Next Meet

The Florida State Seminole golf team meets Florida Southern College Tuesday at the Capital City Country Club.

The Seminoles will be trying to get back on the victory trail after having their 14-game victory streak snapped by Louisiana State University in their last outing.

The LSU golfers trimmed the Seminoles 21½ to 5½ at their home course. John Sample, medalist from LSU, was the leading golfer with two under par. Florida State lost all three foresomes.

The Seminoles will be trying for the 15 win against Florida Southern. The Florida State season record stands at 14 wins against a pair of losses. The only other FSU loss of the season was at the hands of the University of Florida. The Gators will be Tribe back in the first match of the season. The return match for those two arch rivals will be in two weeks.

Florida State has entered three tournaments and done creditably so far, according to golf coach Bill Odeneal.

"The golf team had done well so far this year," said Coach Odeneal, "but we intend to do a lot better."

The competition between Downing Gray and Frank Malara has been one of the high spots of the season," added Odeneal.

Compete In Piedmont Relays

Thinclads Go To SC

The Seminole tracksters, having opened the season to Southeastern Conference foes, a 9 point loss, Louisiana ing lost their first dual meet of State University, compete tomorrow in the Piedmont Relays in Greenville, South Carolina.

Coach Mike Long hopes that the Florida State cindermen, who have won the Piedmont Relays for the past two years will put on a good performance, and he feels that the Piedmont Relays will get the Tribe in shape for the April 22 meet with the longtime rival, Florida.

Top teams entered in the Relays are Clemson, Furman, The Citadel, South Carolina, Tennessee, and Davidson. Florida State, Furman, The Citadel, and South Carolina scored unofficial points in the Florida Relays with 35 track teams assembled at Gainesville for one of the biggest meets in the South. FSU placed sixth; Furman, seventh; The Citadel; ninth; and South Carolina; thirteenth.

The Tribesmen are expected to do well in the relay events, especially the sprint and mile relays. Points should add up heavily in the broad jump, the high jump, the shot put, the discus, and the high hurdles for the Seminoles.

Leading Seminole contenders will be Terry Long, a junior from Tallahassee, who won the low hurdles in the LSU meet, almost setting a new school record; senior Kent Mills who holds the Florida State record in the 2-mile run with a time of 9.31.4; Steve Long, Terry's older brother, holding the school record in the high jump at the 6-3 mark; and Herb Kraft who has tied the school broad jump record of 23-3½ twice this season.

With a 4-1 season mark in dual competition, FSU is bracing for several team meets, including the Penn Relays.

Seminole Netters Encounter Rollins, Hurricanes On Road

By SAM McCALL
Flambeau Sports Writer

The Florida State tennis team goes on the road this weekend with matches against Rollins and top-ranking Miami. The Seminoles sporting a 11-1 record take on the highly-touted Rollins team today at Winter Park and then journey to Miami for their match Saturday.

Miami recently broke the national record of 83 consecutive wins as they defeated the Florida squad. The Hurricanes are top-ranking nationally and have every chance of becoming the NCAA championship holder. They are presently in their fourth season of being undefeated.

They have four nationally ranked men who hold the top four positions. John Karabaez at the two slot is a former member of the Junior Davis Cub team. They are coached by the internationally famous Dale Lewis formerly of the Big Ten.

Coach Hofcomb on the match said "We are up mentally for it and if the boys have a tremendous day we can expect an upset —and that's what we're shooting for."

Florida State has never beaten Miami or Rollins but the Seminoles have come very close to downing Rollins in their last three matches. Hofcomb in commenting on the Rollins match said "We have the depth to win this match and I am quite confident that the boys will take this one.

Tribe Invades Southern, UM; Seeking NCAA Bid

By BILL VERIGAN
Assistant Sports Editor

Florida State's sixth ranked baseball team makes a state tour which will take it to Florida Southern and Miami in order to clinch an NCAA tournament bid.

Florida State was ranked as the number six team in the nation by Collegiate Baseball's monthly poll which is selected by college baseball coaches. The Seminoles presently hold a 14-4 record and are aiming for their fifth NCAA bid in six years.

Florida Southern's Moccasins, an entry in the District NCAA tourney last year, have knocked off the Seminoles in the last three meetings of the two teams, and the tribe will be seeking revenge on Friday and Saturday. FSU will be getting its first opportunity to operate under the lights on Friday night.

Miami, winner of the Florida Intercollegiate Conference title last year, is the second opponent for FSU on Monday and Tuesday during its jaunt around the state. The Hurricanes fell to the Semunoles all four times the two opponents met last year.

Bobby Hughes is the mound ace for Miami, and he had a 14-game winning streak snapped only this week by Florida Southern. The rest of the starting battery consists of Pete Marchegiano, brother of former heavyweight champion, Rocky Marciano.

Leading FSU hitters include Doug Walker, Neil Martin and Jack Dull. Walker has the leading average with a .397 clip and has the most total bases with 40. Martin, who plays right field, is hitting .368 and has the most hits with 28. Dull has a .339 average and has driven in 18 runs.

Jim Daniel, Frank Davis, and Ray McShane are the Seminoles' winningest starting pitchers. Daniels has a 4-1 record for the season to lead the starters. McShane and Davis both have 3-1 records.

THE DEAN YOU SAVE MAY BE YOUR OWN

Now in the waning days of the school year when the hardest heart grows mellow and the very air is charged with memories, let us pause for a moment and pay tribute to that overworked and underappreciated campus figure, your friend and mine, the dean of students.

Policeman and confessor, shepherd and seer, warden and oracle, pincushion and pal, the dean of students is by far the most enigmatic of all academicians. How can we understand him? Well sir, perhaps the best way is to take an average day in the life of an average dean. Here, for example, is what happened last Thursday to Dean Killjoy N. Damper of Duluth A and M.

At 6 a.m. he woke, dressed, lit a Marlboro, and went up on the roof of his house to remove the statue of the Founder which had been placed there during the night by high-spirited undergraduates.

At 7 a.m. he lit a Marlboro and walked briskly to the campus. (The Dean had not been driving his car since it had been placed on the roof of the girls dormitory by high-spirited undergraduates.)

where it stood there by high-spirited undergraduates

At 7:45 a.m. he arrived on campus, lit a Marlboro, and climbed the bell tower to remove his secretary who had been placed there during the night by high-spirited undergraduates.

At 8 a.m. he reached his office, lit a Marlboro, and met with Dorthea Sigafoos, editor of the student paper. Young Sigafoos had been writing a series of editorials urging the United States to annex Canada. When his editorials had evoked no response, he had taken matters into his own hands. Accompanied by his sports editor and two copy readers, he had gone over the border and conquered Manitoba. With great patience and several hundred Marlboro Cigarettes, the Dean persuaded young Sigafoos to give Manitoba back. Young Sigafoos, however, insisted on keeping Winnipeg.

At 9 a.m. the Dean lit a Marlboro and met with Erwin J. Bender, president of the local Sigma Chi chapter, who came to report that the Delt house had been put on top of the Sigma Chi house during the night by high-spirited undergraduates.

At 10 a.m. the Dean lit a Marlboro and went to umpire an intramural softball game on the roof of the law school where the campus baseball diamond had been placed during the night by high-spirited undergraduates.

At 12 noon the Dean had a luncheon meeting with the president of the university, the bursar, the registrar, and the chairman of the English department at the bottom of the campus swimming pool where the faculty dining room had been placed during the night by high-spirited undergraduates. Marlboros were passed after lunch, but not lit owing to the dampness.

At 2 p.m., back in his office, the Dean lit a Marlboro and received the Canadian minister of war who said that unless young Sigafoos gave back Winnipeg, Canada would march. Young Sigafoos was summoned and agreed to give back Winnipeg if he could have Saskatoon. The Canadian minister of war at first refused, but finally agreed after young Sigafoos placed him on the roof of the mining and metallurgy building.

At 3 p.m. the Dean lit a Marlboro and met with a delegation from the student council who came to present him with a set of matched luggage in honor of his fifty years' service as dean of students. The Dean promptly packed the luggage with his clothing and Marlboros and fled to Utica, New York, where he is now in the aluminum siding game. © 1961 Max Shulman

Counseling Center Works With All

By MARTHA ROBERTS
Flambeau Staff Writer

Working with different personalities and numerous problems is no easy task, but it's all in a day's work at the Counseling Center of Florida State University.

One of the primary functions of the Counseling Center is to provide broad general counseling services for all FSU students in a centralized location. This involves interviewing, testing through facilities of the University Test Service, test interpretation, and referral.

The Center, located on the West-cott third floor, operates under the Division of Student Welfare. It is headed by Dr. G. Harold Massey and O. Bert Powell, assistant director. In addition to the regular office personnel, there are several teaching faculty members who aid in student program planning.

IMPORTANT PART

Vocational counseling is an important part of the counseling program. This service provides information helpful to students in achieving a vocational sense of direction, co-ordineting closely with that of educational advisement, explained Powell.

The Center maintains an Occupational Library for student use. It consists of a scientifically arranged occupational filing system containing information on almost any occupation.

This information includes such aspects as the training required and the salary to be expected. The library is kept up to date and new information is constantly added.

BASIC STUDIES

Another function of the Counseling Center is the coordination of an effective program of educational advisement and counseling for students of the Division of Basic Studies.

At the present time folders are being made for some 2000 students who have applied for admission to FSU next semester. Faculty advisors will be assigned for these students through the Center, which is instrumental in the planning and promotion of the student Orientation program, according to Dr. Massey.

Another of the Counseling Center's projects is the development of an effective Foreign Student program. In addition, through the Director of Counseling, contact is maintained with other counseling and clinical services on the campus so as to coordinate counseling resources available to all students.

In dealing with student adjustment to the university, the Center is equipped to offer counseling on any perplexing problem, whether personal, academic or vocational, concluded Powell.

Humanities Class Changes To Take Effect Next Year

by JOAN ABBOTT
Assistant News Editor

Changes in the Humanities 201 and 202 courses are being planned for next year because of the experience and difficulties of presenting the television course.

One half-hour program a week, to be repeated several times during the week, will be filmed for television presentation as a supplement to the regular three-hour a week classroom course, Dr. Sarah Herndon, chairman of humanities, said.

This parallel program will be used for things that can't be done in the classroom, she emphasized. The program will include talks by specialists, for dramatizing course work and for creating an immediacy that is impossible just through the classroom. As an example of the latter she cited the program's possible use in filming a symphony concert, or in showing films on Tallahassee architecture to supplement units on architecture.

FILMED PROGRAMS

The programs will be filmed first semester on tape. Some of the programs that Dr. Anna Forbes Liddell did will be reused.

Major difficulties that the programs have encountered have included the problem of time. Not enough time has been allowed the television lecturer the semester before to prepare his material, she said. This semester Dr George Yost, who is the television lecturer, is barely able to have the lectures prepared far enough ahead of time to have them mimeographed, she said.

"It has also been difficult to get visuals that are truly satisfactory," Dr. Herndon said. Materials have provided problems, for example slides are not always the right size to function properly on the studio equipment.

However, the major obstacle to the televised lectures is that for so much of the material, discussion is almost imperative, she said. The use of television classes would probably be more satisfactory in courses where the material is more factual and definite, more objective, she added.

ASKED TO EXPERIMENT

"We were asked to experiment two or three years ago," she said, adding. "We tried." "I don't think we proved anything," she said "I'm not sure that general education is the best place to use mass methods," she concluded. Juniors and seniors are more able to be self-directing as a course like this would call for, she added.

Irregardless of the use of television some way of handling students more efficiently is going to have to be devised, she emphasized.

Television lecturer, Dr. Yost concurred with Dr. Herndon in the fact that a major problem involved in the television course is the lack of opportunity for discussion. "We tried to answer that point by scheduling the third hour for discussion," he said. However, that hour has material of its own to be covered and "they're not still warm on the subject" from the lectures. The problem of not being able tn ask questions is largely one of an "unused privilege that has been taken away.

"Part of this problem is due to the rather sfrange scheduling situation," he added, "under which for some students the class comes before, others after and some in the middle of the television lectures. This puts a strain on both the students and the classroom teachers."

The lack of a personal relationship with the professor was also blamed for student discontent with the program. But off-setting this because the lecturer looks directly into the television camera "a fictional personal connection" is established, be said.

However, the major problem seems to be that "everybody is conditioned to a mood of relaxation" when they are seated before a television set, he added. "Entertainment is going to come out of the box," and when it doesn't the student feels "hostile," Dr. Yost asserted. "A thing that has been your pleasure has suddenly become your discipline," be added.

There is nothing in the television room to create an atmosphere of attentive tension, he said. Students must almost develop a "new set of neural patterns" or psychological responses to television before it can become successful as a teaching tool, he added. In a television course a lot more responsibility is thrown on the students and watching the program becomes largely a matter of self-discipline.

NEW MEDIUM

Dr. Yost also pointed out that television education as a new medium required the development of new techniques. The tension between technical requirements of a performance and the intellectual requirements, both of v exacting can detract from the show.

The use of only two cameras on the show is limiting, be said, in that the professor cannot move with the freedom of the classroom.

Television is so new as a educational method that no one has learned exactly how to best use it, Dr. Herndon added. "You have to learn how to use it — this takes time," she said. "The people teaching humanities on television have done a wonderful job," she complemented.

Students Give Views On TV

Students apparently learn less through televised lectures than regular classroom lectures.

This was the consensus of opinion in one discussion session of Humanities 202 Several students labeled the programs a "waste of time."

One student dissented, he commented that his classroom teacher the previous semester had been a poor teacher and that he personally, because of this, was learning more from the lectures

"Not interesting," "too impersonal," "can't ask questions" and "poor television reception," were general comments made by the students.

"I find it difficult to appreciate Picasso's blue period, or any art in black and white," one student commented, pointing out a major weakness in the medium.

"I think that the TV lectures in Humanities are a waste of time and money. The subject is so interesting, and so much could be gained through discussion three times a week rather than just once. All that I have learned has been in 'once a week' class periods of discussion," a student said.

Another student criticized that there was no link between the lectures and the discussion period "The lectures are not meant as entertainment yet it is quite boring to sit and stare at the same scene—with no discussion or participation," the student added.

Another student complained that often the rooms supposedly set aside for television classes were locked, in use as a study hall or occupied by students watching other programs.

Ice Delivers Year's Last 'Last Lecture'

By PATSY GUTHRIE
Flambeau Staff Writer

Dr. Jackson Ice deplored the "present separation of the sciences and the humanities" and "of fact and value" in the fourth and last of this year's Mortar Board Last Lecture series Thursday night.

Ice

Ice, of the Philosophy Department, entitled his lecture "Seductive Logic and the Abduction of Values" or "Dog on a Cold Stone Floor"

He made the diagnosis that "while amazing source springs bubble up within our centers of learning, our culture seems in a state of drought"

Dr Ice explained that the lecture arose "out of a felt need to restore a lost balance between thinking and valuing as essential and complementary activities in the life of man."

"The humanities must keep restoring to the sciences an image of human nature which the sciences keep repudiating and neglecting, ignoring or of which they are ignorant," Dr Ice proposed.

He stressed that the university community needs "specialization, but not isolation," and described the common quest of concerned persons as the use of the best methods each knows to understand the world "in order to enhance human life morally, aesthetically, and intellectually."

FACT AND VALUE

Referring to the schism between fact and value as "specious and fatal," Dr. Ice declared, "what the universe has put together, let no man put asunder."

Dr Ice pointed an accusing finger at the philosophical discipline of Logical Positivism as one of the many factors producing the split.

He was critical of Logical Positivism's claims that truth is a property of language and only statements which are either purely analytical or verificable by actual sense experience can be true.

But he labeled as "the most damaging characteristic of Positivism" its belief that "all value-statements are noncognitive, nonfactual, and merely report feelings, emotions, and attitudes."

He expressed concern for the amelioralinn of communicative lines between departments by a philosophy "which claims that all of the humanities essentially are involved in talking nonsense."

EMOTIVIST'S THEORY

He countered that the "Emotivist's theory defaults by over-simplification," pointing out that "in value-judgments we have good reason to believe we are saving something which is factually true apart from emotive and persuasional considerations."

For example, the statement "Logic is valuable" is based on reasons which involve more than subjective reportings of personal likes, he said.

"The whole point of value studies is to be able to train ourselves not to give our assent or disapproval to statements unless we have good, i.e., factually based, reasons for believing them to be in some sense true or correct or justifiable," Dr. Ice continued.

Distinguishing between "the pole of cognitive valuation" and "the subjective, emotive pole in our experience," Dr. Ice remarked that the former may even become opposed to the latter as aesthetic sensitivity and moral character develops.

Dr. Ice admitted that " a discussion of values is difficult, since many adults suffer from arrested development, and their value-judgment, if these occur at all, remain purely emotive on the infantile level"

OTHER ATTITUDES

Dr. Ice observed that other attitudes which prevent an understanding of the complementary roles which science and humanities play in the life of the academic community are those tending to make science "isolationistic instead of contextualistic."

He designated the claim that science seeks knowledge for its own sake apart from any of its uses or misuses as "a strange and near-sighted belief."

While admitting that an interest in knowledge for knowledge's sake can denote "the will to judge critically in an atmosphere of freedom without personal distortion," Dr. Ice rejected "a game to see who can collect the greatest number of useless knowledge-facts."

He emphasized, "It is fallacinus to maintain that science is free of value judgments," pointing out that "on whatsoever problem we embark, value is the directing thought."

VALUE-CHARACTER

"By emphasizing the value-character of truth we are cognizant of the fact that, primarily, our concern is with the study of the efficacies and advantages of events, with their occurrences, in relation to us," he continued.

"Indeed, the value-free method claimed by some scientists is itself a value, and in advocating it, they express their valuation of it," Dr. Ice commented.

Prior to the lecture, Dr. Ice was presented an award for placing second in the Albert Schweitzer Education Foundation essay competition by Dr. Robert Miller, head of the Philosophy Dept.

Dean Approves IFC Proposal

Recommended punishments from the Inter-Fraternity Council, concerning the Phi Delta Theta "pig party" have been approved by the administration, reports Dean of Men Donald Loucks.

The stipulations of the IFC recommendations are.

1. IFC will send a letter to the fraternity condemning the party.

2. Letters of apology are to be sent from Phi Delta Theta to the administration and the Panhellenic Association.

3. The guilty fraternity will not be permitted to have any organized social functions for the rest of the semester with the exception of April 28-30 (their weekend) and Circus Weekend.

Although the punishment had Dr. Loucks' approval, he indicated his doubts as to the actual occurrence of a "pig party."

"A thorough investigation revealed that several brothers and pledges attended this party with their asual dates," he said. "It is highly doubtful that any of these FSU coeds appreciated being lumped into a so-called "pig classification," he added.

However, in relation to why he had approved the punishment, Dr. Loucks indicated, that regardless of the implications favoring the fraternity's innocence, there were certain negative connotations.

Prior to the party, according to the Phi Delta Theta president, as explained to the dean there had been suggestions advocating a hillbilly party in which the fraternity men would make themselves ugly. This suggestion was foregone, said the president. The result was a party in which there was dancing and group singing, conducted like any party, he further added.

"I'm fully in accord that they deserved what they received. I also feel that we have unnecessarily damaged other fraternities, that the proper thing to have done would have been to bring this information to the proper parties," Dr. Loucks said in conclusion.

Special feature of the concert will be Ronald L. Waln, flute and bassoon instructor of the School of Music, who will be guest conductor.

Waln's appearance with the Concert Band is his first as a conductor in Tallahassee. He will conduct the first half of the program and Robert T. Braunagel, conductor of the Concert Band, will present the last half of the program.

Selections for this concert include "Break Forth, O Beauteous Heavenly Light," "O Sacred Head Now Wounded," and "Now Thank We All Our God" by William Latham, Couperin-Milhaud's "Overture and Allegro," "Irish Tune from County Derry" by Percy Grainger, "March to the Scaffold" by Hector Berlioz, Richard Wagner's "Elsa's Procession to the Cathedral," "L'Arlesienne — Suite de Concert" by Georges Bizet, "Fantasy on American Sailing Songs" by Clare Grundman, and "Chester" by William Schuman.

Hornbeck, a role suggesting H. L. Mencken who covered the trial as a journalist; and Sammy Kilman, who plays Matthew Harrison Brady (Bryan).

FSCW Returns To FSU

Before and After

"EITHER CHANGE IT . . . or put the ivy back" was the reaction of a student to the exposing of the legend over the entrance to Westcott Building by the removal of ivy. A recent visitor noted the inscription and mused: "Well, it is, isn't it?" The inscription reads FLORIDA STATE COLLEGE FOR Women. (Flambeau Photo by Lloyd Hines.)

"Florida State College For Women" the gone, but apparently not to be forgotten official title for FSU, has made a sneaky reappearance onto the FSU campus.

It now announces the past of Florida State University in big, bold, stone lettering, from the arch over the main door of Westcott.

Last week, workers, diligently waterproofing mortar joints on the front of Westoctt, found it necessary to remove much of the ivy, which has been the traditional trim on the building for many years.

The "face lifting" resulted in some "bead lowering" when under the ivy, was revealed this haunting title.

Rod Shaw, FSU business manager, reports that the lettering is part of the cast stone arch above the door and being part of the building it cannot be removed.

What then, is to be done? The ivy will grow back in three or four years, says Shaw.

Senate Gets New Budgets

Through its own desire, student government has plunged headlong into the responsibility for budgeting $368,782 of student activity money. Whether or not this student group is capable of handling this responsibility will depend entirely on the caliber of students who are elected to next year's senate.

WHERE THIS MONEY came from is simply explained. Florida State has its own division of what the state legislature defines as student activity funds. Here, we have two budgets, the University Activities Budget and the Student Activities Budget. The funds in the University Activities Budget have previously been allocated through the office of Dean R. R. Oglesby, Dean of Students. Since the Dean's office has already completed the study for budgeting for the incoming year, the senate will only vote on the budget this year.

The changeover from a university official to the student government; brings the funds out of the hands of an individual and into the hands of an agency. The responsibility for budgeting an additional $284,259 will first be tested by the performance of the senators who are up for election this spring. They are faced with a problem of fairly serving all those activities now included within the two separate budgets as well as making wise changes in the overall budgeting plan. Being students, they are most naturally going to be faced with certain personal prejudices which they will have to overcome.

THE STUDENT SENATE will increase its measure of influence on campus organizations and activities by the simple fact of controlling the purse strings. Because of the fact that students are controlling the money, they will be faced with both increased work and more rigorous criticism.

Students will take more of a hand in deciding such things as the programs offered by the university artists series, the student artist series and the university lecture series. Students will make the decisions regarding the amount of money to be allocated to intercollegiate sports. This is one area where their judgement might place them in the position of becoming entirely unpopular with the alumni and other football fans. But, after all, who has more right to decide student activities than the students themselves?

Their ability to do a good job remains to be proved. If past student senate budgeting of the smaller sum is indicative of the ability of this group, then students can be assured that the senate will at least do a responsible and fair job.

It's Guilt By Association

Why should the legislature waste time regulating the commercial aspects of the selling of liquor? Whether full page ads appear in daily newspapers or not isn't likely to affect the selling of alcoholic beverages.

Whether a person buys too much alcohol is something that will be most difficult to legislate. And the steady boozers will get their liquor rations regardless of the advertisements or lack of them.

THE CORNER LIQUOR store is a much more attractive inducement to the customer than a page of black print. Prices are much more outrageous in black and white than when quoted in the presence of shelf after shelf of attractively bottled spirits.

The national advertisers will continue to buy space in nationally distributed publications . . . often in beautifully arranged, colorful settings. They sell their product on the basis of "good taste, sportsmanship, good humour, courtesy, diplomacy," or a thousand and one other flattering ideas that are calculated to appeal to the individual. How can you stop national advertising that comes into the state between the respected covers of family magazines?

IF THE IDEA is to get ride of the B-Girls, because they pursue their careers where liquor flows, it is difficult to see how this aim ties in with liquor advertising. The B-Girls are probably like most drinkers . . . they have a corner shop somewhere if they really care for the stuff. There isn't much point in their reading the ads. Probably the best way to get the B-Girls out of the way is to enforce strictly, the existing laws pertaining to them. Use some of the revenue from liquor sales that will continue in legalized areas where funds do collect for state to beef up law agencies. Up police salaries to a level that doesn't leave so much room for graft and protection money. Abolishing a source of income to newspapers isn't going to abolish the sale of liquor or stop the B-Girl racket.

What's With New York City?

What's with the City of New York? Officially it is behaving as if it never heard of many a vaunted American right.

For many years the young people in the Greenwich area have gathered in the park to sing folksongs and enjoy the companionship of other young people, most of whom cannot afford too much more than gratis, self-supplied entertainment. Suddenly, with a change in city officials, this gathering in the park has become "verboten." The first person to pluck one string on a guitar is likely to find himself humming from the impact of a nightstick. Why?

BECAUSE THE BATTLE is on in the Greenwich area. The city has its heart set on ripping out the old Greenwich settlement and replacing it with the antiseptic hatcheries so fashionable in middle class America. Because the people of Greenwich have taken their fight for the grubby bastion of individuality to city hall. Because these people have dared stand up to stuffed shirt authorities that have forgotten how it feels to be young—if they ever knew—they are paying in privileges.

The police, the fire department, the vice-squads, the hum-drum mother hubbards have begun a full scale drive to route the denizens of the village and to replace them with the of-a-kind sterling young white collar couples with two kids and a loaned company car.

THESE ARE THE people who will raise their kids in a four room apartment and never wonder why they can't use a park. They probably are in favor of closing all the coffee houses in Greenwich under antiquated fire rules that are kept on the books just for use against recalcitrant eitizens.

New Yorkers like to point their fingers at small towns and chortel about the 'hicks in the sticks." They must know of what they speak: they're acting like a small town.

Poland Withdraws From Jail

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is a letter to the Community Service Committee of the San Jose State College, California, written by Jefferson Poland, a former student of FSU who was involved in the sit-in demonstrations last March 17.

DEAR SIRS!

The danger of being beaten by other white prisoners and/or guards has caused me to leave the Leon County Jail after serving only seven days. Under these circumstances I cannot in good faith allow the student body to pay my travel expenses. Please stop fund-raising and donate any funds which have been collected to the Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee, 197a Auburn Avenue, N.E., Atlanta, Georgia.

WHILE IN SAN Jose I had hoped that at least three white sit-inners would choose to serve sentences rather than let the Negro community pay their fines. When I arrived in Tallahassee I found that, of four white students involved, two would allow payment of their fines. The other two, Derek Lawler and I, were jailed on 10 April.

We were immediately urged to leave the jail by ACLU attorney Rosen; Rev. Speed, a local Negro leader; and Bill Larkins, chairman of Tallahassee CORE (Congress of Racial Equality—a sit-in group) and student body president of the local Negro university. We refused.

AT FIRST WE thought we would be able to live safely in the bull pen with 28-odd white criminals. Altho most of them avoided the "Jew-niggers," we did make three or four friends. On the night of the 12th, after we had all been locked in four-man cells, a prisoner in another cell began threatening to beat us up when the doors were unlocked at dawn. He didn't carry thru, but friends informed us he was sick and would probably make good on his threat when he felt better. On the morning of the 14th, I began a hunger strike against segregation at Tallahassee Woolworth's. Friends informed me that one of the guards, a Mr. Chears, makes a practice of taking rebellious prisoners away from the bull pen and clubbing them, and that I could expect the same treatment if I struck more than a few days. On the 15th we learned that several prisoners had been interrogated on Wednesday when both Negro boys and white girls were among our visitors, and that they would give us a "blanket party" if the same thing happened Sunday. A blanket party is when several prisoners throw a blanket over someone's head and then beat and kick him, usually with unconsciousness.

AT THIS POINT Lawler decided to give us to the wishes of the local Negro leaders and let them pay his fine. This broke my determination to stay. Lawler was leaving, my other friends expected to be released within a week or so. They urged me to leave, arguing that a blanket party could leave one ruptured, blinded or otherwise maimed. I found that I simply do not have the courage to face such a possibility, at least not alone. I was released on 16 April.

I am grateful to the student body and faculty of SJS for their support and encouragement. I regret that I have failed them.

Most sincerely,
JEFFERSON POLAND

An Epidemic Comes To FSU

TO THE EDITOR:

Within the next few weeks an annual epidemic will rear its head again on the campus of FSU. You may even have seen preliminary signs at this early date.

THE FIRST SYMPTOMS appeared just a few days ago when the Student Party met in convention. There were preliminary chills and an occasional bead of perspiration. But these soon passed away and the nominated candidates, as well as the delegates, retired to ponder what had taken place. Those who met defeat could not afford this leisure, however, as their increased anxiety may have indicated.

What now of the epidemic is, of course, the question that comes to mind. My observations would lead me to believe that all is far from dormant. Instead I would assert that the undercurrents could soon erupt into the epidemic that will seize us all. This being the one and only — political fever.

FURTHER, IF WE are to avoid crisis in the seizure of this fever, we must be prepared and informed as to what will soon take place. It is most simply defined as the Spring Firetown. And its result after the fever has passed, we most certainly hope will be better student government.

As to preparation for the week of campaigning, I would suggest the following:

1.) Three large doses of objectivity—morning, noon and night

2.) One large white tablet daily for immunization, as well as prudence in our elections.

3.) One teaspoonful of sympathy daily for the candidates who will wage the campaigns. And so that we may be mindful of the sincerity of all.

What Was Advocated By Miss Taylor?

TO THE EDITOR:

I seem to be somewhat confused as to the issue involved in Miss Taylor's letter concerning the Peace Corps. Is she simply pointing out that she believes that any Peace Corps volunteer who has not put his faith in Jesus Christ is doomed to Hell? If so, is the same thing said to the members of the Army, University faculty or Women's Missionary Society? The discussion of the Peace Corps is not a matter of the salvation of the individual's soul, but of whether the organization would be able to sell our way of life.

DOES SHE ADVOCATE the formation of a missionary society rather than a Peace Corps? Since there is no national church to administer such a movement, who would organize it?

Or did she mean that the Peace Corps should encourage its individual members to attempt to win converts to their faith? How will she react when a member of a religious group which differs greatly from hers begins to convert "the Asiatic race"?

OR DID SHE merely intend to convey that she is opposed to the Peace Corps—period.

Whatever she meant, I feel that her opinion should be respected even though I might disagree. But though I respect her opinion when I don't know what she means?

Or maybe she didn't mean it? Maybe she intentionally didn't make a "point" because her point was to satirize the beliefs of others.

What Will Happen If You Don't Pay?

By LESLIE POWELL

Are you a graduating senior? Unless you've paid your $5.00 diploma fee previously, or intend paying it before this Friday (April 21), you had better make that "graduating senior, tentatively."

Because you may be on almost-graduate if you goof around and fail to pay the aforementioned fee. Without that thin, green piece of paper that signifies your intention of receiving a diploma, you won't get one. They'll not order a diploma for you, and your name will be removed from the list of graduating seniors.

THIS EXTENSION of the original fee deadline gives you expectant seniors until this coming Friday to fee up and get out. The original deadline expired last week? According to the office issuing the statement, about half of the graduating FSU seniors would have been "almost" graduated if the original deadline had been adhered to.

I fully expect that the recent unveiling of the chisled motto at the entrance of Westcott Castle will give added impetus to those seniors dragging their heels. Someone cut away the ivy and lo! there appeared the elongated spelling of FSCW. the I told you so feeling of panic at the sight of the dreaded letters may help forgetful seniors remember where they've been these last several years, and reaffirm their determination for termination.

HOW MACABRE it would be to sit, smiling, waiting in vain for the presentation of the diploma that never comes, mainly because it was never ordered. There you are, all capped, gowned, tasseled, and maybe even freshly shaved, with relatives reverently ready to rend the skies in exaultation. There you sit, all afternoon, all night, the next day, and for days after that. Your classmates have departed, diplomas clutched in their callousad palms.

The dignataries have gone home to more tired beds. Your family and friends stick around with you for a few hours, cussing the [illegible] university and hoping [illegible] crazy that this is the [illegible] trar's idea of a practical [illegible] Don't be too crestfallen [illegible] when they begin to pet [illegible] with rocks and [illegible] ties. Remember, this is [illegible] amount to being left [illegible] alter. Your family will [illegible] that's wrung with you.

You can take it all casually and even sense a [illegible] of pleasure as the [illegible] seeing your picture once [illegible] in Tally-Ho. You might [illegible] go to work for that [illegible] publication . . . considering [illegible] fact that they need salesmen and are located on the [illegible] floor of Longmire, far [illegible] the haunts of anybody [illegible] might know, and who might [illegible] interested in why you're hanging around [illegible] John, have you filed a [illegible] stead exemption?

YOU COULD STAY on [illegible] chance your fiesta [illegible] go for a degree in [illegible] Fly-Casting. You could [illegible] part yourself with a [illegible] concession on the [illegible] route from Longmire [illegible] library, for now your [illegible] ents will have cut the [illegible] cord. You might even [illegible] punching somebody in [illegible] nose, but that's not a [illegible] good idea. Chances are [illegible] bigger and meaner than [illegible] You might stay on and [illegible] a student office and get [illegible] ass by having your [illegible] plastered all over [illegible] Then you'd get [illegible] Who's Whose and [illegible] property disputes forever.

But mostly you can [illegible] all the fever of worry and [illegible] up your diploma fee. Then [illegible] your relatives can stop [illegible] of you with your [illegible] log from the correct side [illegible] no cheating. And you can [illegible] part gloriously, to frame [illegible] diploma and tack it up [illegible] alongside your expulsion [illegible] from the DAR.

Avoid that let-down [illegible] Pay your fee, after this [illegible] only have to worry about [illegible] bread spreading and [illegible] wasted nearly fours years [illegible] to flunk you, personally.

Some Question Legality

TO THE EDITOR:

The Eichmann trial has captured the attention of many people during the past week. Those who consider themselves serious-minded have expressed grave concern about the legality of the proceedings and the precedent it is setting. As one person put it, "What is to stop the government of Ghana, for example, from dragging me off and trying me for conspiracy because I do not associate with Negroes?" Others have expressed serious concern over the psychological impetus for the trial, claiming that vengeance lies deep at the heart of the matter. Indeed, the fact that Eichmann has been placed in a bullet-proof cage indicates that belief in high tension is not the only concern of many Israelis.

AS TO THE LEGAL merits of the trial, I am not qualified. Concerning, the psychological motivations, there is no simple solution. What, you may ask, can be done under such circumstances? It is difficult for people who have been imprisoned with ideas and attitudes since early childhood, to suddenly become free. It takes time—and a climate which doesn't encourage dogma, and yet which is filled with ideas which people can accept or reject, or modify without compulsion. In such a society men like Eichmann would not become to power, with all the hate, sorrow, and vengeance that has resulted. That, I feel, is that this episode will impress on our minds the desire for a truly free society, as the which I hope will become stronger both in this nation and throughout the world.

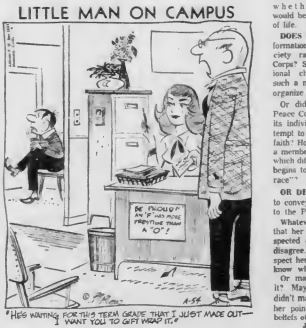
Educational TV Is Wasted Effort



TO THE EDITOR:

There is a current debate over the use of Educational TV at FSU. While at FSU I have taken two such courses. One was a TV course. The other, a classroom lecture course. In the two courses I feel that much effort TV was a complete waste of time and effort. It is therefore my opinion that instruction by a class room lecturer is infinitely superior to a TV course.

Sharp Shootin'

Optimism, But . . .

Football coach Bill Peterson is optimistic about his 1st edition of the Florida State Seminoles, but it is optimism fringed with a border of reservations.

With the great number of injuries his tribe has incurred during the 29 days of spring practice and the weaknesses the team has certain key positions. Peterson can not be blamed for not viewing the year with ecstasy.

He definitely has his share of problems.

The ends and the halfbacks are the two key offensive positions that are weak. The ends are quite young and the halfbacks lack depth.

"When I first came here, we just didn't have any ends," Peterson said. "We've gone out and recruited some fine boys but they just had time to develop."

With bull-like Tony Romeo, the flankman who made All-America during his sophomore year, graduated, Peterson has lost his top men. He still has a pair of proven performers in Bill Daniel, who has played baseball instead of football this spring, and Fred Grimes.

Grimes is going to be a real fine kid," Peterson asserted proudly. "He's good on the field and he's good scholastically." The halfbacks have a lot of desire but not the speed needed for great runners. Tom Hillabrand, Happy Fick, and Jack Council will be counted on to give the Seminoles any yardage in the mid. But their power will have to be augmented.

Florida State's pitching corps will have to do the augmenting. Peterson plans to depend heavily on his talented air corps in hopes of covering the defense loose A loose defense will give the infantry time to run.

With Eddie Feely and Ed Transeyger doing the throwing, FSU will be tough in the airlanes.

"There are not two better quarterbacks on one team in the nation" Peterson said confidently. "We are going to depend on them heavily for getting the yardage." Feely is also a capable passer on the option play and finished high in total yardage passed last season.

Fullback Is A Strong Slot

The fullback is also a strong slot—as long as Gene Roberts is well.

Last spring the giant fullback, who was red-shirted last season, has been out with an infected knee. The sophomore bull fell down during a car and scraped the skin off his knee, which became infected. Roberts is counted on to be an important ground gainer.

Roberts is not the only one injured All total, there are 14 casualties on the walking wounded list besides Roberts. This of course worries the head mentor

The first four games of the 1961 season worries Peterson even more. Florida State meets George Washington Florida, Mississippi and Georgia on their first four outings.

"George Washington was their last four games of the season last year defeating the Air Force Academy and other good squads," Peterson explained. "They had only 12 points scored on them during that period."

"Florida, Mississippi, and Georgia all have a wealth of talent," Peterson has been experimenting with his three-team system in order to come up with the best possible machine out of the talent available. During the spring practice, he has shifted the defensive unit to the first string spot, the defensive team to the second spot, and the two-way unit to the third spot.

Over all I'm optimistic about the coming season as far as the future of the boys is concerned. I know that they will be out there giving out all the time The only thing that worries me is the way the schedule is situated.'

Coaches with fewer injuries and fewer weaknesses have also been picked Florida, Mississippi, and Georgia lined up in the preseason row.

FSU Faces UM In Final Tilt Of Trip Today

Tribe Sweeps Southern

Eysaing a coveted bid to the NCAA district playoff, Florida State's baseball Seminoles wind up their vital four-game road trip in Miami today.

Ray McShane, junior lefthander who opened against Florida Southern last Friday, is scheduled to take the hill in FSU's bid to climax the trip with a victory.

Before yesterday's opening tilt, which saw control-artist Jack David take the mound in his hometown, Florida State had compiled a five game winning streak.

This stretched their season total to 16-4, which was good enough to rank the Seminoles sixth in the nation

A pair of weekend victories over Florida Southern College added the Seminoles' fourth and fifth straight victory.

FSU COMES FROM BEHIND

Florida State had to come from behind in Friday's encounter to provide the victory margin, but very nearly lost the game in a Southern uprising during the ninth.

Southern rocked McShane for three runs to the first inning to give the Moccasins a 3-0 lead. Florida State batters went to work and got the runs back, however, in the eighth inning Roger Zimmerman, FSU shortstop, blasted a two run homer to give the tribe a 5-3 lead.

McShane, who had blocked the hosts successfully after the first inning, then began to falter. Davis replaced him after a pair of Moccasins had collected singles to put the tyng run on base.

FSU's winningest pitcher ever, Frank Davis, came in to stem the tide He struck out the first batter and then allowed a single to fill the bases. A walk produced FSC's fourth run, but Davis struck out the next man with the bases loaded

FSU WINS 13-2

Belting out 18 hits, Florida State collected 13 runs to rock Florida Southern 13-2 in Saturday's tilt.

Pitcher Jim Daniel got credit for his fifth win against a single loss by spacing out 11 Moccasin hits. Daniel was never in serious trouble.

In the free-wheeling first inning, FSU collected five runs on four singles, two errors and a walk.

Top hitters leading the torrid tribe attack were Jack Doll, Bob Madison, and Doug French, who each doubled. Florida State also stole four bases during the course of the route.

G.A. HOSTS TRIBE

Florida State goes on the road again this weekend when they travel to Athens, Ga., to do battle with the University of Georgia Bulldogs. The Seminoles swept a two-game series with the Bulldogs in the season's openers March 15-16 in Tallahassee.

The final Florida State home stand will be May 8-9 when the Seminoles host Georgia Southern in a two-game series. FSU defeated Southern twice earlier on the Georgia Southern field.

The season's finale will be against Auburn at Auburn, Ala. The Tigers are one of the four teams that have managed to defeat the Seminoles this season.

'Mural Year Closes With Softball Play

As the intramural year begins to close the softball season is starting to gain full steam

The nine game season is now well under way and will continue for another two weeks. Last weeks games found KA stomping PKA 15-2, ATO edged SAE 7-3, DX walloped LXA 20-5 and KS eked out a 4-3 victory over PKP.

The intramural wrestling meet will be held May 9, 10 and 11. All are invited and urged to attend the wrestling practice sessions held on Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays at the gym.

These sessions are conducted by Budd Berringer, who won the unlimited weight division championship in Fort Lauderdale recently.

The final volleyball results found SAE cooping the championship with the Phi Delts. KA and ATO finishing after them in that order.

The intramural track meet held a couple of weeks ago found Phi Delta Theta winning another important event in the race for the intramural championship.

Linksmen Meet

Attempting to begin a new winning streak, Florida State's golf team meets Florida Southern at the Capital City Country Club at 1:00 p. m. today.

This will be Florida State's first meet since having their 16 game winning streak snapped by LSU at Baton Rouge, La.

The tribe has a 16-2 record with the only other loss being dealt by the University of Florida.

Seminoles Grab Piedmont Crown

Osteergaar Breaks Own FSU Record In Winning Shot Put

By PAM BRAY And VICKIE WARDEN
Flambeau Sports Writers

For the third consecutive year, the Florida State University tracksters ran away with team honors at the Piedmont Relays which took places at Greenville, South Carolina last Saturday.

Competing against stiff opponents, before a crowd of 2,000, the Seminoles totaled 112½ points, defeating their closest competitor Furman, who racked up 74½ points, by a wide margin Next in line in point accumulation were The Citadel with 45½, Clemson with 25, and Davidson with 23.

Track conditions were poor because of bad weather and therefore times were slow.

Scoring heaviest in the field events, the Tribesmen captured first places in the high jump, the broad jump, the discus, the 440 yard relay and the 880 yard relay. The Tribe also took second in four other relays, losing to Furman by inches in the sprint medley and the mile relay.

RECORD BROKEN

Top contenders for Florida State were team captain Don Osteergaard, a senior, who hurled the shot put 54-½ feet to break the school record which he had previously set in the Florida Relays last year and senior Steve Long who broke his own school record by executing a leap at the 6-3½ mark in the high jump.

Other individuals capturing first places for the Seminoles were Herb Kraft, jumping to the 23-½ foot mark in the broad jump; Dave Ellis clocking in at 15.4 in the high hurdles; and Jeff Clark with a 151-1 throw in the discus.

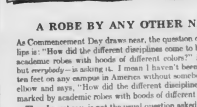
Florida State's own Craig Johnson was high point man of the day. He brought in 10 points for FSU by placing third in the 100 running a leg on the second place mile relay team, and running on both the winning 440 and 880 yard relays

TALLY WINS A'WARD

Thad Tally of Furman was given the Outstanding Athlete Award Entered in five events, he was a member of the winning two mile, mile, and sprint medley relays, ran with the second place 880 relay team and pole vaulted.

The outstanding Seminole freshman was Al Williams who broke the meet record in the shot put event though he did not set a new one

Over-all the team lived up to Coach Mike Long's expectations and gave a good account of themselves. Coach Long hopes that the cindermen will be in shape for the coming meet with the University of Florida this Friday night here in Tallahassee.



The Tribe goes into this next dual meet with a 2-1 record

Last year the Florida meet was held at Gainesville and it served as a climax for Florida State's second perfect dual meet record in three years. Also at that meet the Seminole freshmen dominated the Baby Gators.

A ROBE BY ANY OTHER NAME

As Commencement Day draws near, the question on everyone's lips is: "How did different disciplines come to be marked by academic robes with hoods of different colors?" Everybody—but everybody—is asking it. I mean I haven't been able to walk ten feet on any campus in America without somebody grabs my elbow and says, "How did the different disciplines come to be marked by academic robes with hoods of different colors, hey?"

Thus, I must say, is not the usual question asked by collegians who grab my elbow. Usually they say, "Hey, Shorty, got a Marlboro?" And this is right and proper. After all, are they not collegians, and, therefore, the nation's leaders in intelligence and discernment? And do not intelligence and discernment demand the tastiest in tobacco flavor and smoking pleasure? And does not Marlboro deliver a flavor that is uniquely satisfying, a selective filter that is easy drawing, a pack that is soft, a box that is hard? You know it!

But I digress. Back to the colored hoods of academic robes. A doctor of philosophy wears blue, a doctor of medicine wears green, a master of arts wears white, a doctor of humanities wears crimson, a master of library science wears lemon yellow. Why? Why, for example, should a master of library science wear lemon yellow?

Well sir, to answer this vexing question, we must go back to March 20, 1844. On that date the first public library in the United States was established by Ubric Sigafoos. All of Mr. Sigafoos's neighbors were of course wildly grateful—all, that is, except West Todhunter.

Mr. Todhunter had hated Mr. Sigafoos since 1822 when both men had scored the beauteous Melanie Zitt and Melanie had chosen Mr. Sigafoos because she was mad for dancing and Mr. Sigafoos knew all the latest steps, like the Missouri Compromise Mambo, the Shay's Rebellion Scherzbecke, and the Jamez K. Polk Polka, while Mr. Todhunter, alas, could not dance at all owing to a wound he had received at the Battle of New Orleans. (He was struck by a falling praline.)

Consumed with jealousy at the success of Mr. Sigafoos's library, Mr. Todhunter resolved to open a competing library. This he did, but he lured not a single patron away from Mr. Sigafoos. "What has Mr. Sigafoos got that I haven't got?" Mr. Todhunter kept asking himself, and finally the answer came to him: books.

So Mr. Todhunter stocked his library with lots of dandy books and soon he was doing more business than he hated rival. But Mr. Sigafoos struck back. To regain his clientele, he began serving tea free of charge at his library every afternoon. Therupon, Mr. Todhunter, not to be outdone, began serving tea with sugar. Thereupon, Mr. Sigafoos began serving tea with sugar and cream. Thereupon, Mr. Todhunter began serving tea with sugar and cream and lemon.

Thus, of course, clinched the victory for Mr. Todhunter because he had the only lemon tree in town—in fact, in the entire state of North Dakota—and since that day lemon yellow has of course been the color on the academic robes of library science.

(Incidentally, the defeated Mr. Sigafoos packed up his library and moved to California where, alas, he failed once more. There were, to be sure, plenty of lemons to serve with his tea, but, alas, there was no cream because the cow was not introduced to California until 1931 by John Wayne.) © 1961 Max Shulman

Dean Crowns Ann Sticksel As Mrs. FSU At Dance

Mrs. Philip Sticksel was announced as the winner of the Mrs. FSU crown at a dinner dance at Morrison's Cafeteria Saturday night.

The brown eyed brunette was presented with a crown, a trophy and red roses by R. R. Oglesby, dean of students.

The coolest was sponsored by the Dames Club. Mrs. Cecil Jackson and Mrs. C. W. Cline were members of the court.

Mrs. James Hardy of the Leon High School Home Economics Dept., Major H. H. Hannah from the AFROTC, and Dr. George C. Killinger from the School of Social Welfare were judged.

The contestants were judged on homemaking ability, speaking ability, poise and personality. The 12 entries were required to submit a sample of baking or sewing and to present a two-minute talk. The three finalists were judged on beauty and poise in shorts, street wear, and evening dresses.

Mrs. Sticksel graduated from Miami University in Ohio in 1951 with a BS in education. She came to FSU in 1956 when her husband started work on his Master's degree in meteorology. She received her masters degree in education in August, 1958.

Mrs. Sticksel enjoys reading, sewing and gardening. She does the art work for her husband's meteorology seminars and helps him grade papers. Her husband is presently doing doctoral work.

Mrs. Sticksel and her husband have a four year-old daughter, Rosalyn.

The Mrs. FSU contest is the only homemaking or beauty contest Mrs. Sticksel has ever entered. She spoke of her surprise at being selected and said she was "just thrilled."

Mrs. Sticksel plans to teach after their daughter begins school and hopes to get her Doctor's degree in the future. She has taught junior and senior high school in Ohio and in Alabama.

'Little' Actor Needed For 'Monkey Trial'

No Experience

Anyone have a monkey to lend—a well trained one of the organ-grinding persuasion who can tip his hat and collect money?

The University Theatre wants one for its April 26-29 dramatic production, Inherit The Wind, based on the famous "Monkey Trial."

The monkey will have an important role in the first scene of the play, according to director Richard Fallon Inherit The Wind is based on the famed trial in Dayton, Tenn. in which Clarence Darrow and William Jennings Bryan waged a legal battle over the right of John Scopes to teach evolution in his high school classes.

An organ-grinder's monkey in the story, the little actor trips his hat and collects pennies from the crowds in a street scene. He also tugs at the pants leg of news correspondent E. K. Hornbeck's role corresponding to H. L. Mencken in the trial, played by Robin Brown.

The newsman picks up the monkey and says, "Grandpa, welcome to Hillsboro, have you come to testify for the defense or the prosecution?" The hurdy-gurdy man is played by Jerry Angeletti.

An ancient hand organ or hurdy-gurdy is also needed for the production, Fallon said.

Anyone having a monkey interested in auditioning for the role in the play or a hurdy-gurdy on hand may contact Fallon at extension 2002.

Art Symposium Is Held

The fourteenth annual art symposium held by Florida State University, the University of Florida, the University of Miami and the Ringling Museum of Art in Sarasota began at the Museum yesterday.

The symposium, which is a series of lectures and panel discussions by nationally prominent scholars for art students, was opened with a welcome address by FSU President Gordon W. Blackwell, and will last until Saturday afternoon.

Among the speakers to be heard during the week-long program are Alfred H. Barr, Jr., director of museum collections of the Museum of Modern Art in New York City; Horst W. Janson, chairman of the Fine Arts Dept. at New York University; and Dore Ashton, associate art editor of Arts and Architecture.

Bar will speak about "Art in the USSR—A Traveler's Tales", a report of his experience during three separate visits to Russia. Author of the book, Picasso-Fifty Years of His Life, Barr will also speak on "Picasso-Pillar of Tradition"

NEWSPAPER REPORT

Dr. Janoo's first address, "The Image Made by Chance" will allude to newspaper and magazine reports of "painting" by chimpanzees. His second speech will be "The Flying Figure in Art." Ashton will speak on "Myth, History and Contemporary Art."

A major exhibition of the work of artists affiliated with the Sidney Janis Gallery will be held by the Ringling Museum during the period of the symposium. Janis and Philip Guston, one of the artists represented, will be present to discuss the relationship of an art dealer with his artists and his patrons.

The last three days of the symposium will coincide with the annual meeting of the Southern College Art Conference, a group of several hundred college art teachers, of which Dr. Alfred Karl, associate professor at FSU, is president. The teachers will participate in the remaining symposium events.
